GAMBLERS TESTIFY TO ROTHSTEIN LOSS IN BIG POKER GAME

Tell Jury at McManus Trial He Gave I. O. U. for Large Sums in 'No-Limit' Play.

$219,000 DEBT BROUGHT IN

Say Defendant Was Out $51,000 —One Calls Him 'Best Loser I Ever Saw.'

DENY ANY BAD FEELING

State Outlines Case—Defense Plans to Show Rothstein Was Not Shot in McManus's Room.

A stud poker game famed in the annals of Broadway was described yesterday at the trial of George A. McManus in the Criminal Courts Building. It was this game, the State contends, which supplied the defendant with a motive for the murder of Arnold Rothstein.

A parade of players in the no-limit game filed to the witness stand before General Sessions Judge Charles C. Nott and the jury. They told their stories after the prosecution had formally opened its case, Assistant District Attorney George N. Brothers outlining what the State expected to prove.

As immobile as a mere spectator, McManus heard Mr. Brothers declare that a witness would prove that he had been in Room 349 of the Park Central Hotel on the night of Nov. 4, 1928, twenty minutes before Rothstein staggered out wounded. McManus listened impassively as the prosecutor said sounds of a quarrel in the room had been overheard—a curse, and then "bang!"

State Wants First-Degree Verdict.

The defendant's outward languor became more marked as Mr. Brothers, speaking in low-pitched tones, informed the jurors that McManus's actions after the shooting had been "suspicious." He gave no reaction as the Assistant District Attorney said the State would expect a conviction in the first degree.

McManus's wife, surrounded by his four brothers, held a similar pose. It was her first appearance at the trial. A short, slight woman in a fur coat, she occupied a seat in the second row of the public benches. She smiled several times as the defense scored points and, when her husband passed on the way to lunch, she exchanged kisses with him. Later, when the details of the game were being told, she laughed.

Even the judge laughed then. Martin (Red) Bowe, who played in the game, provoked the mirth. The gambler, who said that he had lost $5,700, which he apparently regarded as next to nothing, had been asked by Chief Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora to tell the jury just how stud was played. This plainly pained Mr. Bowe, who seemed unable to believe that the game of poker could be unknown to any one.

The witness hunched forward in his chair. A look of bewilderment was on his broad, rather humorous face. He pondered just how to explain stud to the jury, a game in which he often indulged, according to his own testimony.

"Well—I—ah, I don't know just—" he paused, and his face lighted.

"Give me a deck of cards and I'll show just how it's played," he added, spreading his hands out in an expansive gesture.

McManus threw his head back and his big frame shook with merriment. Mr. Pecora, however, managed to get the witness to tell about the game without the cards. The deck was produced later, but Judge Nott said he did not think it was needed.

Host to Players on Stand.

James Meehan, a wiry little chap, with bushy black hair and eyebrows, said the game was played in his apartment at 161 West Fifty-fourth Street. Mr. Meehan was a model of respectful attention to Mr. Pecora. He failed, however, to be a mine of information. The host to the players, who finally admitted that when he said he was a commission broker he meant he placed bets, disclosed that his interest in the play was not even academic.

He had looked "in and out" on the players, but he had been absent a great deal during the twenty-two hours when Rothstein was losing upward of $300,000, passing out I. O. Us for his losses and pocketing all the cash in the pots which he won. Mr. Meehan had gone to the baseball game on that Sunday in September a year ago. When he came back, at 6 P. M., he had gone to bed, he said.

Sam Solomon, known as Sam Baston, had not been absorbed by the poker stakes, which ranged up to bets of $5,000 on the turn of a single card. As a betting commissioner he had taken a professional interest and had watched the play for two hours. He had even put down a bet of a modest $50 "just for luck, just for

Yale Gets a Flood of 'Clues' To Whereabouts of Lost Fence

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—Telegrams from Niagara Falls, Seattle, Vassar and Wellesley Colleges and half a dozen other cities and schools, were received today by the Yale Daily News, giving alleged information regarding the missing stolen Yale fence, for which Pach Brothers, the university photographers, have a large detective force searching. The Niagara Falls message read:

"Fence seen going over the Falls. Tried to reach it with a hook but it escaped."

The Vassar telegram said that the fence had been discovered inside the big World War gun on the Vassar campus.

The detectives have investigated the senders of several telegrams and have obtained admissions that the messages were sent in response to requests from Cambridge, Mass.

One wire from Boston said that the fence would make its appearance between the halves of the Yale-Harvard football game next Saturday.

MANCUSO CHARGES QUASHED BY COURT

RIGHTS FOUND INVADED

Banton to Appeal at Once and May Go to Highest Court—Reindictment Possible.

The joint indictment against former Judge Francis X. Mancuso, chairman of the board, and six other directors of the wrecked City Trust Company has been dismissed by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins. In a decision made public yesterday he upheld demurrers to the indictment on the grounds that it was a violation of rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution. Mr. Mancuso, Anthony Di Paola, Salvatore Soraci, Leonard Rose, Isadore Siegeltuch, Frederico Ferrari and Francis S. Paterno were charged in the indictment with participation in a fraudulent insolvency of a moneyed corporation, a misdemeanor. A similar statute in Georgia has been held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, and this formed the ground for Justice Tompkins's decision.

District Attorney Banton announced that he would appeal the decision immediately to the Appellate Division, and, if an adverse ruling was handed down there, would take the case to the Court of Appeals. If necessary the case may go to the United States Supreme Court for final determination. Mr. Banton believes that the proceedings in the State courts can be finished in less than six weeks, since the District Attorney's office has priority. If it becomes a question of carrying the case to the United States Supreme Court that decision may rest with Thomas C. T. Crain, who will succeed Mr. Banton on Jan. 1.

The grand jury which returned the indictment has not been discharged, but the evidence will probably not be resubmitted for superseding indictments until the appeal has been determined.

Sees His Troubles Over.

Mr. Mancuso was not concerned yesterday over the possibility of an appeal by the District Attorney. He was happy to receive the news of the decision in his favor and considers his worries over.

"I am glad to have this settled," he remarked. "Now I can devote my attention to building up my law practice."

He would make no other comment, but instead gave out a typewritten statement issued over the

Seven men, each outstanding in his particular field of endeavor, were honored last night by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York at its 161st annual dinner at the Hotel Astor. More than 1,000 persons, prominent in all walks of life, attended the dinner.

A portrait of Mr. Edison, who has been an honorary member of the chamber since 1889, was unveiled at the dinner. It will be placed in the gallery of the chamber's building at 65 Liberty Street. The portrait is the work of Ellis M. Silvette.

Introduced by Loree.

Citations were conferred upon all those honored as they were introduced to the audience by Leonor F. Loree, president of the chamber and of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, who was toastmaster.

While Mr. Edison was chosen for the honor to mark the fortieth anniversary of his membership in the chamber and the golden jubilee of the electric light, the citations conferred upon the six other men were in accordance with the practice of the chamber to honor at its annual dinner distinguished living men who have been engaged in matters of benefit to the community. Each of the men rose as his name was called and received the plaudits of the audience.

A resolution was also adopted expressing the chamber's felicitations to David B. Dearborn on his long and successful career in the business world and his continuous membership of sixty-four years in the chamber. Mr. Dearborn is the oldest member of the chamber.

Addresses were made at the dinner by Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, who discussed the recent crisis in the stock market, and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, who spoke on the advance of practical medicine through research.

Mr. Loree discussed two problems of great immediate interest to the business community of the New York district, the proposed increase of rate differentials in favor of Philadelphia and Baltimore and the action brought by New Jersey interests before the Interstate Commerce Commission to abolish free lighterage in the Port of New York.

Both these proposals, Mr. Loree said, hold serious danger to the prosperity of the metropolitan area and he appealed for the mobilization of all forces in the community to avert the peril.

Citations of Those Honored.

Following are the citations conferred upon those honored as recited by Mr. Loree in introducing the guests:

Mrs. Hoover Gets 6 Members At White House for Red Cross

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover has wired enrolment of herself, members of her family and of her servants who came from California in the Palo Alto (Cal.) Chapter of the American Red Cross.

President Hoover recently was enrolled in the Red Cross by John Barton Payne, chairman, at the White House.

Mrs. Hoover, however, sent the following telegram to Dr. Harry M. Reynolds, roll-call chairman of the Palo Alto Red Cross Chapter:

"Am sending you check for the six memberships for family and servants, and wish you all success in your drive."

26 DIE IN TIDAL WAVE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

LIST OF DEAD MAY GROW

Other Settlements Have Not Reported—Relief Rushed to Destitute Survivors.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Nov. 21.—Two hours after the earthquake felt here Monday afternoon, a tidal wave swept het southwest coast of Newfoundland over a 100-mile area, carrying away to sea dwelling houses with whole families, fish buildings containing the season's catch ready for the market and causing a loss of at least twenty-six lives, and possibly more.

Land telegraphic communications are severely interrupted and information of the disaster was obtained from a courier coming from the section for assistance to the settlements.

The government relief steamer Meigle was rushed to the scene of the disaster with medical assistance and supplies. The region affected is on the Burin Peninsula.

A message received late tonight by George J. Veitch, superintendent of the Postal Telegraph at St. John's, from Operator Cox at Burin, gives this report in detail of the damage and loss of life at all the points that have been heard from:

Lamoaline—One man, Thomas Laughler, Allansisld died of hurts. All stages and stores along the waterfront were swept away, with provisions and about one hundred tons of coal. Three dwellings and seventy other buildings are gone, with loss of eight other lives. T. J. Hipditch, Thomas Hipditch, H. P. Hipditch, E. H. Hipditch, Thomas Hillier, an oil inspector; Irene Hillier, Mrs. Eliza Walsh and Miss M. A. Walsh.

Fishing Property Lost.

Taylors Bay—Fifteen families homeless, all fishing property with provisions and coal swept away. Four persons killed, Mrs. Robert Bonnell, Bartholomew Bonnell and two children.

Lords Cove—All fishing property with provisions and coal swept away. Four lives lost, P. Rainey and three children.

Lawn—All fishing property with most of the boats and dories, provisions and coal gone. No lives lost.

St. Lawrence—No lives lost. All flakes and stores on both sides of the harbor swept away with all provisions and coal.

Corbin—Swept clean. No lives lost.

Lanceleau—One dwelling house and all fishing gear lost.

Great Burin swept. No loss of life.

Stepaside—All water-side premises gone and one dwelling house. No loss of life.

Kelly's Cove—Three dwelling houses and all fishing premises gone. Two lives lost, Mrs. Vincent Kelly and daughter.

Collins Cove, Shipcove, Burin North and Burin East—All water-side premises lost or damaged. No lives lost.

Port Aux Bras—Seven lives lost, Mrs. Thomas Fudger and three children, Henry Dibbon and sister, Mrs. Sam Bennett and Mrs. William Allan. Eleven dwelling houses, fourteen small schooners, all dories and skiffs and all water-side premises and provisions gone.

Mortier—Considerable damage on waterside premises. No loss of life.

Rock Harbor—Reported swept. No authentic news.

Premier Gets Direct Word.

A message received by Sir R. A. Squires, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, from Lamaline declared that at Point au Gault nine were either killed or drowned, six at Taylor's Bay, Fifteen families homeless, all fishing property with provisions and coal swept away. Four persons killed, Mrs. Robert Bonnell, Bartholomew Bonnell and two children.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Nov. 21.—On Monday our Ford plane, the Floyd Bennett, established a tiny base almost within the shadow of the South Pole. The Stars and Stripes fly there, 440 miles due south, and so beating by that distance the southernmost record of our flag made when Little America was established.

Such a flight over this extraordinary ice barrier, which is still to us a mysterious phenomenon, could not help be interesting. With his mapping camera Captain Ashley McKinley photographed every inch of the way and we hope that a minute study of the surface, which is full of surprises, will tell science something about this great natural wonder.

Before we start d on the flight, I told Dean Smith to deliver the mail to the mountains. We all know that an air mail pilot with mail aboard will go through when it can be done. Dean did a fine job, holding the indistinct trail made by the dog teams of the geological party.

Contrast of New and Old on Trail.

We passed the party about 200 miles out and also looked down at our comrades 2,000 feet beneath us, making only ten or fifteen miles a day where we were making 100 miles an hour.

It emphasized the great difference between the old method of polar exploration, the dog team, and the new method of aviation.

The dog team party, however, will be able to remain at the mountains several weeks, where an airplane might be blown away in a storm. That is why the minute geological investigations must be made by the foot traveler. Even now, however, we have learned enough to design a plane that we can anchor to the snow so as to defy the winds.

When the geological party looked up at us flashing by them, it must have made their objective look very far away. As we looked down on those fellows plodding along, we took off our hats to them for the energy and pluck they are putting into their task of bringing back information that will add to human knowledge.

Marvels at Passage of Crevasses.

About midway in the flight, we passed over the terrible crevassed region that the supporting party worked its way through. We could see their zigzag path as it wound in and out among bottomless crevasses and dangerous pits.

All the more we realised what a wonderful job this party did in getting through this area. The chaotic mass of criss-crossing chasms, gigantic ice blocks on end, fan-shaped cracks, wide and narrow, stretching for miles to the east and west, is entirely beyond my powers of description. We must let Mac's mapping camera tell the story.

I felt very keenly at that time the respect and admiration I have for these fellows who have laid the Grosvenor Trail on the snow, which we are trying to extend in the air.

There were, of course, a number of places where landing would have

HOOVER TO SET UP BUSINESS COUNCIL; TRUCE ON WAGES ADVISED AT PARLEYS; FORD WILL RAISE PAY OF ALL EMPLOYES

Text of Hoover's Statement on Subject of Wages As Agreed Upon in the Day's Two Conferences

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—President Hoover's statement on the subject of wages, issued today, reads as follows:

The President was authorized by the employers who were present at the morning's conference to state on their individual behalf that they will not initiate any movement for wage reduction, and it was their strong recommendation that this attitude should be pursued by the country as a whole.

They considered that, aside from the human consideration involved, the consuming power of the country will thereby be maintained.

The President was also authorized by the representatives of labor to state that in their individual views, and as their strong recommendation to the country as a whole, no movements beyond those already in negotiation should be initiated for increase of wages, and that every cooperation should be given by labor to industry in the handling of its problems.

The purpose of these declarations is to give assurance that conflicts should not occur during the present situation which will affect the continuity of work, and thus to maintain stability of employment.

Auto Maker in Stating Policy Says This Will Aid Business, Rather Than Price Cuts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Henry Ford took the centre of the stage among the industrialists who attended the President's conference today by making the statement afterward that he would increase wages of his employes.

This announcement followed the meeting of industrial chiefs, but preceded the President's announcement that employers would not initiate wage reduction and that labor would cooperate and not seek advances.

As soon as the three-hour conference of the industrial leaders with Mr. Hoover had disbanded, Mr. Ford broke through the throng in the Executive Offices and hastily stepped into his automobile, while his secretary distributed a two-page typewritten statement, in which Mr. Ford's views advocating higher wages and possible reduction in the prices of products of industry were set forth.

Some of Mr. Ford's colleagues, when informed of the contents of his statement, expressed surprise that such a personal utterance of policy should be made. They had expected enunciation of a policy representing the views of those at the conference only through President Hoover.

Mr. Ford's Statement.

Mr. Ford's statement was as follows:

"The first thing to do is to correct the impression that the present condition of affairs is due to the stock market. Collapse of speculation may have been the occasion of a business hesitation, but it certainly was not the cause.

"The stock market does not make prosperity, but prosperity is absolutely essential to such an inflation of values as we have seen during the past year. When an inflated stock market breaks, it does not necessarily carry general business down with it, but when general business declines it invariably deflates the artificial values of the stock market. That is what happened. It was only the temporary

TRADE BODY PLANS TO ATTACK PROBLEM

Barnes Announces Call for Conference in Washington Within Two Weeks.

TO LOOSE "KEY LOG OF JAM"

Business Will Be Fostered Through Organization for the Exchange of Information.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who has been asked by President Hoover to create an executive committee from the group of industrial leaders who met with the President today and from trade associations of the country, "to assist in expansion of construction and maintenance of employment," explained in an interview this evening the procedure which would be followed.

"We expect to call together as soon as practicable, possibly within two weeks, a fairly large group of trade association representatives, perhaps from 100 to 200 men," Mr. Barnes said. "They will be drawn from associations both within and without the membership of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, so that they will be broadly representative of the major phases of American business activity.

"At that meeting we hope to get a wide interchange of information as to the exact situation in business, as to its important present elements of strength and weakness. From this information it is hoped that suggestions may be made looking toward stabilization of business conditions.

"This meeting of trade association representatives will be asked to make recommendations respecting the personnel of the executive committee which the chamber has been asked to create.

"At the meeting, it is hoped that suggestions may be made with regard to courses of action which both business and government may take to sustain business through the immediate future and over a longer period.

"It is hoped that we may devise some continuing process of developing and disseminating information as to important factors in the business situation as they develop from time to time. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States will make its facilities available to the organization and will cooperate in every way possible.

"The original anxiety of American business never has been over production, but over the maintenance of buying power, which provides markets for the products of industry. That is the problem of today. Production is adequate. We want no interruption as these products go into consumption.

"We have had a curious situation, a state of mind growing out of the dislocation of security values. Even as late as October, some of our industries were having the largest month in their history. There is now no fundamental weakness and no commodity price inflation, and we have a strong banking situation, with adequate credit in sight.

"It seems to be true that every recession in the building construction industry is followed by a recession in general business. A decline in the building industry started a year ago in October. A building decline is usually caused by high money rates, such as we have experienced. These high rates have been due to a diversion of money into call loans. We have the right to think that building construction now can pick up soundly again. Funds are ready for it.

"What we hope to do first is,

LABOR CHIEFS TO LEND AID

Agree in Meeting With Hoover Not to Seek Any Further Wage Rises at Present.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—After a conference at the White House today with a notable group of captains of industry and business, President Hoover announced plans for the formation of a definite organization representing industry, trade and commerce for the mobilization of these agencies and their cooperation with the government in order to carry out his policy of stabilizing the business of the country and preventing such disturbances as have followed in the wake of the stock market dislocation.

The organization is to be conducted in line with the suggestions contained in the report of the committee on recent economic changes, extracts from which were printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES Sunday in connection with a Washington dispatch, which made known that a primary purpose of the President's conferences with representatives of business interests was the organization of a continuing body "in the nature of a permanent economic council or board, whose chief function would be to keep the country's business on an even keel."

Following the conference with industrial chiefs, the President met separately with a group of labor leaders headed by President Green of the American Federation of Labor. At the conclusion of this meeting the President announced that in the cause of stability of employment employers had agreed not to initiate wage reductions and that labor would not seek further wage increases at this time.

All for Keeping Wage Level Up.

Incident to the conference of industrial leaders with the President, Henry Ford, who attended, announced that he would give a general pay increase on a percentage basis to his employes. The manufacturer issued a statement in which he contended that "business hesitation" was not caused by the stock market collapse, but partly by "the serious withdrawal of brains from business" in order to devote attention to getting quick profits in speculation.

He held that the real need in the present situation was to increase the purchasing power of the people, and to accomplish this it was necessary either to put additional values into goods or reduce prices to the level of actual values, or by "starting a movement to increase the general wage level."

A most optimistic statement concerning the reports made to him of present and future business prospects also was issued by President Hoover after his conference with the industrial and business leaders.

One of the outstanding features of his exchange of views with this group was the general agreement that there should be no recession in wages. So universal was the agreement that Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board and formerly head of the International Harvester Company, remarked:

"It looks as if industry would have to begin scraping around to get employes instead of laying off anybody."

The laugh that greeted Mr. Legge's remark was indicative of the good feeling and cheerful view as to the country's business structure prevailing at the conference.

The statements of heads of great industrial and business concerns in their conference with President Hoover emphasized that there were no weaknesses in the present situation. As one of these present expressed it, existing conditions were chiefly psychological and business, which on previous similar occasions had shown great vitality, was in a position to stage a dramatic comeback.

Hoover's Statement on Business.

The statement issued at the White House on the conference with the business leaders reads:

The conference this morning of twenty-two industrial and business leaders warmly endorsed the Presi-

Retail Zone Extended in Park Av. to 57th St.; $12,000,000 Rise in Property Value Expected

The new midtown retail district was extended to include both sides of Park Avenue seven blocks northward, from Fiftieth to Fifty-seventh Street, and for a distance of 100 feet east and west of the avenue by action yesterday of the Board of Estimate.

Of the $47,000,000 of property included in the area affected, according to assessed valuations, about $30,000,000 is under the control of either the New York Central Railroad Company or the interests represented by Robert Walton Goelet of Newport, R. I. They took a leading part in the petition seeking the change, which is expected by realty experts to enhance values at least $12,000,000 within the area involved.

The zoning resolution yesterday was adopted over the opposition of Borough President Julius Miller of Manhattan and Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee. Mr. McKee was recorded as not voting. Mayor Walker, who advocated the change, had the support of eleven votes of the sixteen in the entire Board of Estimate. Nine would have been enough, as the resolution yesterday was on the calendar for the second time. It had failed of passage a week ago because Mr. McKee was absent and Mr. Miller refrained from voting. It then lacked one of the twelve votes required for adoption of such a resolution on a first calendar call.

More than 90 per cent of the property owners in the affected area had petitioned for the change. They were represented by Benjamin E. Schreiber, who was recently campaign manager for Mayor Walker, and by several other attorneys.

The only active opposition to the rezoning plan was voiced by Clarence D. Bernheimer, as attorney for the Drake Hotel, at Park Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street. Counsel for the Park Avenue Association, which heretofore has fought against proposed encroachments upon the residential character of Park Avenue, was present, but took no active part in the discussion.

Failing to Report Liquor in Friend's Home Is Held Felony by Federal Judge in Illinois

By The Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 21.—Any person who buys a drink of liquor or known of a friend, neighbor or relative who possesses liquor for beverage purposes is a felon unless he reports his knowledge to the government, Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry declared today in an opinion upholding the constitutionality of the Jones law.

In the opinion on a question raised in the prosecution of Bertley Smith for an alleged sale of liquor in 1927, the court said:

"Manufacture, sale and transportation of liquor, heretofore a misdemeanor, is now a felony. By an act passed by Congress in 1930 any one knowing that a felony is being committed and who does not make proper report of the matter is a felon himself, subject to the same punishment.

"Any person who buys a drink of liquor from a bootlegger and does not make a report of the matter to the authorities has committed a felony and is equally guilty as the person making the sale. Any one who knows that a neighbor, friend or relative possesses liquor for beverage purposes and does not report it to officers of the United States, is a felon.

"Whether it is wisdom to make this change, which makes thousands, perhaps millions, of persons felons, or whether it is constitutional is quite a different thing. The new law operates entirely outside and beyond the national prohibition act."

Attorneys representing Smith contended that the Jones act was unconstitutional, chiefly because it transferred from the jury to the judge the power to fix the degree of guilt.

The court overruled them on the question.

dent's statement of last Saturday as to steps to be taken in the progress of business and the maintenance of employment.

The general situation was thoroughly canvassed, and it was the unanimous opinion of the conference that there was no reason why business should not be carried on as usual; that construction work should be expanded in every prudent direction, both public and private, so as to cover any slack of unemployment.

It was found that a preliminary examination of a number of industries indicated that construction activities can, in 1930, be expanded even over 1929.

It was stated, for instance, that the telephone company was proposing to assist by a considerable expansion in their construction and betterment program over the year 1929, during which year this company expended something in the neighborhood of $800,000,000 for this purpose.

It appeared that the power, gas and other public utilities could undertake a program in excess of 1929, the details of which would be developed at a special meeting of the leaders in the industry to be called, after which the program would be announced.

Auto Men Tell of Conditions.

The leaders in the automobile industry expressed the opinion that whereas, in 1928, production was unusually large due to the carry-over of a great deal of unfinished business from the previous year, they confidently expected that except for this excessive margin, the industry should quickly return to its normal production.

In the steel industry it was stated that large construction programs would be undertaken for replacement of antiquated and obsolete plants.

It was considered that the absorption of capital in loans on the stock market had postponed much construction, and that the flow of this capital back to industry and commerce would now assist renewed construction.

It was the opinion that an indirect but very substantial contribution could be made to the extension of credit for local building purposes and for conduct of smaller business if the banks would freely avail themselves of the rediscount privilege offered by the Federal Reserve banks.

The meeting considered it was desirable that some definite organization should be established under a committee representing the different industries and sections of the business community, which would undertake to follow up the President's program in the different industries.

It was considered that the development of cooperative spirit and responsibility in the American business world was such that the business of the country itself could and should assume the responsibility for the mobilization of the industrial and commercial agencies to these ends, and to cooperate with the governmental agencies.

The members of the group agreed to act as a temporary advisory committee with the Secretary of Commerce, who was authorized to add to the committee. Mr. Julius Barnes, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, was asked to create an executive committee from members of this group and the various trade organizations, who could assist in expansion of construction and maintenance of employment. A definite canvass will be made of the different industrial fields to develop the amount of such construction.

While the industrial and business group which met the President will be the nucleus of the new continuing organization of all branches of business in cooperation with the government, there will be no government control; the organization will keep in touch with governmental agencies, however, to carry out its set purpose of keeping business always on an even keel.

Where governmental sanction is required for certain projects, such as hydro-electric power development, the continuing organization will make representations to the Federal Power Commission intended to expedite the granting of permits. It is designed also to have prosperous business take care of weak spots in the business structure.

The plan is understood to have been in President Hoover's mind for a long time, and the necessity of putting it into effect was emphasized by the suggestions of the committee on recent economic changes, which was the outgrowth of the unemployment conference held under his chairmanship in 1921, when Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce.

Barnes to Create a Committee.

Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was named by President Hoover to create an executive committee from members of the industrial and business group and trade organizations, which, as the President expressed it in a statement, "could assist in expansion of construction and maintenance of employment."

Mr. Barnes will call a meeting within about ten days of 150 to 200 representatives of the largest trade organizations. This meeting will organize the continuing body which will begin without delay on a survey of business and employment.

The expectation is that the survey will take about three months. The opinion was expressed by those who approve this procedure that it was evident the country would not suffer any severe business setbacks in three months, and that when the survey was made available the foundation would be laid for keeping it on an even keel hereafter under the permanent stabilizing procedure which is hoped for under the plan initiated by the President today.

Conference at Cabinet Table.

When the industrial and business chiefs sat down with President Hoover around the Cabinet table at the Executive Office Building this morning the general sentiment expressed was that nothing in the situation called for any reduction in wages. The discussion that followed brought the general agreement that wages should not be curtailed in any way.

The conferees authorized the President to say to the representatives of organized labor when he conferred with them this afternoon that they would not initiate any movement for wage reduction, and that they strongly recommended that employers throughout the country should follow that course. One of the things most emphasized by the industrialists was the necessity for easy credits.

Set Forth State of Business.

For the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, President Gifford reported that it was expending $618,000,000 this year and would expend $700,000,000 in 1930.

Representing the Department store interests, Percy Straus of Macy & Co. of New York said his business was in excellent shape. There had been wild rumors that Macy & Co. had laid off 6,000 employes, but nothing was further from the truth, he added, because, instead of reducing its force of 12,000, the company had actually added several hundred.

Representatives of the motor-car industry explained that while the 1929 production was very great because much unfinished business was carried over from 1928, they were sure that production would grow normally at such a rate that the high peaks of automobile production in recent years would become normal production two or three years hence. Next year, they told the President, would see a normal production maintained.

It was stressed that there was to be a boom in shipbuilding which would help the steel industry.

Representatives of the oil industry reported that their business was better than it had been for the last year and a half, and they were going ahead with plans for expansion.

The business of manufacturers of electric machinery was lagging to some degree because of the slowing up of public utility extensions, but these manufacturers were convinced that it would pick up as soon as the utility interests put their development plans into effect.

Signs in the Building Slump.

One of those present said that after scrutinizing the building construction situation carefully he had found that all business recessions have been preceded by a slump in building of from ten to twelve months. It was agreed that his study had been accurate with reference to the present situation.

With reference to agricultural machinery, it was predicted that next year's business would be equally as good as during this year.

For the steel industry the report was made that its expenditures next year will be larger than this year.

Representatives of the public utilities interests gave assurances that their program of expending $850,000,000 on development and extensions would be put into effect without delay.

When President Hoover asked for opinions as to the formation of the continuing organization to keep business on an even keel, he found the conference was in accord with his plan. Approval was expressed of the recommendations made by the committee on recent economic changes, in connection with the indications that the proposed organization would be guided by the committee's views.

The conference agreed when the President asked for opinions as to whether the United States Chamber of Commerce was the proper body to form the continuing organization.

Philip H. Gadsden of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and Ernest T. Trigg, chairman of the industrial relations committee of that body, told the conference that a "prosperity reserve pool" of work to meet the needs of the present situation was already under way in that city.

Mr. Trigg stated that Mayor Mackey and the public school officials were ready to release about $65,000,000 of construction work to give employment to thousands of workers over a period of eighteen months. A meeting will be held soon, he said, with the Governor of Pennsylvania and other officials to develop a state-wide program for the release of construction work.

Mr. Gadsden presented to the conference the following statements by business leaders:

George F. Houston, president Baldwin Locomotive Works—We are extremely optimistic about the railway equipment situation for next year, provided, however, interest rates on equipment trust notes can be stabilized quickly. So far as our own business is concerned, we did a big business last month, and have enough work to keep us going at high speed for several months, while there is much business in prospect.

A. C. Dorrance, vice president Campbell Soup Company—Our employment is uninterrupted. The present situation has had no material effect on us. Orders have been only slightly less in recent weeks, but that is merely due to wholesalers keeping down stocks slightly. We are going ahead with large expansion and construction projects without delay, confident that prosperity will continue uninterrupted.

James W. Rawle, vice president J. G. Brill Company—Mr. Hoover is to be highly commended for his action. It is well-timed and designed to restore a feeling of security to the business mind. We are optimistic about the situation, and do not believe the financial flurry will affect general business. We are continuing with our expansion programs, and we have had no bad reaction from any one with whom we have business contacts. Our employment is normal for this time of year, with good business on the books.

Predicts More Names on Payroll.

Edward G. Budd, president Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Company, makers of auto bodies—Our company is in exactly the position we planned for it last July. We have started production of Ford and Dodge bodies, to begin going to them in December for the new cars. Our employment will steadily increase, and we have the same number as this time last year.

George Y. MacKinnon, president John B. Stetson Company, hat manufacturers—Do not believe the present situation will have any effect upon our business. The second half of our year, just completed, was the best we have had. We have seen no signs of any falling of orders, or any cancellations. We are expanding our business and diversifying our products and are increasing our plant facilities and personnel. We expect a good business next year.

H. T. Herr, vice president Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company—There has been no material effect upon our business. We are quite busy and will be next year. We have plenty of business on the books and no cancellations. Everything looks to be in good shape.

Mr. Legge, president of the Farm Board; Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company; A. W. Shaw of Chicago and Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, participated in the conference in addition to those previously announced.

Join the President at Luncheon.

Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Company, and Clarence M. Woolley of the American Radiator Company joined the President at luncheon.

When Mr. Young was told of Mr. Ford's early statement containing the suggestion of decreased commodity prices and higher wages, he declined to comment. Neither would he discuss the action of the conference.

"This is a matter for the President to talk about in a formal statement," he said.

George Laughlin, steel manufacturer, of Pittsburgh, said that he could only speak for his own activities.

"Our business, while slightly decreased, now promises to be as good next year as at present," he said. "We will continue in about the same percentage of employment with no reduction in wages."

Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, who arrived at the conference late, was the last to leave. He lingered behind and talked for more than five minutes with the President after the others had departed.

"I can only speak for my own business, and will say nothing about the conference," he said. "Our business is as good now as at any time this year. There are a few bad spots, but no real slowing up. Where there is a loss in one section, it is made up in increased purchases from other sections of the country.

"The West is in very good condition. We have no large surplus on our shelves or in our warehouses. I am no prophet and will make no prediction as to the future. But I have nothing but optimism for next year."

Greater Buying Among Farmers.

Mr. Legge said that there was greater buying among the farmers and improved conditions in the West, with increased sales of farming implements in sections where buying of late years has not been so brisk.

"The farmer's condition has been showing a slight improvement," he said. "He has a more hopeful feeling.

"If the stock market deflation does not extend to commodity prices, the farmer should not be hurt. The decline in live stock prices has caused losses to the farmer, but has not affected the country at large. Wheat has been going up and down, but the fluctuation in prices has not been large.

"All of us are hoping the stock market crisis will not have a lasting effect on either the farmers or industry. Commodity prices were not inflated as were those of stocks; and as the former did not go up, there is no reason for them to fall.

"I do not believe the farmers will get panicky, as they are only indirectly affected. They believe the prices of agricultural products are too low, but they are not as bad as they have been at times."

Conferences will be held tomorrow afternoon with the representatives of building and construction organizations, and the last conference will be on Monday with the farm group.

The conference of utility men with the President, scheduled for next Monday afternoon, has been abandoned. Utility organizations will hold regional meetings and adopt measures to carry out the President's program for improvements and betterments.

Holds Lagging Ticker a Cause Of Break in Stock Markets

The lag of tickers behind the stock markets was one of the many causes of the recent drop in stocks, Charles P. Telman of this city, a consulting engineer, told students of the Stevens Institute of Technology yesterday. He was discussing economy of mental and physical effort through controlled attention.

"The energy which drives the stock market," Mr. Telman said, "comes in the form of orders from customers all over the United States and, in fact, the world. The market must respond at once. The sensitive member which controls the flow of this energy is the stock ticker, by which customers learn the condition of the market. Obviously, if the market was falling rapidly and no news was available for an hour or so, the customer must in many cases play safe and dump his holdings when it was perhaps unnecessary.

"There is no obvious reason for running the Stock Exchange after the ticker is appreciably late," Mr. Telman added, "any more than there is for running a steam engine with a defective governor."

MELLON TAX CUTS TOTAL TWO BILLIONS

This Includes Results of Proposed New Reduction in Rates.

REVENUE SHOWS NO DROP

Secretary Points Out That Former Cuts Brought Increased Returns to Government.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—A total deduction of nearly $2,000,000,000 in the taxes of the nation since 1921 will be accomplished if Congress adopts Secretary Mellon's recommendation that the rates on incomes for 1929 be lowered by 1 per cent.

The reductions made by Congress since Mr. Mellon took office in 1921, were through the revenue acts of 1921, 1924, 1926 and 1928. The first slash became effective in 1923 and cut $663,000,000 off the total collections.

But as the tax rates on the nation were reduced, taxable incomes increased, with corresponding benefits for the Treasury. In 1922 the total income and miscellaneous taxes collected by the government amounted to $3,197,451,063 and the next year, despite a reduction of $663,000,000, the total collected was only $87,000,000 below the 1922 figure, and included a considerable increase from some sources.

In 1926 the tax collections mounted to $2,796,179,267, and though Congress that year cut $519,000,000 of the estimated tax payments, the next year saw only a drop of $212,000,000 in the collections, which reached a total of $2,584,140,268.

Says Revenue Gains by Tax Cut.

This sum with the cut was regarded as showing an actual increase of approximately $490,000,000 from the same sources as compared with the year before.

The collections continued to mount in 1928 and 1927, showed a slight drop in 1928 and an increase of $250,000,000 in 1929, despite another tax cut that took $222,000,000 more off the total taxes.

Secretary Mellon, in recommending tax reductions to Congress, maintained that reduction in taxes invariably increased revenue and explained that this resulted from funds that were held in investment becoming active because the surtax and income tax was not so heavy. It also caused an expansion of business, he said, which increased the flow of revenue for the government.

Reduction in the government's expenditures played a great part in making tax reduction possible. These expenses have been reduced from $6,482,000,000 in 1920 to $3,843,000,000 for the fiscal year of 1929 ending last June 30.

Steady Cuts in Taxes.

The first tax reduction bill, effective in the fiscal year 1923, repealed many burdensome wartime taxes.

The government went further in 1924 and reduced the levies on small incomes, cutting the rates from 4 and 8 per cent to 2, 4 and 6 per cent, while the surtaxes were revised so that the rates ranged from 1 per cent on net incomes in excess of $10,000 to a maximum of 40 per cent on the largest incomes.

The revenue act of 1926 provided what were termed scientific reforms in the tax system. The rates on normal income were reduced from 2, 4 and 6 per cent to 1½, 3 and 5 per cent and the maximum surtax was cut from 40 per cent to 20 per cent, while the exemptions were increased to $3,500 for a married man and $1,500 for a single person. This alone freed about 2,000,000 persons from paying any taxes.

The 1926 revenue act further lifted the national tax burden by reducing the corporation tax from 13½ per cent to 12 per cent and granted additional relief to small corporations having net income of not over $25,000 by increasing the credit from $2,000 to $3,000. The excise tax on automobiles was repealed and the tax on admissions of $5 or less removed.

RAIL CHIEFS CONFER TODAY.

Meet in Chicago to Take Up Hoover Expansion Suggestion.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Detailed consideration of President Hoover's suggestions that the railroads of the country go into an expansion program in 1930 will be given at a meeting of railroad executives from all parts of the country, to be held here tomorrow.

Apparently because they are saving up what they will have to say for this conference, the presidents of some of the country's largest roads were reluctant today to discuss their individual parts in the spending of the $1,000,000,000 that was announced as the railroads' capital expansion in 1930.

J. J. Bernet, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio, said that he and his assistants felt that the announcements in Washington had properly been left to the government officials and that if there was anything further it would have to come from the conference.

Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania and its chief representative in the absence of President Atterbury, asserted that he could give no further information on the plans of his road at this time.

P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central, indicated that there would not be an appropriation by that road in 1930 for a new terminal in Chicago. Any definite figures on the road's program for next year would come later, he said.

URGES RETAIL CONFERENCE.

Arnold, Constable Head Sends Proposal in Telegram to Hoover.

In a telegram urging President Hoover to call a conference in Washington of department store and retail merchants, similar to the conferences of industrial and railroad leaders, Meyer Liberman, president of Arnold, Constable & Co., yesterday said:

"May I urge that such a conference be held under your auspices at the earliest possible moment for purpose of appealing to merchants, manufacturers and others to refrain from cancelling orders, reducing working staffs and curtailing of buying and advertising appropriations? Retail business crux of America's commercial life and cooperation of merchants of this country would go far toward re-establishing presently impaired confidence."

Mr. Liberman said, in explaining his proposal, that the retail store business affected directly and indirectly more people in the United States and involved more money than any other industry.

"Department stores and retail organizations spend millions of dollars for advertising for the sole purpose of creating the will to purchase and thus cause the will to purchase," he said. "They are therefore in a strategic position to restimulate confidence and dispel the pessimistic psychology with which the country is threatened."

URGES ADVERTISING NOW.

Earnest Elmo Calkins Suggests Aid to Hoover Business Council.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A recommendation that advertising men be included in the business stabilizing council to be formed, at President Hoover's request, by Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is made in a letter to Mr. Barnes from Earnest Elmo Calkins of New York.

The letter, made public here tonight, stated:

"We are dealing with that strange force, mob psychology. Already a tremendous whispering campaign is under way. People are telling each other stories of the aftermath of the slump—losses, suicides, unemployment, cancellations—and these stories are grossly exaggerated, like the atrocities of the late war.

"It is peculiarly and emphatically an advertising situation. It was a state of mind that pushed stocks up beyond reasonable levels. It was a state of mind that pulled them down. And it will be a state of mind if the country goes steadily on unmoved by the comparatively small and isolated happenings on the Stock Exchange. And states of mind are the product of advertising as well as, or even more than, of newspaper publicity."

WAGNER PROJECTS EMPLOYMENT AID

Senator, in Radio Address, Urges an Economic Survey and Government Building Program.

ASKS FEDERAL STABILIZER

He Will Press Bill in Congress for a Bureau to Keep a Close Check on Conditions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Plans for solving the problem of unemployment were presented in a radio speech tonight by Senator Wagner of New York, who has had this subject under study for some months.

He urged principally an economic survey to determine whether business would be in good or bad condition in a coming season, and also that the government lay out a program of public works long in advance, so that workmen might know what was in prospect.

"It is necessary that we have very precise information and statistics to enable us to make reasonable forecasts whether during an approaching season private enterprise will be active or inactive," Senator Wagner said.

"When the factories have already shut their doors and millions of unemployed tramp the streets in search of work it is too late to apply any but emergency measures.

"It is necessary that the plans of the various government projects be drawn and approved long in advance so that work may start at a moment's notice and without the loss of months of valuable time during which a mild recession in employment might develop into a panic."

He listed steps to put a long-range plan in operation as follows:

"First—It is necessary to secure statistics of business, of construction, of employment and unemployment, that are far more precise than those we now possess.

"Second—The plans should be drawn, surveys made, engineering problems solved for every government project long in advance.

"Third—At least in the Federal Government there must be a permanent agency specially charged with the responsibility of stabilizing employment.

"Fourth—It is essential that the Federal, State and Municipal Governments cooperate.

"At the present time there is no room for political division on the question of making sure that we shall not have a spell of unemployment during the coming Winter. The problem far transcends in importance any political consideration.

"The President has embarked upon a program and has called a conference of business leaders to assist him in its execution. If effectively prosecuted it will have my unconditional support.

"I shall at the same time do my best to keep before Congress and the country the necessity of passing the legislation which I have introduced and of creating a permanent agency organized and equipped to bring about a continuous adjustment in industrial activity through the stabilization efforts of the government."

LAUDS HOOVER CONFERENCE

Savings Bank Leader Calls It Constructive Move.

President Hoover's economic conference at Washington is one of the most constructive moves ever made by a national administration in behalf of sound business, Dan V. Stephens, president of the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers' Association, said here yesterday.

"Whatever happened to quoted values in the stock market," Mr. Stephens said, "the facts are unaltered that this nation's actual wealth is unaffected, that there is still as great a volume of basic production and trade as is required by our people in their daily lives, and that our economic means for carrying on these functions are as sound and vigorous as at any time in our history. The President's conferences are valuable in focusing public attention on these facts."

FORD'S WAGE RISE COMES AS SURPRISE

diversion of business men's attention that prevented them from seeing what was happening.

It is now clear to all that the real explanation of the present situation is not to be found in recent stock market history, but in recent business history. Let the public understand that the stock market cannot permanently affect us either for good or bad, and the way is cleared for constructive views.

Business showed some declines even while speculative values were at their height, and the reasons are plain. First, there was a serious withdrawal of brains from business. Men who would otherwise have been working out better designs for commodities and better methods of manufacture and planning to put more value into their products, were drawn off from the work they were best fitted to do by the promise of quick profits in speculation. This was more serious for business than most people are likely to realize. I have often said that we need the experience and judgment of men in middle age or older, and when this is withdrawn for a time, business feels it.

Another reason is that American production had come to equal and to surpass not our people's power to consume but their power to purchase. This is not the same thing as over-production of goods; it is under-supply of purchasing power.

Wants Purchasing Power Increased.

Over-production can never occur until every need is supplied, but the first need is the need of money. Money in the people's hands represents purchasing power. In this country the purchasing power of the people has been practically used up and still they have not been able to buy all that they must have. I therefore suggest the need of increasing the purchasing power of our principal customers—the American people.

This may be done in two ways. First, by putting additional value into goods or reducing prices to the level of actual values and, second, starting a movement to increase the general wage level. Nearly everything in this country is the high priced. The only thing that should be high priced in this country is the man who works. Wages must not come down, they must not even stay on their present level; they must go up.

And even that is not sufficient of itself—we must see to it that the increased wages are not taken away from our people by increased prices that do not represent increased values. The country gains no benefit by letting the workingman earn an extra hundred dollars and then taking it away from him again in increased rents and a rise in prices generally. To make wages better and keep prices down requires that business men come back into business—as many are doing since the stocks came down.

There is no startling, miraculous plan of recovery and advance; it is all as plain and familiar as a copybook maxim. The situation promises much better than it did a year ago. We were on the threshold of a necessary change anyhow and if some men stumbled when they crossed it, it was only because their eyes were elsewhere. A year ago the country was expecting something to happen; now that it is over and past, the road ahead is clear.

President Hoover's call for a conference has had the beneficent effect of focusing our eyes on the main question. The President will be able to show the country that there is nothing to fear and that if every one will attend to his own work, the future is secure.

Tells Hoover of His Plan.

Mr. Ford returned to the White House two hours after the conference broke up and supplemented his earlier statement with the concrete announcement that he had already planned an increase for his employees, and that general wage advances would be made very soon. He again sought the President, explained the contents of his formal statement and informed him of his plans.

As he left the Executive Offices the second time, Mr. Ford said:

"We will announce a general wage increase in our plants very shortly. It will be a percentage increase based on the class of employment. I am unable to give figures as to the exact amount of the increases as the details are now being worked out."

Mr. Ford said that the increase probably would go into effect by Dec. 1, and would not only affect plants in the United States but those in Canada.

The wage question was thoroughly discussed by the industrial leaders in the conference as a chief issue. Some of them, it was said, declared that it would be very difficult for them to keep up the present wages and maintain the relative labor enrolment.

It is said that Mr. Ford did not inform the conference of his plans to advance wages. Indeed, those in the conference are said to have accepted general acquiescence in the plans of carrying on as at present without disturbing the wage scale.

Secretary of Labor Davis, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, expressed surprise, when told at the end of their conference with the President, of the Ford announcement.

They said that the matter did not appear in the discussion, and that they could not believe that Mr. Ford had decided to advance his wages at this time, but all added that they were happy that he was able to do so.

Ford Wired Decision to Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 21 (AP).—The increase in wages for Ford employes which Henry Ford announced at Washington today soon would be made effective, has been under consideration for several weeks, it was said at the motor company's offices here today. It was indicated, however, that the announcement had not been expected at this time.

Almost at the same moment the announcement was made public at the capital Mr. Ford wired his offices here that he decided to give out his statement.

The details of the increase, its amount and its extent, will be worked out by Henry Ford and his son Edsel, who is president of the Ford Motor Company.

"They will get together shortly," said one official at the executive office, "and a specific announcement will be forthcoming soon."

As to how widespread the wage increase might be, it was pointed out that "such increase anyway have applied to all Ford employes throughout the country, so there is no reason to believe this one will be restricted to any group."

A minimum wage in the Ford organization of $5 a day was established by Henry Ford in 1914. His philosophy that lower price levels and higher wages are the greatest stimuli to good business is well known in industrial circles. This philosophy had one of its best-remembered expressions in 1921, sometimes called the leanest year in the automobile industry. In the face of a slackening demand for the product of the industry, the Ford company made a sharp reduction in prices and effected production economies which Mr. Ford believed to be essential to a continuance of the wage level established a short time previously.

through mutual confidence and by exchange of information of purposes, to disprove inaccurate and disturbing rumors.

"A day or two ago when I took the train for Washington, I heard that Macy & Co. had laid off 1,600 employes. Mr. Straus, at today's conference, told me that last week they laid off twenty-eight and added 200 employes, which illustrates the inaccuracy of most of the rumors you get today.

"We need to find the key log in a jam. If you can focus your attention on it and get it, you can go ahead. If the utility industry, which has plans for a thousand million dollars for improvements, feels that money is to be obtainable at reasonable rates it will enlarge its plants and place orders for electrical equipment and if the electrical equipment companies feel this business coming in, they will order more copper and this stimulates the copper business. And so it goes.

"The President's statement gives a very encouraging picture of industry, and it is true. The whole problem is not to start the machine, but to preserve the momentum that is here. In furtherance of that, and at the suggestion of the President and as approved at the conference this morning and by the railroad executives on Monday, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will call a conference in Washington in the near future of the representative trade associations of the country, a conference not unwieldy in size.

"This conference will furnish certain information, from which we will endeavor to determine where the key logs are located and take them out by cooperation with all the industries and with agencies of the government. If we can loosen the key logs the flow of ordinary business will float down the river.

"This may grow into a continuing study. The usual conference resolves and goes home, but this may grow into an established machinery to preserve the balance of American business.

"Some of the weak spots in American industry are surprising. One of these is the shipbuilding industry, which is putting old yards in shape and preparing to care for increased production. The oil industry, through voluntary agreements, is in much better shape. The textiles, which were badly hit, are in somewhat better position. The coal industry has improved.

"When the McNary-Haugen bill was first proposed to help bring the index price of agricultural products up to an equivalent of the industrial price index, the agricultural price index was 120, as against 160 for industry; whereas now the agricultural index is 146, against 138 for industry."

Mr. Barnes said that among the government agencies the committee would have contact with in working out the problems were the Federal Reserve Board, the Inter-state Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission, which would be in a position to aid in a general plan to stabilize conditions.

He asserted that the Federal Reserve System was an important factor in preserving the relatively easy credit conditions which were essential for progress in the construction industry.

SCHROEDER WRECKS HIS PLANE IN A TEST

Left Aileron Jams and He Falls at Mitchel Field, Smashing Safety Contest Craft.

REPAIRS MAY BE POSSIBLE

But Veteran Army Pilot Says He Is Out of Competition—He Was Designer of Monoplane.

Special to The New York Times.

MITCHEL FIELD, L. I., Nov. 21.—Major R. W. Schroeder, veteran army test pilot, engineer and designer, climbed into his experimental monoplane today for a series of final tests before turning it over to the Guggenheim Safe Aircraft Competition. Five minutes later he climbed out again, with the plane a wreck, the work of two years, for which thousands of dollars have been spent, a badly crippled flying machine. He took off toward New York City to test a new aileron installation, rose several hundred feet and then banked to the left. He found that he could not again raise his lowered left wing. He discovered that his rudder was of little help and that he was descending in a sharp spiral. He could not even determine where he might land with safety.

The plane was flying straight for the roof of the post hospital. Next to the hospital was a small plot of rough ground, then a high fence and, twenty feet above that, electric wires.

Schroeder could not raise the wing so he further depressed it, tightening his turn and gliding the more steeply to avoid the hospital. His wing tip almost grazed the wall of the little white building. The plane veered toward the wires and struck in the grass plot. It bounded, nosed down and turned completely over. Schroeder stepped out unhurt and when would-be rescuers arrived on the run from the hospital and the field ambulance got there he was lighting a cigar and coolly examining his wrecked flying machine.

"It looks like I'm out of the competition," he said, and then added with a grin: "Well, I set out to build a safe airplane and I'm safe even in a crash, so that's something."

The pilot had nothing to say of his years of work or of the money that went into the plane, which he designed. He supervised the salvaging, discovering that the fuselage was damaged only slightly. Both wing tips were badly crumpled, struts were bent. The engine mounted in the leading edge of the wing appeared to have escaped serious damage, but one blade of the propeller was broken off.

Schroeder appeared the least perturbed of any one. Officers at the post and competitors in the safe aircraft competition, for $150,000 in prizes were quick to express their sympathy. Roger Williams, transatlantic flier, was one who expressed his regret.

While Major Schroeder said definitely he was out of the competition because of the accident no formal resignation was received from him by the officials of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund today. They expressed the hope that repairs might be made in time to permit the Schroeder entry to be flown with the other eight planes now at the field.

This plane arrived from Hammondsport, N. Y., early in October. It had never been flown and Major Schroeder made his first flight about two weeks ago. Since then he has been making adjustments and testing the intricate machinery for changing the camber of the big wing.

THE "MYSTERY PLANE" BUILT FOR LINDBERGH'S USE.

The Monoplane at the Lockheed Factory in Los Angeles, Ready for the Flying Colonel.

Preliminary tests at Los Angeles of the "mystery plane" built for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's private use, which has been completed at the Lockheed factory there, have indicated a high degree of manoeuvreability as well as a top speed said to be 190 miles an hour. The big plane is a low wing monoplane, fully streamlined in design, and is powered with the new Wasp motor of 450 horsepower.

The engine is housed in by the N. A. C. A. cowling, a device perfected by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, in an effort to reduce head resistance and increase speed. Similar cowling was used on the Lockheed Air Express with which Captain Frank M. Hawks broke the transcontinental record last Summer. This was the plane borrowed by Colonel Lindbergh for his fast flight to New Mexico in search of the wrecked City of San Francisco.

The Colonel's new plane is an open cockpit, two-place type, painted red and with a line of contrasting color down the fuselage. The resistance of the landing gear is cut down by the use of "pants" or metal housings.

COSTE SETS RECORD FLYING FROM HANOI

STORM DELAYED FLIGHT

By P. J. PHILIP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The scarlet color of the airplane of Captain Dieudonné Coste nearly led to disaster, for the Manchurians believed that it must be a Bolshevik plane, and only the happy accident that Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang was playing golf with the British Consul at Mukden brought salvation, according to the story told by the French airman on his return today to Le Bourget from his record distance flight from Paris to Manchuria of September.

Captain Coste and Maurice Bellonte dropped down on the home port at Le Bourget at 11:40 o'clock this morning, having taken an early breakfast at Rome, and so completed their return from Indo-China in four and a half days—a time which would have been shortened by twenty-four hours but for a tempest in the Mediterranean, which compelled halts at Athens and Rome.

Every one at Le Bourget wanted to know what had happened during those days at the beginning of October when no news reached anxious Paris, though it was known the two airmen had crossed the region of Lake Baikal in the centre of Siberia.

Landed to Get Gasoline.

Captain Coste's tale was one of most curious adventure, told with humor. He had started off with Maurice Bellonte from Le Bourget at 8 A. M. on Sept. 27, and their flight lasted 51 hours 39 minutes. They still had gasoline sufficient for two and a half hours' flight in their Breguet plane, but their second night was beginning, and when they saw some flat land near a little range of hills, Captain Coste decided to land.

"There was a kind of fortified farm near there," Captain Coste said, "and leaving the plane, we walked toward it. We were received with great kindness and, as snow had begun to fall, we were immensely grateful to take our places with the rest of the inhabitants of the farm and to sleep in our clothes round the big fire.

"Next day we went to a near-by village and tried to get gasoline, but all they had to offer us would scarcely have burned in a lamp. On the way back we were overtaken by Chinese police, who wanted to see our passports. They were friendly enough, but when they saw the scarlet plane they became suspicious that we were Bolsheviki.

"With them we went to Tsitsihar, a three days' walk, leaving our plane guarded by friendly Russians. That walk was no pleasure. We had to cross swamps and rivers, and half the time it snowed. From Tsitsihar a telegram was sent to Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang but we waited for two days without getting a reply. It was only later that we learned what had happened. The telegram had added that we were surely Bolsheviki because our plane was red.

"We were in a fever of impatience and had begun to despair of ever getting out. Five days passed. Then the Prefect of the town came to us all smiles and helpfulness. The Marshal had been playing golf with the English Consul at Mukden and had told him the story of how two airmen who said they were French had landed near Tsitsihar. Their game was interrupted while the Consul and the Marshal sent telegrams everywhere, for the former had already been trying for three days to locate us.

Natives Showed Kindness.

"A caravan to carry 200 litres of gasoline was organized. We had two autos and three wagons, each drawn by seven horses. Both autos and two wagons stuck in the mud, and it was finally with man power that we succeeded in getting the gasoline to the plane."

Captain Coste and his partner flew from Mukden to Hanoi, where they were delayed many weeks waiting for authorization to cross the various countries on the southern return route. When they left Hanoi on Sunday morning it was raining in torrents, and they never saw ground until they neared Calcutta.

From there, after a few hours' halt, they flew to Karachi and loaded up with sufficient gasoline to take them to Aleppo. They had hoped to fly from there direct to Paris, but a tempest in the Eastern Mediterranean forced them to turn back to Athens and to make a short flight to Rome.

Even with these delays Captain Coste beat his own previous record of 4 days 18 hours from the furthest corner of Asia to Paris by seven hours. Officially the distance which he flew without stopping on his outward flight will be about 7,852 kilometers (about 4,907 miles), but, owing to various detours he was forced to make, he actually covered about 9,000 kilometers (about 5,625 miles).

Physician Flies 1,000 Miles To Fight West Indies Epidemic

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 21.—A flight of almost 2,000 miles to carry medical aid from Trinidad to Antigua ended this afternoon with the return of an American plane here after the pilot had landed Dr. J. J. Pawan, bacteriologist of the Trinidad Government, on the island of St. Kitts.

The plane did not go to Antigua for fear of being quarantined, and Dr. Pawan hoped to reach that island, 100 miles distant, by sail or steamer tonight.

Pilot Brooke said Trinidad officials had not announced the name of the disease, which is reported to have caused hundreds of deaths in Antigua. Dr. Pawan carried laboratory equipment and guinea pigs for determining the nature of the disease.

OUT AS AIR POLICEMAN, WILL CONTINUE TO FLY

Wandling to Be a Private Student —Whalen Says Rest of Class Is Growing Proficient.

Patrolman George Wandling, who was dropped from the flying class of the Police Department at Roosevelt Field on Tuesday, will continue to fly, it was revealed yesterday when he enrolled with the Roosevelt Field school as a private student.

A letter concerning the dropping of the five policemen from the class and their return to regular duty was received by Rodman Wanamaker 2d from F. Ray Cullman, chief instructor at the school, and was forwarded to Commissioner Whalen. It said in part:

"The duties of an organization such as is contemplated for air police work for so great a city as New York are at times likely to be difficult and arduous. Its pilot personnel should consequently be of an exceptionally high order, skilled, intelligent and resourceful beyond the average. Thorough training is essential to the development of such personnel, and the material furnished us to work with is of great importance."

Commissioner Whalen said yesterday that the rest of the class would continue training, that most of them had arrived at the solo stage in their instruction, and that as soon as they became proficient they would receive instruction in planes of the navy observation type, which the Police Department intends using with amphibian landing gear. The commissioner did not say whether Wandling would be taken back into the special service if he should qualify on his own time.

IRISH MINISTER SCORES SYSTEM OF APPEALS

Blythe Says Recourse to Privy Council Is Dead—Dominion Experts Plan Change.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—Ernest Blythe, Free State Minister of Finance, made a slashing attack in the Senate late last night on the system of appeals from the Supreme Court of the Free State to the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

"An appeal from the dominions is dead, so far as we are concerned," Mr. Blythe exclaimed.

The right of appeal is embodied in Article 66 of the Free State Constitution, but the government is determined to abolish it.

Dominion legal experts who have been meeting in London have decided that the present system of appeals to the Privy Council is out of date, and must be replaced by a new one. Recommendation on the subject will be made by the experts to the next imperial conference, according to Arthur Ponsonby, Under-Secretary of State for the Dominions, who told your correspondent tonight that no definite proposals have yet been formulated.

The conference of dominion constitutional lawyers has been in session here for several weeks in an effort to bring the Dominions' laws into line with their new independent status in the British Commonwealth.

Compensation Inquiry Set.

Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo announced yesterday that on Dec. 2 he would begin an inquiry into reports received by State's Attorney General Hamilton Ward that many employers in this city are not complying with the truckmen's compensation law by providing insurance for workers. The magistrate issued ten summonses for persons who are to be interrogated at the request of the Attorney General.

COBHAM WILL SURVEY CAPE TO CAIRO ROUTE

Aviator Leaves Soon for Central Africa—Hopes Entire Route Will Be Opened in the Spring.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Sir Alan Cobham, British aviator, will fly soon to Nydola in Central Africa, where he will survey landing fields on the projected Cape to Cairo air route. He will use the giant Moth air liner in which he recently made a "Lindbergh tour" of Britain and which has just been bought by the Imperial Airways Company.

Slow but steady progress is being made toward the establishment of the African air route under Imperial Airways control. Sir Alan, who has been working on the plans for almost two years, now hopes the entire route will be opened next Spring.

Instead of taking a seventeen-day sea trip London-Cape Town passengers will make the journey in eight days, flying from London to Cairo with the existing England to India air service and thence to the Central African lakes in all-metal Blackburn flying boats. The remainder of the long trip to Cape Town will be made in Handley-Page and Napier land planes.

GETS FIVE-YEAR TERM IN INVESTMENT DEALS

J. C. Hoshor and Three Companies Are Convicted of Mail Frauds.

John C. Hoshor, promoter of an investment trust which Federal investigators found to be using the mails in unloading stock at fictitious values, was sentenced yesterday to five years' imprisonment in Atlanta Penitentiary by Judge Alfred C. Coxe, after a jury had found him guilty of mail fraud. The United Bankers' Corporation, Bank Stock Investors' Corporation and Market Movements, indicted with him, were fined $5,000 each.

Sentence was imposed immediately the jury had returned its verdict, upon motion of Lowell Wadmond, Assistant United States Attorney, who had conducted the prosecution. Judge Coxe, however, admitted Hoshor to bail for two weeks, under a $15,000 bond, pending an appeal.

The United Bankers' Corporation was organized and capitalized at $10,000,000 in 1927. Hoshor began operations in Newark, N. J. Then he moved to New York, opening offices successively at 52 Broadway, 6 East Forty-sixth Street, 42 Broadway and 24 Stone Street.

Testimony showed that the signature "S. J. Webb," which appeared on corporate stock certificates, was his and that he used the name "R. Randolph" in signing business letters. Bank Stock Investors' Corporation was also organized by him and used in stock distribution. Then Market Movements came into being as an advertising bureau which maintained offices at 24 Stone Street.

LARSON URGED TO ACT IN TRUCKMEN'S STRIKE

Fruit and Produce Association Head in Newark Tells of $1,000,000 Tie-Up.

Governor Morgan F. Larson was urged yesterday to relieve the situation caused by the produce truckmen's strike in Newark, which has tied up more than $1,000,000 worth of foodstuffs. A telegram sent to the Governor by John A. Gill, president of the Fruit and Produce Trade Association, read:

"Serious conditions exist at our produce markets. Farmers arriving with loads are being advised not to transport any merchandise for sale here under serious threats. We have incidents of loads which had arrived not being unloaded. $1,000,000 in foodstuffs tied in freight yards. Please advise us of action."

Mr. Gill said that more than 100 drivers and helpers have applied to get their jobs back, saying that they do not know what they are striking for. He said they told him they belonged to the union, were afraid of violence and wanted to know what protection the commission merchants would give them. Mr. Gill replied that the commission men had signed contracts to employ union drivers and could not deal with the applicants as members of the union, but would deal with them as individuals outside the union.

BILL AIMS AT SPECULATION.

La Guardia Would Prevent Stock Margin Orders by Mail or Wire.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—A bill to curb speculation in stocks and on commodities on margin by making it unlawful to send or receive orders through the mail, by telegraph or otherwise in interstate commerce, was introduced today by Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York.

The measure would provide a maximum penalty of $5,000 for corporations and a penalty of $1,000 fine and not more than five years' imprisonment or both for individuals convicted of violation.

WHALEN PROPOSES BAN ON LOW FLYING

He Suggests Law Forbidding Planes Crossing City at Altitudes Less Than 7,000 Feet.

WOULD BAR AMATEURS

Commissioner Says Reid's Courage Saved Lives of Others—Funeral of Flier Tonight.

An ordinance forbidding flights over New York City at altitudes under 7,000 to 10,000 feet, and another forbidding any but professional pilots from crossing the city by plane were among the remedies suggested yesterday by Police Commissioner Whalen for the prevention of such accidents as the crash of Charles I. Reid, who met his death when his plane fell on a roof in West Sixty-fourth Street Wednesday afternoon. Reid's passenger, Robert J. Baillie, saved his life by dropping in a parachute.

The commissioner recalling that Reid also had a parachute, took occasion to praise his action in sticking to his plane.

"That man should be remembered for a long time," Mr. Whalen said, "because of the cool, thoughtful courage he displayed. It would have been easy for him to have saved his own life by jumping, but if he had jumped as his friend did the plane would have gone wild and plunged to the street, possibly causing the death of many.

"Unquestionably Reid, sticking to his ship to the last, tried to divert it as much as possible from the street and probably tried to land on a roof top. By cutting off his motor he prevented the plane from taking fire at the crash. I do not think it was so much of a miracle that no one was killed except poor Reid. I think it was due entirely to the man's own courage that no one else was injured."

The commissioner said that within a week or so he would have a program of local aviation legislation to lay before the Municipal Assembly. Before this is done he expects to consult representatives of the Aeronautic Branch of the Department of Commerce and then lay his tentative program before the State Aviation Commission for its approval and possible amendments.

"I am strongly in favor of some ruling whereby private fliers can be forbidden from passing over the city," Mr. Whalen continued, "and I think that a very high altitude should be maintained in order that a pilot may have a safe gliding angle for bringing his plane down in case of necessity so that he may find a landing place well outside of the city's congested areas.

"The remarkable thing is that we have had no previous accident of the sort. I am told that low flying over Manhattan is especially dangerous because of the tricky up-and-down currents caused by the high buildings. From 7,000 to 10,000 feet, I think, should be required of pilots who must cross the city.

A plane weighing 1,500 pounds or more and coming down in the city at a speed of 100 miles an hour, Commissioner Whalen pointed out, would cut right through the roof of a tenement house, even if it didn't land in the street.

Following an autopsy Reid's body was removed to an undertaking establishment at 597 Lexington Avenue. Funeral services will be held at the Universal Funeral Chapel at that address this evening at 8 o'clock. The body will be taken to Millersburg, Pa., for burial.

GERMANS ASSAIL US FOR TARIFF STAND

Editors Unable to Reconcile It With 'Prosperity Program' of Increasing Exports.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—President Hoover's "prosperity program" continued today to engage the curiosity of German editors, some of whom profess their inability to reconcile such paradoxes as are suggested in prohibitive American tariffs and the more recent American determination to capture world markets through enhanced export activities.

If America intends to force her exports to Europe, observes the Germania, she must remember that after all international commerce constitutes an exchange of commodities and that Europe therefore can only be expected to have an interest in absorbing increased quantities of American products if she is assured of reciprocal accommodation on the part of the United States.

"Such expert judges of Europe as President Hoover and Owen D. Young must surely be conscious of the effects of American import impediments on Germany, which is expected to pay reparations out of her surplus trade balances" the Germania declares, adding that America's "economic Monroe Doctrine" and tariff policies were primarily responsible for the proposal of a European league which was actively discussed at Geneva.

Now that the point of saturation has been reached in the United States and the economic potency and purchasing enthusiasm of the man in the street are retrogressing, American industry, in the opinion of the Germania, is confronted with a difficult dilemma in that it will have to choose between curbing production or acceleration of exports, which suggests to this newspaper that one of the chief psychological propelling forces in the traditional American productive energy—the determination to attain prosperity through work—has suddenly become endangered and that the resultant pessimism may have a far greater effect on the nation's psychology than recent Stock Exchange losses reflect.

"Hoover, the candidate of the prosperity party, will now have to show what he can accomplish," the Germania concludes.

The indications that America is about to seek new foreign outlets for her commodities have already brought a score of applications to the Berlin bureau of the American commercial attaché from German importing firms who indicate willingness to assume representations for American firms.

SENATORS IN ANGER DENOUNCE CRITICS

Harrison and Norris Charge 'White House Propaganda' in Aspersions Over Tariff.

RETORT ON STOCK CRASH

Simmons, Johnson and Glass Join in Outburst Caused by Newspaper Editorial.

PUBLISHER IS REBUKED

McLean Is Linked With 'Benedict Arnold'—C. E. Mitchell Is Blamed for Market Crisis.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — Incensed by assertions that the Democratic-Insurgent coalition had flouted President Hoover's wishes on tariff legislation, that the Senate, at its lowest level in its history, was generally faithless to its obligations and that Senators responsible for "refusing" tariff protection to American industry, agriculture and labor would be brought to book, Senators Johnson, Harrison, Norris and Simmons answered critics of the Senate in caustic speeches today.

The occasion was opened when Senator Sackett of Kentucky, a "Young Republican," tried to insert in the Congressional Record an editorial from The Washington Post expressing the criticism of the Senate.

When Senator Sackett offered the editorial, some of the Senators understood him to endorse its contents. He explained that he presented it without comment, and later said he regretted that his purpose in submitting it had been "misunderstood."

The Sackett move gave Senators Harrison and Simmons opportunity to deny that the Democratic party was in any way responsible for the stock market crash, Senator Johnson a chance to speak scathingly of the "Young Guard," and Senator Norris an opening to denounce Edward B. McLean, publisher of The Post, for the editorial.

White House "propaganda" was charged by Senator Harrison, who said that he and Senator Simmons had promised the administration to help with the projected tax reduction. Senator Simmons asserted that the Senate never had a higher moral standard and that the power of the "interests" over the House Ways and Means Committee was to blame for increases on industrial rates in the tariff bill.

Without direct reference, but by obvious implication, Senator Johnson accused the "Young Guard" of attempting to "reform" the Senate.

Harrison Assails "Propaganda."

Referring to the stock market crash, Senator Harrison recalled that Senator Simmons and he, with other leaders, had gone to the Treasury, when Mr. Mellon asked for a conference, at the time the market was most disturbed. Mr. Mellon, according to Mr. Harrison, said:

"We want to do something to restore confidence; we would like to send out from this meeting a statement that a tax reduction law is going to be passed and we would like to have the approval of the Democrats of such a course."

"We gave our help unhesitatingly and unreservedly," Senator Harrison continued. "We thought our cooperation with the Republicans would help the administration to maintain economic stability in this country; that it might relieve some of the chaos, confusion and unrest existing in the minds of our people.

"We have tried to write a tariff bill that would equalize duties to all the industries and all the people of the country. We have done mighty well, and all the propaganda may be started * * * which may try to create an unfavorable impression against the Senate, will not be able to do it, because such propaganda will not be substantiated by the facts.

"There is a subtle plan in existence on the part of certain people who dislike what has been done during this extraordinary session of Congress to belittle the Senate, make light of its achievements, put it in a bad light before the country.

"It is a plan to throw out a smoke screen in order to cover up what others in high places have done or failed to do in this great crisis. That is part of the plan of this newspaper in Washington. We know propaganda when we see it.

"Those of us who have been in politics more than a year can see it when it is written by the special newspaper correspondents who dine at the White House, and who take trips into Virginia with the President, and then with subtle pens write this propaganda, hoping they may create an impression in the country unfavorable to the Senate and favorable to some one else in high place.

"I could mention by name some of the special writers, and the time may come in the Senate when we will mention them by name who are creating such propaganda. They are as well organized as were the propagandists under the leadership of Grundy in his fight against the tariff bill."

Senator Harrison thought The Post editorial was merely a scheme to place President Hoover in a favorable light before the farmers and business interests by attacking the work of the Senate.

Norris Denounces McLean.

Senator Norris, however, took up the editorial from another angle, saying:

"We must consider the source of the editorial. The Post is published by Ned McLean.

"When one of the greatest crimes of modern times was being carried out, and there was a conspiracy to steal the vast resources of the nation, it was Ned McLean who came to the rescue of the man selling out his country. It was Ned McLean who lied to the Senate."

Declaring that more than twice the sum was involved in "the McLean affair" than in the fort which Benedict Arnold contracted to turn over to the British, Mr. Norris added: "Every condemnation from his lips is to the lasting honor of those whom he assails."

He said that Mr. McLean "only told the truth" to the Senate committee "when he was in danger of being sent to jail for perjury," and also that "any commendation from the columns of The Washington Post is something honest men would shun."

"I am the keener neither of the dignity nor the honor of the Senate, I represent a bloc of one, just one," Senator Johnson announced. "Sometimes I feel impelled to vote with one kind of bloc in the Senate and sometimes with another.

"But there is one thing that has impressed itself upon me in the past few months; one thing I am sick and tired of hearing. In the economy of nature the most wretched and contemptible creation is the bird that fouls its own nest, and not that I have ascribed it to any individual in this body; but I am sick and tired of innuendoes, implications and even statements from men who break their heads and hearts and their purses to get into this body and then denounce it.

"When I get tired of sitting in the Senate I will quit it.

"If there is any man who sits here who believes the Senate is such a horrible place as has been described by certain individuals who write from the White House door, let him get out of it. There is no law compelling him to remain here, and none compelling any of us to stay here under circumstances that may arouse either our indignation, hostility, contempt for this body."

"I hope the Senator will not overlook the fact that these men all want to reform us," Senator Couzens interrupted.

"'All want to reform us!" echoed Senator Johnson. 'They want to get into this body and with their superior egotism, vanity and virtue are coming into the body for the purpose of reforming ninety-five men and demonstrating what marvels they are."

Senator Johnson said that Senators came to the Senate in an endeavor to do little service in a small way, but "we are here primarily because we fought with both fists to get here, and every one of us is fighting with both fists to remain here."

Senator Simmons then began a defense of the Democrats against charges that they were to blame for the Wall Street trouble.

"Are we responsible for what has happened in Wall Street?" he inquired.

"When did Wall Street discover we were responsible? Not until speculation reached its peak and high prices began to fall.

"When did the administration discover it? For weeks and months every section of the country has been drained of credit to feed the orgy of speculation. But what was the administration doing?

"What was the Secretary of the Treasury doing? Was he doing anything to stop it? On the other hand they were issuing daily statements that everything was safe. But speculation went on until the tumble came.

"The little fellows were slaughtered like sheep, and not until the slaughter was complete did the administration move. To say the Senate had anything to do with the crash is absurd."

Glass Attacks C. E. Mitchell.

Senator Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, who, as a former Secretary of the Treasury, was instrumental in the upbuilding of the Federal Reserve System, interrupted his colleague from North Carolina, charging that Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York City, was "more responsible than all others together for the excesses that have resulted in this disaster.

He characterized Mr. Mitchell as the "chief offender" in advancing funds to brokers while interest rates on all loans rose rapidly.

Senator Simmons, upon resuming, turned to the character of the Senate, saying:

"The intellectual standard of the Senate is as high as when I first came. The moral standard is higher. The spirit of patriotism in this body, fidelity to the rights of all the people, was never higher. In all essential qualities of successful and wise legislation, the Senate of today will measure up to standards of the body in any period of our country's history."

PROFESSOR ASSAILS SENATE INQUIRIES

W. S. Myers Compares Them With the Injustices of George III in Colonial Days.

NOT AFTER FACTS, HE SAYS

But Seek Political Advantage Only —Tells Junior Trade Board They Expose Government Faults.

"The injustices perpetrated by George III before the American Revolution were no worse than some that have been perpetrated by Senatorial investigating committees," William Starr Myers, professor of political science at Princeton University, said yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the New York Junior Board of Trade at Block Hall, 23 South William Street.

"If these committees have the rights that the courts say they have," he continued, "no man, woman or child in this country is safe from their whims."

Sees Faults Exposed.

"A good side to this business of investigating," he continued, "is that it shows one of the faults in our system of government, the difficulty that the legislative and executive branches have in finding out what the other is doing." He advocated a change in the rules of Congress to let the President's Cabinet have access to the floor of both houses without the privilege of voting.

On lobbying, he said, the difficulty was to find out where proper lobbying ends or begins. He termed Senator Bingham "a perfectly honest, upright gentleman." While there was no question of his integrity being involved, he said, he did something indiscreet and contrary to political propriety and deserved censure.

While truth has come out of Senatorial investigations, he said, the difficulty is that the committees seek "not facts but to put somebody in a hole." The difficulty is partisanship, he said, and the main object of their recent partisanship has been "to put Mr. Hoover in a hole."

He compared the Democrats in Congress with the New York State Republicans, who, he said, "opposed former Governor Smith whether he was wrong or right." He said that the Democrats strengthened President Coolidge every time they voted him down. "And I think history is repeating itself."

Urges Better Judgment.

Assuring his audience that he had no thought of "throwing the Constitution into the waste basket," he said that "the United States Government has not developed to meet the complex needs of the present day." He urged the need of judgment to take the good from the past and adapt it to the requirements of the present and the future, and said that the country would be safe if responsible business men would devote to public service but a small part of the energy they use in their business.

The Junior Board of Trade adopted a resolution yesterday urging that municipal playgrounds be placed under one agency, preferably the Board of Education. Another resolution urged that school playgrounds be kept open weekday afternoons from 3 to 8 P. M. and all day Saturday throughout the Winter.

Courtlandt Otis, president of the organization, presided, and W. R. Ehrmaantraut, chairman of the board of directors, was another speaker.

GIVES MOONEY CASE TO STATE PRISON BOARD

Governor of California Takes Steps to Obtain Early Decision on Prisoner's Appeal.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 21 (AP). —As a step toward determining the truth in the pardon appeal of Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco, Governor C. C. Young announced today he was referring the case to the Advisory Pardon Board for investigation and recommendation.

The Governor said that he was taking this step as an aid toward an early determination of the real facts in the case.

"Although it has been the announced policy," he said, "of the Governor's office to submit to this board all prison cases which are regarded as sufficiently deserving to merit careful consideration, I have hitherto not done so in this instance, hoping that I might reach a definite conclusion in my own mind and thus avoid taking any action which might tend to delay a final decision."

The Governor made it plan that in asking the Pardon Board to consider the case, he was not shifting responsibility from his shoulders.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 21 (AP).—Shown a picture of Lewis Smith, who is alleged to have confessed that he and not Thomas Mooney was responsible for the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing in July, 1916, Frank Stevens stated today he "could not swear that the picture was that of Smith, but that it was a dead ringer for him."

DEFIES PENSION CRITICS.

Miss Agnes M. Craig, chairman of the Teachers' Retirement Board, expressed resentment yesterday over the request of the Kindergarten to 6B Teachers' Association that she resign to make place for some one more in harmony with teachers' interests. She said she would not quit.

Miss Craig said it was a plot to get her off the board so that the teacher members might appoint Louis Taylor to the vacant secretaryship. The vacancy, now of long standing, has been caused by the constant disagreements between the city members and the instructors' delegates on the board. Miss Craig declared she was opposed to the appointment.

SARRE TALKS BEGIN IN AIR OF GOODWILL

REICH PROPOSALS GO FAR

By CARLISLE MacDONALD.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The negotiations between France and Germany for the final settlement of the Sarre problem began at the Foreign Office this morning in an atmosphere of conciliation and good-will which considerably brightened the prospects for a successful outcome. The German delegates have come to Paris with proposals which on their face appear to give the French practically all they desire in the way of an accord.

The French delegation, however, may find itself considerably hampered by a concerted and energetic drive from the forces of the Right to stiffen the position of France in the present pourparlers. All the important organs of the Right, which in this instance means the organs of big business, agreed today that it is up to Germany to win the anticipated liquidation of the Sarre question by meeting France on all her demands.

In reading such newspapers as the Echo de Paris, La Liberté, the Journal des Débats and, to a somewhat lesser degree, the semi-official Temps, one gains the impression that the present Parliament, with its Right majority, would much prefer to see France hold the Sarre until the end of the time stipulated by the Treaty of Versailles, namely, 1935, rather than embark upon the current conversations.

Briand Promises Protection.

Foreign Minister Briand, as the sponsor of the great peace and conciliation program as reflected by the Treaty of Locarno and the accords of The Hague, has entered willingly into the negotiations, promising however, to protect the French economic interests in the Sarre to the fullest.

The agenda for the conference has been laboriously prepared, and assuming that France is not embarrassed by threats from parties of the Right the negotiations should result in success. Several months may be necessary to work out an acceptable plan, but with Germany in her present conciliatory mood it is likely that France will be able to secure nearly all she wants.

The French delegation has been instructed to insist upon several main points: Maintenance of the status quo so far as the tariff régime is concerned, thus continuing the very profitable trade relations between the Sarre and France, especially with Alsace-Lorraine, and the extension to the mines of the Sarre of the present satisfactory accords which France and Germany have entered into in the iron and steel industry. The latter is most important, for it would guarantee to France the present flow of coal from the Sarre mines to the steel mills of France.

Politically speaking, the French are entirely agreed that the Sarre must be returned to the jurisdiction of Germany, although the negotiations are not concerned with that phase of the matter.

The German Proposals.

From authoritative sources it is learned that the German delegation has been instructed to offer the following basis of agreement:

The return of the Sarre as quickly as possible to the jurisdiction of the Reich; that is to say, not later than the date now fixed for the complete evacuation of the Rhineland—June 30, 1930.

The fixing of a sum for the repurchase of the Sarre mines by Germany, France to arrange the terms of payment.

A special agreement for covering delivery of Sarre coal to France, as well as an arrangement whereby the blast furnaces of the Sarre can obtain the necessary Lorraine ore.

The territory of the Sarre to re-enter the tariff union of Germany, but a special treaty between France and Germany to assure to France reductions in the tariff on certain merchandise and freedom of duty on others.

It can be seen that the foregoing is not far removed from the French demands, and the Germans, with characteristic bargaining ability, have let it be known that "further concessions could be made" in the degree in which the return of the Sarre to a normal régime is to be hastened.

Speeches Conciliatory.

This morning's inaugural session was opened by Georges Pernot, French Minister of Public Works, who will preside over the conference. His speech was a sincere appeal to make the Sarre accord another step in Franco-German rapprochement and in replying Herr von Simson, the head of the German delegation, echoed the sentiments of M. Pernot. It was decided to work through three subcommittees—on mines, tariffs and legal questions—which will meet in a few days.

The Journal des Débats voices the attitude of the rest of the Nationalists concerning the present negotiations when it points out tonight that France has entered a conference which can be dangerous to her interests and incur the severest criticism. After warning the government that the Nationalist forces are solidly agreed on the Sarre situation, the newspaper goes on:

"Who sought these negotiations? Germany. Who has the deepest interest in an advance solution of the Sarre problem? Germany. These negotiations have nothing to do with The Hague accords nor the Young plan. They constitute a separate concession solicited by Herr Stresemann. In reality nothing justifies these negotiations."

The opening of the negotiations today was the signal for renewed attacks upon the government in Parliament and in party meetings from those elements which regard the negotiations as a dangerous concession to Germany.

"We are marching to war under the banner of peace!" exclaimed Alexandre Millerand, former Premier and President of the republic, in attacking the Briand policy of the evacuation of the Rhineland and the surrender of the Sarre in an address to the Republican Union party, known as the Marin group.

In Parliament Deputy Henry Franklin-Bouillon at the close of tonight's sitting demanded an immediate hearing for his interpellations on the Sarre negotiations. He charged that the meeting of the experts had been called without consulting the Chamber and that the government had accepted Germany's thesis, making the Young plan contingent on the Sarre settlement.

M. Briand's reply was a stinging rebuke to M. Franklin-Bouillon for his persistence in making the government day after day repeat its solemn assurances on this question, which has already been several times approved by a vote of the majority.

"At The Hague I took the stand that the Sarre was not a question between the Allies and Germany, but purely a Franco-German question," M. Briand said. "The meeting has been called to hear Germany's propositions for a settlement. The very composition of our delegation proves my point. It is an economic mining committee and has no connection with the plan or The Hague Conference.

By a vote of 337 to 244, discussion was deferred.

CLEMENCEAU ILL; CONDITION SERIOUS

Doctors Are Hastily Summoned When Former Premier Feels Acute Abdominal Pains.

NARCOTICS GIVE HIM REST

The "Tiger" Had Risen at 6 as Usual, Intending to Do "Daily" Dozen—Daughter at Bedside.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Friday, Nov. 22.—Georges Clemenceau, the war-time Premier of France, is critically ill.

At a consultation of physicians, lasting nearly an hour last evening, it was found impossible to diagnose his malady, which took the form of severe pains in the abdomen. Under the influence of injections of morphine the "Tiger" of France was resting more easily at midnight and it was thought best to postpone further examination until the daylight hours, when a new consultation of specialists will be held.

The former Premier is now 88 years old and although of extremely robust constitution, his powers of resistance have been sapped by several recent minor ailments. That his condition last night was more serious was apparent not only from the demeanor of the physicians but in M. Clemenceau's own estimation, as evidenced by his summoning his daughter and closest personal friends to his bedside in the Rue Franklin.

Among the distinguished personalities who, as soon as the new indisposition became known, called and left cards at the Clemenceau residence were Premier André Tardieu, who was one of Clemenceau's chief lieutenants during the last days of the war; Paul Doumer, President of the Senate, and Deputy Georges Mandel, who was another Clemenceau aide.

Rose at 6 as Usual.

M. Clemenceau, who had been improving daily since a recent illness, suddenly suffered a relapse early yesterday. He rose at 6 o'clock, as is his habit, and started work as usual. Feeling himself unwell, however, he abandoned the work and reclined on a chair, and when his physical culture instructor, who ordinarily supervises his morning exercises, arrived at 8 o'clock, M. Clemenceau told him he did not feel equal to the exertion and dismissed him for the day.

Members of his family already were concerned, but when at 11 o'clock M. Clemenceau complained of violent abdominal pains his physician, Dr. de Gennes, was hastily summoned.

In order to relieve the pain Dr. de Gennes gave M. Clemenceau two injections of morphine, and about an hour later, fearing weakness of heart, gave him an injection of camphorated oil.

The injections relieved the pain and, although without losing consciousness, the former Premier dozed part of the afternoon. At his own request his friend, Professor Laubry, was summoned, as well as his legal counselor, M. Pietri. He also asked for his daughter, Mme. Jacquemaire, who remained at his bedside.

After his examination of M. Clemenceau Dr. Laubry said:

"The former Premier is now suffering less than this morning. He retains complete lucidity of mind, but even despite injections of morphine his stomach and abdominal pains are so serious that it is impossible to touch him without making him cry out in agony."

For some months the "Tiger's" health has been precarious—ever since he caught cold on an automobile ride through the Vendée from his country house at St. Vincent-sur-Jard this Autumn. Doctors were summoned to him there but his condition improved at once. Soon afterward he decided to return to Paris and made the long trip by automobile without any serious fatigue.

The attending doctors, however, counseled M. Clemenceau against continuing too strenuously the work upon his autobiography, which has been occupying him many hours a day.

Convinced of Death's Approach.

The "Tiger," however, has been convinced for many months that death was approaching and he several times discussed this philosophically, like an ancient stoic, with friends.

"I do not fear death," he said. "I await it. Perhaps it will be this year or perhaps next. I feel sure it will not be long."

The former Premier has been working hard at putting his papers in order and finishing his memoirs in which he answers many political charges that, in his retreat since his defeat for the Presidency of France, he has not deigned to answer heretofore.

A short time after his return to Paris he again fell ill and much concern was felt over his condition. Conforming to the doctor's commands, however, he again improved and on Armistice Day was able to receive a group of admirers from the Vendée, who called to do him honor for "all he had done for France." To them he cheerfully gave a rendezvous for next year, but added, "I will not feel badly if I am unable to keep that date."

SEQUESTRATES CASH OF BULGARIAN ROADS

League Commissioner Charges Refusal to Reorganize the State Rail System.

CABINET CRISIS EXPECTED

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SOFIA, Nov. 21.—Henri Charon, French Commissioner appointed to Bulgaria by the League of Nations, has sequestrated $3,000,000 worth of income of the Bulgarian State railways, according to the morning newspaper, Jutro, on the ground that the Ministry of Railways has consistently refused to reorganize the State system as requested by M. Charon for years past.

M. Charon, whose action has caused a sensation and bids fair to lead to a Cabinet crisis, according to the Jutro, has refused to release the money until the government complies with his wishes. The sum represents the greater part of the income received from the working of State railways in recent months and had been deposited in the Bulgarian National Bank.

R. Madgeroff, Minister of Railways, declines to accede to M. Charon's demand and is ready to support his refusal with his resignation. He had an audience with King Boris yesterday and communicated this decision.

M. Charon declared to newspaper men that he would go to Geneva early in December to report the conflict to the Financial Committee of the League.

This news added to the excitement in Sofia, which was already sufficiently tense over the reparations question. The Ministry of the Interior has prohibited meetings of the Nationalist organization, composed of former non-commissioned officers who had arranged fresh demonstrations against the allied reparations requirements from Bulgaria. All foreign legations are being guarded by the police and the entire country awaits with anxiety the return from Paris of Athanese Buroff and Vladimir Moloff, Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Finance.

Decision of the Allies with regard to Bulgarian payments is awaited with almost equal anxiety in Hungary, which will see therein a foreshadowing of its own fate. Yugoslav and Rumanian newspapers, however, warn the Bulgarian Government not to follow the example of Premier Bethlen of Hungary, whose unyielding attitude on reparations, they assert, united all countries against him.

BARON KOENIG GREETED ON REACHING GERMANY

Aviator Who Encircled Globe Assembles Plane for Flight to Bremen Today.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BREMEN, Nov. 21.—Baron Friedrich Karl von Koenig Warthausen, the circumnavigating aviator, arrived here today aboard the Bremen and was warmly greeted by an enthusiastic crowd and several noted pilots.

Baron Koenig supervised the unloading of his machine personally, and assembled it on the flying field at Bremerhaven, from where he intends to fly to Bremen tomorrow morning, where a luncheon will be given in his honor.

At noon he will start on the last leg of his 30,000 kilometer, round-the-world flight to Berlin, where he will receive a rousing welcome at the Tempelhof flying field. It is the first world flight that any German ever made and the first world flight with a baby plane.

Tomorrow night Baron Koenig will be guest of honor at Krolle Garden Hall, where many prominent airmen and the diplomatic representatives of the countries through which Baron Koenig passed on his flight will be present.

DENY PLAN TO CHANGE CONSTANTINOPLE NAME

Turkish Postal Officials Besieged by Importers and Others Who Fear Losing Their Mail.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 21.—The City of Sultans still remains Constantinople to Turkish postoffice officials despite reports that they had imposed a ban on the name and had substituted the Turkish "Istambul" or French "Stamboul."

Consternation was caused among foreigners here when they heard that all mail addressed to "Constantinople" would be returned to the senders. Merchants handling foreign goods besieged the postoffice authorities to know whether this was final, but the postal chief yesterday assured them that letters addressed to Constantinople would reach their destination.

The confusion can be traced to a letter received here and addressed "Constantinople Byzantium," and the postoffice ruled that mail so addressed in the future would not be delivered. Complete discarding of the name Constantinople would cause indescribable confusion for years to come and postal authorities are wise enough not to attempt it for the present at least.

LAUNCH GIANT FLYING-BOAT.

British Test Iris III, Royal Air Force's All-Metal Plane.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Royal Air Force's giant all-metal flying-boat, the Iris III, was launched today at Brough, near Hull. The machine, weighing thirteen tons, was drawn from its hangar by a traction engine and run down a slipway into the River Humber.

Floating and engine tests were carried out and following a half-hour of flying tests the ship was headed for Felixtowe, where it is likely to remain for some time. It has a crew of five and can carry twenty-eight persons.

DR. MAGNES SCORED IN JEWISH PRESS

His Declarations Are Held Dangerous to Peace and Yielding to Importunities.

HIS RESIGNATION DEMANDED

Jewish Legion Veterans Ask Him to Quit University—Call His Propaganda "Treason."

Severe criticism is voiced in the Jewish press of America concerning the statements of Dr. Judah Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, who in his convocation address at the opening of the Winter session demanded that the Jews should renounce all political ambitions in Palestine, which should be an international Holy Land, and should strive to create a Jewish cultural centre.

Condemnation of his negotiations with the Arabs, looking to the establishment of a Parliament in Palestine, and of his negotiations with St. John Philby, anti-Zionist, is made in this week's issue of The New Palestine, official organ of the Zionist organization of America.

The editorial, reflecting the opinion of the Zionist organization, contends that the negotiations are dangerous to the peace of the country and are likely to lead to further bloodshed of the kind which occurred in Palestine recently.

Referring to Dr. Magnes as a well-meaning pacifist who has permitted his pacifism to run away with his better political judgment, the editorial says, "It is seldom that action proposed by a man in a panic achieves its purpose," and adds that Dr. Magnes "has never demonstrated more clearly than now the futility of pacifism as a policy of panic."

Scores Private Parleys.

The editorial says in part:

"At the annual opening exercises of the Hebrew University, Dr. Magnes declared, 'Palestine can never be a Jewish national home. It will always be an international home for Jews, Christians and Arabs alike.'

"This statement is the public climax of recent activities that Dr. Magnes has undertaken—without public authority or request—as the obvious result of the riots in Palestine. These activities included among other things negotiations with St. John Philby, notorious anti-Zionist and general meddler in the Near East, who has drawn up an extraordinary 'constitution' for Palestine—a constitution which speaks gently to the Jews and places unlimited power in the hands of the Arabs.

"It is almost incredible that at a time like this an intelligent Jew should go off on a private political spree of his own. Now, if ever, it is our duty to concentrate all moral and political authority in the properly elected bodies—the Vaad Leumi in Palestine, in the Zionist Executive outside of Palestine. And precisely at this moment Dr. Magnes rushes off to the agent of Ibn Saud to tell him how much he—Dr. Magnes—is willing to give up on behalf of the Jewish people, which he has not consulted on this point, in order to insure the good will of the Arabs and peace between the Arab and the Jew."

Holds Action "Irresponsible."

Asserting that Dr. Magnes's action was irresponsible and even arrogant, the editorial says that it has "no intelligible relation to pacifism," continuing:

"We honor the pacifist principles of Dr. Magnes, but we cannot see how the cause of peace (or decency) is served by a hysterical yielding to the importunities of rioters and murderers. Does Dr. Magnes imagine that he imbues the Arab leaders (more accurately the mob leaders) with a sense of peace and responsibility when, as the fruit of their bloodthirsty lawlessness he makes offers and concessions? Does he suppose that the instigators of the riots will accept his proposals as anything other than the helpless plea of cowardice and terror? The first principle of order, of civilized human behavior, is to grant nothing under a threat of violence, for such a grant merely increases the appetite of the bully.

Pointing out that Sir John Chancellor had cancelled conversations with his home government for an Arab Parliament, because of the brutal and inhuman behavior of the Arab leaders, the editorial maintains that Dr. Magnes's action is "undignified, ill timed and, above all, dangerous to the peace of the country."

Desire for Peace Stressed.

Pointing out that the Jews want peace but that the Arabs do not, The Day criticizes Dr. Magnes for taking up matters not in his province.

"Who does not want peace with the Arabs?" The Day asks editorially. "This propaganda among the Jews for peace creates the erroneous impression that the Jews do not want peace, that they must first be persuaded to desire it; in reality it is just the other way round. There is nobody to talk to about peace. The Arabs do not want peace.

"Since the Brith Sholom Society began its activities years ago, there has not been one Arab paper to speak in the same strain as the Brith Sholom propagandists. There has not been one political Arab group to stretch out its hands in order to make peace with the people of the Brith Sholom by whom they were addressed—these good, decent people of the Brith Sholom who forgive all and are ready to renounce all. They are prepared to give in to the Arabs everything they demand and what they do not demand. If the Arabs want a Parliament—well, a Parliament they can have; if the Arabs do not want the Balfour Declaration—well, down with the declaration.

"But even this is of no help. The Arabs want to make peace only with those Jews who have both their feet outside the frontiers of Palestine; but peace with the Jewish settlers in Palestine—this they desire neither to hear of nor see.

"Let the men of the Brith Sholom speak in their own name! If, however, instead of speaking they should begin to act, if they should make, or attempt to make, Zionist policy on their own responsibility or irresponsibility, if they should approach those in power with their advice or their plans which are contrary to the opinions and plans recognized by Zionism—that would mean taking the power into their own hands; that would mean division among the Jews. Instead of creating order it would mean establishing anarchy, and this may not be tolerated."

The American veterans of the Jewish Legion, a Jewish army corps that fought with Lord Allenby in the conquest of the Holy Land during the World War, have sent a telegram to Dr. Magnes demanding his resignation and terming his actions as treasonable to the most sacred Jewish ideals.

The telegram said:

"The general meeting of ex-legionaires held in New York yesterday condemns your tactless, unauthorized meddling in Palestine affairs. We consider your dangerous propaganda of surrender as treason to the most sacred Jewish ideals during the entire exile. Your stand endangers the existence of the university. We demand your resignation. Your place is not in Palestine."

SAYS ALL MUST HELP TO AVOID CRISIS HERE

F. E. Powell Tells American Chamber of Commerce in London Crashes Will Cut Living Cost.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—With America's enormous resources, a severe business depression as a result of the Wall Street reverses can be avoided if every one does his part, said F. E. Powell, president of the American Chamber of Commerce in London and chairman of the Anglo-American Oil Company, who has just returned from a visit to New York.

Discussing conditions in the United States, Mr. Powell told members of the chamber at a luncheon that he had found hopefulness everywhere and a belief in America's future prosperity. The Wall Street crashes were precipitated by the Hatry crisis in England, he continued, and hastened by the rise of the English bank rate and withdrawal of money loaned here.

"Have speculative men and women—you notice I say women—learned their lesson?" he asked, and answered, "It is hard to tell because of their unbounded faith in the future prosperity of their country."

He declared the general effect on American business would be the curtailment of the luxury trade, especially automobiles and foreign travel, with a decided pushing of the motor export trade with reduction of the cost of living and lowering of incomes, making for simpler and healthier living and better conditions all around.

PLAN WORLD INQUIRY ON PALESTINE RIOTS

British in Note to League Suggest International Experts Should Report to Geneva.

LONDON TO NAME GROUP

New Body Would Assist British Committee—Move Is Seen as Reply to Criticisms.

By CLARENCE K. STREIT.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 21.—The British Government is contemplating appointing an international committee of experts to investigate the Arab-Jewish situation in Palestine and has written to the Secretariat of the League of Nations to ascertain if the Mandates Commission has any objection to such a step, it is reliably stated here. The note, which arrived yesterday, has not been given out. The Mandates Commission is expected to act on the request before the present session ends.

The idea is for Britain, not the League, to name a committee, apparently to supplement the work of the committee of inquiry composed of representatives of all three British parties, which it has already appointed and which is now sitting in Palestine. The latter committee, it appears, is meeting considerable difficulties, especially in weighing conflicting Arab and Jewish testimony on the recent outbreaks and in reaching a unanimous conclusion.

The plan is to send a new international committee to Palestine as soon as possible so that its report and recommendations will be ready when the Mandates Commission holds its extraordinary session in the Spring on this question. Obviously, such a committee would relieve Britain of some of the responsibility it assumes if the inquiry be confined to the present purely British commission.

The British move, moreover, is understood to be a reply to sharp criticisms made, especially by the Italians, of the present investigation, which they consider is going on too slowly and in whose methods they appear to have little confidence. According to the Italian press, the British member of the Mandates Commission, in opposing its recent decision to hasten matters by holding an extraordinary session in the Spring on Palestine, declared that London had already received a 10,000-page report from the committee of inquiry, with more to come. Some Italian critics charge the British aim to conceal the real situation in the report to the Mandates Commission by burying the essential facts in a mass of inconsequential detail.

The zeal Italy is showing is variously ascribed here by neutrals to the Vatican's interest in the Palestine situation and to the fact that Italy, having received no mandates itself, is not unaverse to making mandatories toe the line.

WOULD PROTECT ALIENS.

But They Must Post Sum in Court Suits, Paris Conference Holds.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—A foreigner bringing suit against or being sued by a national of the country wherein he resides or does business will get the same consideration as the national in court, but before the case is heard he must post a sufficient sum to cover the obligation in the event that he loses, it was decided today by the judicial committee of the International Conference on the Treatment of Foreigners.

Regulations governing the formation of companies by foreign interest were drawn up by another committee which reported to the conference this morning. The proper officials of the countries in which foreign interests desire to organize a branch company would have the right to require a deposit of sufficient capital to insure the discharge of the company's estimated financial responsibilities.

HELD FOR REVEALING BLACKLIST OF ARABS

Jerusalem Policeman Accused of Showing Secret Paper When Drinking.

MOSLEMS QUESTION LUKE

Official Denies Suggestion That the Government Is Pro-Zionist or Pro-Arab in Policy.

By JOSEPH M. LEVY.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JERUSALEM, Nov. 21.—Police Corporal Karlik was arrested today on a charge of having disclosed a secret letter written by the Acting Superintendent of Police of Jerusalem, Major Harrington, to the criminal investigation department, which contained a government blacklist of eighteen persons in the Jerusalem district, headed by the name of Hadj Amin Hhusseini, the Mufti of Jerusalem.

This letter was published in the Hebrew labor daily, Davar, which was suspended for printing a secret official document.

Police authorities say Corporal Karlik has a fine record and that the letter was entrusted to him in connection with his duties. The authorities are almost sure he did not deliberately disclose the letter, but they blame one, Max Sanderoff, who is a tourist guide and sometimes acts as a reporter for Davar.

It appears that Sanderoff and Karlik were soon drinking together and it is held probable that the corporal showed the letter to Sanderoff at this time and that Sanderoff photographed it. Photographs later appeared in The New York Jewish Daily Forward.

Arab Cross-Examines Luke.

At the inquiry commission session today cross-examination of H. C. Luke, who was Acting High Commissioner at the time of the August riots, continued. At the morning session he was questioned by William Henry Stocker of counsel for the Arabs, but in the afternoon the cross-examination was continued by Aouni Bey Abbul Sadi, an Arab attorney of Jerusalem, who also is secretary of the Arab Executive, and therefore more conversant with the facts in the case.

When Aouni Bey tried to show that the Palestine Government was entirely pro-Zionist in policy, Mr. Luke replied that the position of the government is that it is accused by the Arabs of being pro-Zionist and by the Zionists of being pro-Arab. He has thousands of telegrams, he said, from both sides confirming these accusations. Mr. Luke again repeated that he agreed with Sir Boyd Merriman, counsel for the Jewish Agency, that communiqués issued while the riots were going understated the facts.

Arabs Charge Favoritism.

JERUSALEM, Nov. 21 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Under questioning by Aouni Bey, Mr. Luke acknowledged that there were two Jews to one Arab in the government secretariat, eighty Moslems to sixty-eight Jews in the senior civil service and that the government grants $100,000 to the Jewish schools. He also acknowledged that $825,000 had been expended for Jewish unemployed in 1927. The Arab counsel remarked that no such sums had been spent on the Arabs.

Mr. Luke denied, when questioned, any knowledge that 1,000 Arab families had lost their homes and livelihoods because of Jewish immigration.

A delegation representing the chief rabbinate of Palestine, consisting of Rabbis Kock and Meier, visited the High Commissioner, Sir John Chancellor, today in connection with the letter addressed to the chief rabbinate by the Aksa, the Moslem Wailing Wall Society, denying the Jews the right of organized worship at the Wailing Wall and prohibiting them from "any ceremony or the installation of objects or the raising the voice" as an encroachment on Arab religious rights.

The High Commissioner, the correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency is informed, advised the rabbinical delegation to refer the letter to the Parliamentary Commission of Inquiry, which is now holding its sessions here.

Rabbi Chaim Sonnenfeld issued an appeal today asking for a reconciliation between the Jews and the Arabs in the Wailing Wall dispute, assuring the Arabs that the Jews make no claims to the Mosque area and desire only free access to the Wall for prayers.

French Minister of Commerce Threatens Reciprocity if We Raise Tariff Barriers

By P. J. PHILIP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Pierre Etienne Flandin, new French Minister of Commerce, this afternoon issued a statement with regard to commercial relations between France and the United States in correction of statements attributed to him in an interview given to American newspapers.

"I hope the new tariff which is being discussed in Washington will not aggravate the customs barrier to the importation of French products into the United States," he said. "France is a big client of the United States, from which she especially buys indispensible raw materials for her own consumption. To pay for these purchases she must be able to sell her merchandise.

"Economic relations between any two countries are never sound when there is too great a disproportion between their respective exportations and importations. If, because of customs barriers, we should no longer be able to sell our manufactured goods in America, there would be a great disequilibrium in our commercial relations and we would be compelled to restrain as far as possible our importations from the United States.

"It would be very regrettable if France, which is associated in the efforts being made by the League of Nations to lower customs barriers, should be compelled, to defend herself by raising her rates, but I could not practice any other policy than that of reciprocity.

"I am a partisan of most cordial economic collaboration with the United States, where I have many friends and for whose industrial and commercial methods I have the greatest admiration."

EGYPT RECALLS ANOTHER.

Secretary at Washington Legation Removed With Minister.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 21.—Following the placing on a pension of the Egyptian Minister to Washington, Mahmoud Samy Pasha, it was announced today that the Secretary of the Legation, Ali Ismail Bey, had also been recalled to Cairo.

No official reason is given for the recall of the Minister, but it is generally understood that he is accused of having made unauthorized statements to the press regarding the proposed Anglo-Egyptian treaty and furthermore that he failed to celebrate the recent anniversary of the King's accession.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Mahmoud Samy Pasha, Egyptian Minister to the United States, said today that he had resigned from the diplomatic service two weeks ago and would sail from New York on Nov. 30 to return to Egypt.

Elections were coming in Egypt, he explained, and he would rather be there. Beyond this he gave no details as to the reason for his resignation or as to his future plans. He has been Minister here since July 16, 1925, and his successor has not been announced.

CHIANG WINS LOYANG BUT LOSES IN SOUTH

Chinese President Masses His Troops to Stop Push Toward Hankow After Victory.

FALL OF CANTON EXPECTED

"Ironsides" Advancing Steadily as Nanking Forces Evacuate Wuchow and Fall Back.

By HALLETT ABEND.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 21.—With Loyang definitely in the hands of the Nationalists, affording an important spearpoint toward Shensi, a massed drive of more than 100,000 Nanking troops is being hurriedly organized in an effort to check the perilous push toward Hankow on the part of the rebel armies, which are swarming down the Han River.

If Loyang can be held and the Han River movement checked, Nanking's position will be vastly strengthened.

In the meanwhile, a new danger has developed with lightning rapidity in the extreme south, where government forces have evacuated Wuchow and all of Kwangsi Province, falling rapidly back toward Canton, while General Chang Fa-kwei's victorious "Ironsides," aided by Kwangsi rebels, are making a rapid advance.

Due to the complications of Southern politics to dissatisfaction with President Chiang Kai-shek's policies and to the resurgence of the radicalism which has always been a vital factor in the South, the early handing over of Canton to the rebels will be no surprise.

If the Kuominchun forces succeed in capturing Hankow which is rapidly filling up with panic-stricken refugees, and if Canton falls into the hands of the rebels, Nanking's armies in the Honan and Loyang region will be imperiled, for such rebel victories would be expected to bring General Yen Hsi-shan, Governor of Shansi, down from the fence and induce him to dispatch his troops to assist the Kuominchun in the field, whom he is already supplying with food, funds and munitions, while nominally remaining neutral.

Nanking finally officially admits the capture of Siangyang by the rebels, declaring that the city was evacuated for strategic reasons.

Despite this turmoil affecting vast areas, Nanking persists in declarations of her intentions for a unilateral abrogation of extraterritoriality on Jan. 1. The government's spokesmen, officially declaring today that such is their purpose, qualified it by saying it is not the purpose of Nanking to denounce all portions of treaties, but only the extraterritoriality clauses.

Nanking Captures Supplies.

NANKING, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Nationalist Government's military headquarters announced tonight that its troops in taking Loyang had in the past two days captured "54,000 rebels, 300 cannon, 220 machine guns, 35,000 rifles, two tanks and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition."

Say Rebels Hold Loyang.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 21 (AP).—Japanese dispatches from Honan Province tonight stated that Loyang remained in the hands of the Kuominchun rebel forces.

In Kwangsi Province a number of disaffected troops have joined the Ironsides, the combined force capturing Wuchow and preparing to advance against Canton. It was understood here that Chen Ming-shu, Governor of Canton, had telegraphed Nanking asking aid, but it seems that General Chiang Kai-shek was unable to spare any troops for defense of Canton without risking the loss of Hankow.

Governor Chen was wounded when a bomb was thrown at him at midnight. A woman was arrested, charged with attempted assassination.

SOVIETS WIN STEADILY ON MANCHURIAN FRONT

Tokio Hears That Chinese Losses Lead Chang to Independent Negotiations for Peace.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MUKDEN, Nov. 21.—The towns of Manchuli and Dalainor, on the West Manchurian front, have fallen to the sustained onslaught of the Soviet forces, it was definitely learned today. The Chinese offered fierce resistance, and their losses include two Generals and several officers.

Two towns on the Argun River have also been attacked and occupied, and it is reported that the population of Yimakuko has all been massacred.

No attacks were reported at Pogranichnaya, on the eastern front.

The indications are that Soviet forces are penetrating by road northward, their objective being Mulin. Mishan was attacked on the 17th, when the whole population fled.

TOKIO, Nov. 21 (AP).—Reports were received from Mukden today that Marshal Chang Hsuel-Liang, Governor of Manchuria, has decided to negotiate again with the Soviet Government for settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railway dispute, independently of the Nanking Nationalist Government.

The reports said that Dr. Wellington Koo, one-time Chinese Foreign Minister and Minister to the United States, has been appointed his plenipotentiary for this purpose.

The reasons for the decision are believed to be the continued pressure of the Soviet military forces on the Manchurian frontier combined with the belief that the Nationalist Government has been suffering a setback in Southern China.

SHAW HOLDS BRITISH MUST REFORM RULE

Author in Fabian Lecture Says Violent Revolution or Dictatorship Is Alternative.

URGES MANY PARLIAMENTS

Attacks Foreign Office's "Backstairs Intrigue" and Holds Influence of Oxford Is Harmful.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—George Bernard Shaw tonight outlined new machinery of government which, he said, British democracy must adopt in the next decade if it would escape violent revolution or Fascist dictatorship.

Speaking with unaccustomed solemnity in an annual Fabian lecture, Mr. Shaw warned that the present methods of government had broken down and become intolerable in modern society. No government will "get anything done," in his opinion, unless existing institutions are scrapped and new ones created.

He advocted, specifically, many Parliaments in place of one, a panel system for public election whereby all candidates would have to pass a capability test, and complete separation of "the Oxford-Cambridge influence" from the education of English children.

"We never believe that anything like the Mussolini or Pilsudski dictatorships can happen to us," Mr. Shaw asserted. "We imagine such things might happen to temperamental Italians or romantic opera singers, Poles or barbarians and Serbs, but never to the solid English. Yet I think most thoughtful people in this country are distracted by the sheer impossibility of getting things done."

The first step toward reform, Mr. Shaw contended, should be the extension of the League of Nations diplomacy. "This country and other powers must treat the League seriously," he declared. The second step would be the transformation of the British foreign office.

"Is it to go on being the headquarters of backstairs intrigue, as it is now?" he asked. "I suggest there should be a council of Ambassadors who should conduct all their business in each other's presence with a foreign secretary.

"You must have not one but several parliaments. You want a commonwealth parliament, then a British federal parliament. Then there must be national parliaments, including one for Scotland. And remember there must be two or three of each—political, industrial and more. You must have regional parliaments which would do away with the whole obsolete system of district councils, town councils and rural councils."

When Mr. Shaw reached the subject of education he held up Soviet Russia as an example and accused the old English universities of developing "the robber baron mentality," which, he said, produced Winston Churchills and Lord Birkenheads.

"If some strange accident should upset this country and make me dictator, the first thing I'd say would be that not one man who has been from Eton to Oxford or from Harrow to Cambridge should be allowed to come within a mile of an English child. There should be laws disqualifying them from public offices, from public bodies and especially from the post of teacher.

"Who made the great war, anyhow? It was the people all over Europe who had the Oxford type of education."

Some one in the audience asked Mr. Shaw if he had ever gone to a university. With a flourish of indignation, but with a twinkle in his eye, he replied:

"Of course I never did. Do you think I would have talked to you as I have if I had ever gone to a university?"

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Despondent because a flock of turkeys she raised were to be killed today and sold at Lisbon turkey market, Mrs. Margaret Mason, 58 years old, of De Peyster Corners, set fire today to the small barn in which the turkeys were.

BRITISH TORIES BACK BALDWIN AS LEADER

EMPIRE TRADE ENCOURAGED

Baldwin Says Expanding Markets Lie in Dominions—Declares Peace Is Not a Monopoly.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The much heralded meeting of the National Union of Conservative and Unionist Associations at the Albert Hall today was a complete fizzle for the discontented group of Tories who had hoped to find in this gathering an opportunity for an effective attack on the party leadership of Stanley Baldwin, conservative ex-Prime Minister.

The outcome was such a foregone conclusion that Mr. Baldwin did not even attend the afternoon session to defend, if need be, his management of the party. And his chief lieutenant, Colonel J. C. C. Davidson, who, as chairman of the party, has borne the brunt of the adverse criticism since the election failure, was also commended for his work, and a resolution endorsing the central office, which is the party machine, was carried by a large majority.

So there is no likelihood of any change in the Tory leadership in the near future.

The gist of the criticism voiced by the minority at the meeting was to the effect that Mr. Baldwin did not keep in sufficiently intimate contact with the rank and file of the party to know what was going on.

Colonel Davidson was called too autocratic.

"More power is vested," declared one delegate, "in the chairman of this Conservative party than in the American boss of Tammany Hall. We do not want that. We have no party policy and had none at the time of the election."

Mr. Baldwin held out encouragement to the empire free trade "crusaders" when, addressing his 2,000 party followers tonight, he said:

"I believe close cooperation throughout our empire is possible, for such cooperation will be of great benefit to all parts of the empire."

Expanding markets in the world for Britain, he declared, lay in the empire.

The pursuit of world peace, Mr. Baldwin insisted, was not a monopoly of any party in England.

"Our Conservative Government did a great deal for the peace of the world," he said. "No one did more for the League of Nations than Sir Austen Chamberlain, who never received his due, either from the League in this country or from the electorate. His statesmanship was learned in an older generaltion before statesmen had acquired the art of publicity or could get over the platform what Theodore Roosevelt called 'mush.'"

Mr. Baldwin riddled the Labor Government for its campaign pledges and its abandonment of those pledges when face to face with the realities of office.

JAPANESE GOLD BAN TO BE LIFTED JAN. 11

Premier and Finance Minister State Confidence in Country's Financial Status.

OSAKA, Japan, Nov. 21 (AP).—Official announcement was made today that the gold embargo would be lifted on Jan. 11.

Premier Hamaguchi explained that precautions had been taken to insure that no ill effects would follow, and emphasized the necessity of Japanese continuing the practice of economy. He stated that the government had amassed reserves of specie amounting to 300,000,000 yen (approximately $150,000,000), and had also contracted for credits in London and New York for a further 100,000,000 yen.

Junnosuke Inouye, the Minister of Finance, discussed the improved economic situation of the country and asserted that the government intended to refrain from regulating exchange after removal of the embargo. It proposed to leave this to the Bank of Japan, and to adopt the principle of maintaining no specie reserve in its possession, he said.

Foreign banking circles appeared confident that everything would go smoothly, and no ill effects are anticipated.

SWIMS PAST SHARKS TO SAVE 2 MARINES

Fisherman in Hawaii Struggles Four Miles in Infested Waters for Aid.

TRIO'S BOAT OVERTURNED

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONOLULU, Nov. 21.—The story of how Manuel Covea, a fisherman at Watertown village, ten miles west of Honolulu on the shore of Pearl Harbor, swam four miles through shark-infested waters Sunday to bring help to two United States marines, whose 14-foot dinghy overturned off the channel buoy, was told here today.

The rescued men are Privates R. B. McCarty and John Jarmillo. They started on a pleasure jaunt Sunday morning and, finding they had room for three in the boat, picked up Covea at the Watertown wharf. Early in the afternoon, while they were fishing, the tiny craft was caught broadside by the wind as it rolled on a big wave, and overturned. The trio clung to the dinghy for two hours, drifting further and further to sea.

They compared their abilities as swimmers and it was decided that Covea had the best chance to reach shore to summon aid. At about 3 P. M. he left his companions and struck out for land. Four hours later he staggered ashore at Barber's Point and lay exhausted on the sand a few moments to regain his strength. Then he made his way to a telephone and within forty minutes the "Crash Boat" of Pearl Harbor was streaking out into the channel, followed by a navy tug and a half dozen volunteer craft. In another forty minutes the rescue had been effected, despite darkness.

Both men were so numb they were unable to walk when they were taken to the navy hospital. They were released today and their first act was to visit Watertown, to find and thank the man who had saved their lives.

ECUADOR WOULD KEEP ONE AMERICAN ADVISOR

Plans to Ask Renewal of Contract of W. F. Roddy—Quito Importers Hit by Trade Slump.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GUAYAQUIL, Nov. 21.—According to a report from Quito, the government of Ecuador intends to propose a renewal of the contract of W. F. Roddy, American adviser and director of customs, who came here first with the Kemmerer mission as technical adviser in the reorganization of the customs service. It is uncertain whether Mr. Roddy will accept, but he probably will be the only American adviser retained after the expiration of the present contracts.

It is unlikely that Harry L. Tompkins of New York, who is superintendent of Banking, will continue in the service of the government on account of a controversy with Senor de Tejada, Minister of Finance, regardless of the decision of the Supreme Court that Mr. Tompkins cannot be sued by the Attorney General on the Finance Minister's charges of alleged negligence and disrespect.

Quito importers have announced a decision not to import "even a pin" as long as the present unfavorable trade balance exists and until the financial situation improves. The unfavorable trade balance is believed to be due largely to the low price of coffee and the shortage of the cocoa crop, the result of ravages of parasites. Coffee and cocoa are the two principal exports of Ecuador.

CARDINAL SAYS THE MASS

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Multitudes paid sorrowing tribute to T. P. O'Connor at the funeral services for him in Westminster Cathedral today. As no rhetorical valedictories were spoken, the silent homage of the persons was all the more impressive.

The dimly lit cathedral, where the body rested before the high altar under a crucifix during the night, was crowded with the hundreds of those who had been close to the late "Father of the House of Commons," while great throngs of representatives of all walks of life crowded outside in the streets in silence. Nearly all the Cabinet Ministers and Members of the House of Commons arrived early, among the first being Prime Minister MacDonald, who was followed soon afterward by David Lloyd George, his wife and his daughter Megan.

Every newspaper—and they are many—to which Mr. O'Connor had contributed was represented, as well as American and other foreign newspapers, and there were delegates from various journalistic organizations. Fleet Street, from editors to reporters, turned out in full in honor of their colleague.

A requiem mass was celebrated by the Archbishop of Liverpool and the choir solemnly chanted without organ accompaniment "De Profundis," the supplication for the dead. Dignitaries of the Church filled the seats by the high altar as Cardinal Bourne gave absolution. As the cortège left the church the organ, which had been silent since before the mass, pealed forth Mozart's "Mass."

Mrs. O'Connor, accompanied by her two nieces, carried a bunch of violets, which she dropped into the grave.

ACTRESS GETS DIVORCE.

Decree Nisi Granted to Jessie Matthews in London.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Jessie Matthews, the musical comedy actress, received a decree nisi in the diverce court today for the dissolution of her marriage to L. A. Lytton. She admitted misconduct with an actor known on the stage as Sonny Hale, husband of Evelyn Laye, the star of the New York production of "Bitter Sweet." Miss Matthews and Sonny Hale co-starred in the London production of the revues, "This Year of Grace" and "Wake Up and Dream."

Miss Matthews said that she married Lytton in 1926 when only 18, that the marriage almost immediately commenced to be unhappy and that she wished to marry Hale when both were free to do so.

ANTI-SOVIET PLOT FOUND IN UKRAINE

Group Identified With Petlura Is Charged With Seeking to Effect Political Overthrow.

KHARKOV, Ukraine, Russia, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Kharkov State political police announced tonight the discovery of a widespread anti-Soviet organization headed by S. Efremov, a member of the Ukrainian Academy of Science, and Chekovsky, who was Premier of the independent Ukrainian Government proclaimed by General Simon Petlura in 1920.

Of late Chekovsky has been head of a religious sect the aim of which, it is declared by the Soviet authorities, is to overthrow the Soviet Government and establish a bourgeois State under control of a neighboring capitalistic country.

Several other Russians identified with General Petlura's "Ukrainian National Republic" are said to be involved in the new plot. They are alleged to have been in close contact with a White Russian organization abroad and with a group in Poland which calls itself "The Government of the Ukrainian National Republic."

The police assert that the plotters intended to restore to original owners all factories, estates and other properties which have been nationalized by the Soviet Union. It was also stated that they favored the payment of Czarist debts to foreign countries.

Another alleged count against the prisoners is that they conducted a juvenile branch for counter-revolutionists, training the youth in methods of terrorizing officials of the Soviet Government. All those accused of participation in the plot will be tried before the Supreme Court.

SNOWDEN EXPLAINS WAR CLAIM DENIAL

Chancellor Says Britain Has Right to Retain Seized German Private Property.

CITES VERSAILLES TREATY

Both Dawes and Young Plans, He Holds, Sanction Rejection Because of Reduced Reparations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, explained to a somewhat perturbed House of Commons tonight his reasons for rejecting Germany's claim for the unconditional return of all German private property confiscated during the World War which remains unliquidated, plus surpluses resulting from the liquidation of German private property after covering British private losses in Germany.

It was an uncompromising refusal to hand over any part of the sums realized to the German Government.

Mr. Snowden based his refusal first, on the fact that the British right to retain any surplus was recognized by the experts' committee, to be set off against the reduction of Germany's reparation obligations affected by the Young plan. It was, therefore, he held, an integral part of the experts' plan. It figured, he explained, in a similar capacity in the Dawes plan, and was sanctioned by the Treaty of Versailles in 1920 and the Reparations Commission in 1921, both of which, he showed, provided for crediting any surplus against the reparations capital account. It had also been sanctioned by the interpretations of the tribunal established under the Dawes plan, which twice rejected the German claims to be credited with the proceeds of the liquidation.

He said he had consulted British experts on the Young committee, and was informed that disposal of the surplus of the proceeds of liquidation of German properties was fully considered by the experts' committee in Paris.

To Observe Versailles Treaty.

"It was the intention of the British experts, as it was the intention of all other creditor governments," he said, "that the proceeds of the liquidation of these properties should be retained in accordance with the Versailles Treaty by the creditor powers concerned, and that no part of such proceeds should be repaid to Germany. It was only on this understanding that they agreed to recommend reduction of the German obligations, as proposed in the plan.

Mr. Snowden maintained that the text of the report itself made his position clear. Section VI, he said, provides that the annuities proposed in the report should cover the obligations to Germany as defined in the Dawes plan, while Section IX provides that the accounts of the Reparations Commission relating to the original capital debt should be closed.

Mr. Snowden then read that section of the Young report which says that creditor governments under the Young plan will be reducing the whole body of their claims arising out of the war or under the Treaty of Versailles to a considerable extent, and which adds that "the experts of the creditor countries are aware that past transactions have given or may give rise to claims by Germany, some of which are still unsettled, and while they are not able to go into the merits of these claims, they consider that the creditor governments are fully entitled to expect that Germany should waive them in consideration of consolidation of the creditors' claims at a reduced figure.

"Any other course would be inconsistent with their intention that just as new annuities cover all claims detined in Part XI of the Dawes plan, so they should be paid free of deduction in respect to any past transactions. The committee recognizes, however, that this is entirely a matter for the governments to deal with."

Says Germans Agreed to Settle.

Mr. Snowden then explained that the German properties sequestrated during the war were transferred to the creditor governments as of the date of entry into force of the Versailles Treaty on Jan. 10, 1920.

"The German Government," added Mr. Snowden, "at the same time retained the proceeds of the liquidation of the property of allied nationals in Germany and undertook to compensate its own nationals in respect to their properties liquidated abroad.

"It will be recalled that on two occasions Germany raised claims before the Interpretation Tribunal was established under the Dawes plan for credits in respect of the proceeds of the liquidation of German property against German annuities as defined by Section XI of Part I of the Dawes plan, but on each occasion the tribunal has rejected these claims, and under the terms of Section VIII of the Young plan these decisions will apply also to the annuities payable under the Young plan.

"It appears to be quite clear that while the Young committee recommends that the creditor governments should discontinue their right to liquidate in the future, they did not contemplate that Germany should be paid any part of the proceeds of past liquidations."

Mr. Snowden then claimed that Great Britain had been more and not less generous than the other creditor nations to the original owners of enemy property. None had returned any proceeds to Germany, he said, though France "might so return $1,250,000 at a future date," and the common undertaking shared by Britain was only to cease liquidation and release unliquidated properties.

"But the British Government has not only made compassionate allowances totaling $25,000,000 to individuals," he said, "but has offered to waive claims to properties still unliquidated worth $25,000,000 more."

Says No More Can Be Done.

This, Mr. Snowden said, was really all that Britain could do in justice to the British taxpayer, and was tantamount to the abandonment, so far as possible, of the relevant provisions of the Treaty of Versailles, which he had always advocated. "It is within the competence of the German Legislature to satisfy those who have not yet received compensation," was Mr. Snowden's final word.

Prime Minister MacDonald was immediately pressed for an opportunity to debate on Mr. Snowden's statement by Ian MacPherson, Liberal, who urged that discussion of issues involved was in the interest of the country as a whole. Mr. MacDonald said: "I think the members should have an opportunity of quietly considering the statements" and intimated that if the leaders of the other parties raised a question of debate, he would consider it.

On the whole Mr. Snowden's statement was well received in Commons and the newspapers tonight hold that it will tend to put an end to mischievous propaganda conducted simultaneously in Britain and Germany, which for the past few weeks has been threatening to disturb the harmony of Anglo-German relations.

The London Times looks to the government to treat reserved cases of those in which liquidation has not yet been completed in a spirit of liberal accommodation. "The government has thus an admirable opportunity of displaying that spirit of international good-will which has always figured prominently in its political platform," it said.

German Says Ships With Speed of 32.6 Knots Can Be Built for Service Now.

NEED 150,000 HORSEPOWER

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The most interesting problem under discussion at the annual meeting of the Shipbuilding Society, which is being held here today and tomorrow, is the question of whether it will be possible to increase the present speed of the fastest ocean liners and to construct an ocean greyhound which will be able to cover the distance from Cherbourg to New York in four days.

In a treatise which, in the absence of the author, was read to the audience, Dr. Johann Bauer of Hamburg comes to the conclusion that such a step is now possible and that a ship which can develop the necessary 32.6 knots need not be lighter than 31,000 to 33,000 tons. She would, however, require engines giving 150,000 horsepower or 50 per cent more than that of the Bremen, the professor considers.

Dr. Bauer predicts steam turbine machinery of 2,000 revolutions, with a boiler pressure of 30 atmospheres and steam superheating of 400 degrees. He puts the weight of the complete machinery at 8,100 tons if the three-screw system is used, or 8,350 tons for a four-screw steamer. Though such a ship will make the trip from Cherbourg to New York in exactly four days, he says five hours must be added for the return voyage, considering the difference in time between the continents. Therefore, the ships must leave New York at noon, instead of in the evening, arriving at Cherbourg at 7 A. M.

Discussing the results of the international conference for the protection of human lives at sea, which was held in London in the spring, Department Director Koenig of the Ministry of Transport declared the agreement which would soon be signed, undoubtedly meant further progress, but it was of no great importance for Germany, which for some time had been marching at the head of all nations so far as safety of ships was concerned.

Get $300 in Hold-Up on Drive.

Four robbers in an automobile held up an R. H. PEACE PROPAGANDA TO BE INVESTIGATED

Caraway Indicates Legion Will Be Asked Facts on Organizations It Accused.

LOVE TELLS MORE OF SUGAR

Evidence on Arnold's Activities Will Result in Recall of Other Worker.

SLEMP'S NAME BROUGHT IN

He Was Told of the Efforts Making to Keep Lewis Off Tariff Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Ten organizations, accused by the American Legion of engaging in propaganda "tending to weaken the national defense," will probably be made the subject of inquiry by the Senate lobby committee.

Senator Caraway, chairman of the committee, said today that next week the American Legion, through accredited officers, would have an opportunity to name "pacifist" groups which, in a resolution adopted at Louisville on Oct. 8, it demanded should be investigated. Mr. Caraway said the organizations accused would probably ask time to reply, and if they did they would be accommodated.

The organizations mentioned by the Legion are the National Council for the Prevention of War, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, American Civil Liberties Union, League for Industrial Democracy, National Students' Forum, War Registers' League, Young Workers' League, Young Pioneers and the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism.

Beet Sugar Man Testifies.

The lobby committee may also inquire into the activities of the Anti-Saloon League and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, but has not definitely decided on this point.

The lobby committee continued its hearings today with Stephen B. Love of Salt Lake City, president of the United States Beet Sugar Association, and L. L. Chandler and George S. Fletcher, representing Florida fruit growers, on the stand. Mr. Love testified that his association favored high sugar duties, especially against Cuba, that it favored limitation of sugar imports from the Philippines and had been active for months in its endeavors to attain these ends.

Messrs. Chandler and Fletcher gave testimony relative to their relations with the Southern Tariff League and their efforts to persuade Senator Fletcher of Florida, Democrat, to support the Republican tariff bill as it passed the House.

The committee announced that it had decided to summon several men connected with New York importing houses to testify concerning the so-called "low tariff lobby." This matter was brought to the attention of the committee by Senator Robinson, Republican, of Indiana.

He insisted that as voluminous testimony had been brought out, tending to show that "protected" interests had been soliciting high duties, the "low tariff" side of the story should be told for the public benefit.

The name of C. Bascom Slemp was brought into the lobby discussion today during Mr. Love's testimony. Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, produced a letter written by Mr. Love under date of Sept. 29, 1924, in which Mr. Slemp was informed that persons had been active in an effort to put President Coolidge "in a hole" in connection with the case of David J. Lewis, Democratic member of the Tariff Commission, whose term had expired. Love said that J. A. Arnold was soliciting funds for a "tariff council" to build up sentiment in opposition to the reappointment of Mr. Lewis.

He said that a letter had gone out under the signature of former Governor McDonald of Colorado asking funds to further the campaign against Lewis. Mr. Love testified that he had been informed that Arnold, representative of the Southern Tariff Association, was behind the fight made on Lewis and that the sugar people were not responsible for it. Mr. Love said he also heard Arnold's name mentioned in connection with the "Western Tariff Association," which, the witness said, "had gone on the rocks." Love said that the Western sugar people "did not like Arnold's methods and did not want to have anything to do with him."

As a result of Mr. Love's testimony Arnold will be recalled to tell about the "tariff council" and the "Western Tariff Association."

Mr. Love testified that, in waging its campaign for higher sugar rates his association employed the Inter-Ocean Syndicate of Chicago, and that for the circulation of "news articles" by the syndicate it made contracts to pay $3,000 a month for 1927, 1928 and 1929.

The contract, he disclosed, had since been taken over by the Domestic Sugar Association. Mr. Love said that the syndicate handled releases, embodying articles on the tariff, and designed to remove "prejudice" in the public mind against beet sugar, which, he said, sold for 20 cents less than cane sugar.

The articles also included matter intended to combat the effects of advertisements advising the use of tobacco products instead of "sweets."

In addition to expenditures for publicity, Mr. Love said, his association collected about $50,000 a year for other expenses, including the maintenance of a Washington office. Assessments were made on the constituent companies in the amount of half a cent per bag of output. In pushing the campaign for high sugar duties, Mr. Love said he had seen Senators Smoot, Broussard and Thomas of Idaho, and that, at the suggestion of the last named, he called on Senator Capper of Kansas, but had failed to find him.

Questioned on Corn Products.

Mr. Love was questioned relative to an agreement alleged to have been entered by which the corn products people and the domestic sugar interests should join hands in dealing with legislation of mutual concern pending in Congress.

Members of the committee stated that testimony given by Dr. W. R. Cathcart of the Corn Products Company of New York indicated that the sugar people agreed to support a bill prohibiting the Department of Agriculture from requiring packages containing corn sugar to state that fact on labels, if in return the corn interests would indorse the high tariffs on sugar. Mr. Love denied that there was any "contract" of the kind. He said that all the sugar people agreed to, in their conversations with the corn people, was that they would not protest against the corn sugar bill, which was introduced jointly by Senator Capper and Representative Cole of Iowa.

Messrs. Fletcher and Chandler were questioned concerning correspondence which revealed that they were helpful to "build fires" under Senator Fletcher of that State to force him into line for the Republican tariff program.

They intimated that through missionary work in the State they were trying to win Senator Fletcher's support because of their belief that the bill as passed by the House would be a good thing for Florida.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the people of Florida are for protection," said Mr. Fletcher, who described himself as a "dirt farmer." "You haven't done any farming in a generation," observed Chairman Caraway. "Oh, yes, I have, and I can prove it by people in our State," returned Mr. Fletcher.

Mr. Fletcher admitted that he had aided in "building fires" under Senator Fletcher, but it was all in the interest of Florida.

He justified it on the ground that if Congress failed to accord Florida products the rates embodied in the House bill, Florida farmers would have to go out of business, or set up business in Porto Rico or Mexico. Mr. Chandler, representing the American Fruit Growers League, admitted that he had received cooperation from the Southern Tariff Association in connection with the pending bill. He accepted expense money from the association out of funds collected in Florida. He made several trips to Washington during hearings on the tariff bill, and talked to Senators Watson, Fletcher, Connolly, George, McKellar, Smoot, Shortridge and Harrison, and conferred with Representative Ruth Bryan Owens.

FREES MARION MEN IN REBELLION TRIAL

Judge Holds Statute Can Be Invoked Only for Acts of Treason and Not Against Mere Striker.

NEW CASE TO START TODAY

Neighboring County Will Supply Jury to Try Same Textile Unionists on Riot Charges.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

MARION, N. C., Nov. 21.—Judge G. V. Cowper today rendered a verdict of non-suit, which is in effect "not guilty," in the trial of Alfred Hoffman, organizer of the United Textile Workers of America; Lawrence Hogan, Wes Fowler and Del Lewis, indicted on an 1861 statute alleging rebellion and insurrection against the State of North Carolina.

J. Hugh Hall, a young soldier, who had been accidentally arrested with the others, was discharged after pleading nolo contendre to trespass.

As soon as the court quashed the rebellion case arrangements were made to try Hoffman, Hogan, Fowler and Lewis on an indictment charging riot, resisting the Sheriff and two constables.

A venire of 100 men from neighboring Burke County will report here tomorrow. The riot case is expected to last about two weeks, after which will begin the trial of eight deputies charged with homicide as a result of the killing of six strikers and the wounding of twenty at the gate of the Marion Manufacturing Company on Oct. 2.

Attacks on Officers Cited.

The prosecution in the rebellion indictment alleged that on Aug. 30 the strikers had cursed and threatened the Sheriff, had stoned one of his deputies and had driven them away from a pile of furniture which the officers had attempted to return to a house occupied by a non-union worker after the strikers had dumped it in the road.

The prosecution maintained that resistance to the officers and cries from an angry crowd of strikers who yelled "to hell with the troops" was sufficient to constitute rebellion.

The defense insisted that rebellion or insurrection meant armed resistance to the State government itself or to an act of the Legislature.

Following his intimation of yesterday, Judge Cowper ruled for the defense after listening to argument from both sides. He held that the rebellion statute could be invoked only for acts of treason and similar offenses and not against strikers.

Attack Southern Union Plan.

John Peel, vice president of the North Carolina Federation of Labor; William F. Kelley, vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, and William Smith, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, today issued statements in reply to an open letter of James F. Barrett, former president of the North Carolina Federation of Labor, to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Barrett asserted the federation would fail in its program of organizing the South and advocated formation of a Southern textile union.

"There never was a time in the history of the South when such widespread and justified discontent with increasingly intolerable conditions was as manifest as at this time," said Mr. Peel.

"This is proven by the number of calls for aid in establishing local unions which have come from places hitherto without any semblance of unionism or seeming desire for it. These calls are so frequent that union officials in other industries are hard put to answer all of them."

"What Mr. Peel says as to the eagerness of the Southern textile workers for organization is amply proven by my own experience," said Mr. Kelley. "In Elizabethton, where I was sent to assist the already organized workers in the rayon plants, numerous appeals reached me from towns far and near asking 'how can we get a union?'"

Mr. Smith denied Mr. Barrett's statement that the mills had voluntarily improved conditions.

"So far from having improved conditions," he said, "the present widespread and increasing unrest, apparent to all but Mr. Barrett, is due directly to the stretch-out system, which was inflicted on the workers and accompanied by decreases and not increases in pay."

CUBAN CONSULATE HOOTED.

Demonstration Here Laid to Order for Deportation of Communists.

A demonstration was staged outside the Cuban Consulate, 17 Battery Place, yesterday by a crowd of Chinese, Spaniards and South Americans. Placards were carried. The crowd was soon dispersed by the police. The demonstration, according to Augusto Merchan, the Consul General, was caused by an order for the deportation of Communists from Cuba issued last week by President Machado. A statement issued by the Consul General read:

"With reference to the meeting of protest held today in front of the Consulate General of Cuba by some Chinese elements against the deportation to China by the Cuban Government of some Chinese Communists, the Cuban Consul General states that the Cuban Government is allowing said Chinese citizens to go to any country they might choose. The Cuban authorities have no desire of delivering these people to the Chinese Government, of whom they are afraid. Its purpose is only that they leave Cuba, where their Communist propaganda cannot be tolerated."

Lapadura Arraigned on Indictment for Kidnapping Banker.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Angelo Lapadura of Passaic was removed to the Passaic County jail here today following his arraignment on two indictments, one charging him with kidnapping Willard H. Elliott, former Passaic banker, and the other with concealing the crime. Through his counsel Lapadura pleaded not guilty to both charges. Next Monday was set as a tentative date for the trial.

Bail was set at $25,000.

MYSTERIOUS S O S SENDS DESTROYERS TO SHIP

British Rush to Baron Elcho in Mediterranean—Radio Man Says He Is in Peril.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Four British destroyers are rushing from Malta in answer to a mysterious S O S from the British steamer Baron Elcho, which left Port Said Wednesday for Marseilles.

The Commander-in-Chief at Malta received a frantic message from the wireless operator aboard the Baron Elcho, saying he was in danger of being drugged or murdered and appealing for immediate assistance. The destroyers were dispatched at once to intercept the vessel. The Baron Elcho, 4,288 tons, is owned by the Hogarth Shipping Company of Ardrossan, Scotland.

One theory of the situation is that some members of the crew may have smuggled drink or drugs aboard at an Eastern port and run amuck. The Admiralty suspects a hoax, but contact with the vessel will be made tomorrow.

Last June the Admiralty had an urgent call for a warship from the Australian liner Jervis Bay in the Indian Ocean. Five stowaways had run amuck, terrorizing the 800 passengers before they were overpowered and confined in the lazaret, which they set afire three times before they were finally subdued.

$150,000 Cuban Distillery Burns.

HAVANA, Nov. 21.—The Perez Whisky Distillery at Cardenas was destroyed by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $150,000. A heavy rainfall during the conflagration probably saved many business buildings, as the distillery was located in the centre of the city.

FREED OF MURDER CHARGE.

Seaman Is Released at New Orleans When Girl Refuses to Talk.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21 (AP).—John McGouldrick, second mate of the steamship Creole, walked out of the little Pointe-a-la-Hache jail a free man today, and court officials recorded the Jack Kraft murder case as an unsolved mystery.

McGouldrick had been held in jail under indictment of murder, and the trial was set for next Monday, when suddenly today District Attorney Perez requested the judge to nolle-pros the case. He said he felt conviction was impossible, since the chief witness, Gloria Rouser, alias Tom Ordo, traveling companion of Kraft, had failed to testify at the preliminary hearing.

The State had claimed McGouldrick killed Kraft after Kraft choked the girl in a jealous rage.

THE ROMANCE OF HOLEPROOF HOSIERY

A MIGHTY MAN WAS SULTAN AMURATH THE FIFTH!

The sword he flashed before the enraptured eyes of his 237 admiring wives was sheathed in emeralds, rubies and other sparkling gems. When the designing staff of Holeproof Hosiery discovered the Sultan's sword, they chose one of the simpler motifs in its intricate Oriental scheme and produced the pattern of Holeproof Style 411, sketched at the right. It is one of the tempting bevy of Holeproof fancy hose which are now piled up for your approval in Weber and Heilbroner stores.

EDGE VOTED ENVOY; BAIRD IS SENATOR

New Ambassador to France, Endorsed Unanimously, to Sail for France Next Month.

BAIRD LUMBER MERCHANT

He Also Is a Power in New Jersey Politics—To Serve Until 1930 Election, When Strife Is Due.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—By unanimous vote, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey to be Ambassador to France, immediately after President Hoover sent the nomination to the Capitol today.

Soon afterward it was announced that Governor Larson of New Jersey had appointed David Baird Jr. of Camden to fill the seat until the elections next November.

Senators Keen of New Jersey and Harrison of Mississippi eulogized Mr. Edge in addresses to the Senate.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Edge have gone to New Mexico to visit the Senator's 15-year-old son, who is at a school at Las Animas. They expect to depart for Paris during the first week in December.

When Mr. Edge's nomination reached the Senate, Chairman Borah asked immediate action without the formality of sending it to the Foreign Relations Committee, as is usual with diplomatic appointments.

Mr. Edge was elected to the Senate in 1918 and re-elected in 1924 for the term ending in March, 1931. He was chosen Governor of New Jersey in 1916. Prior to that he had served several terms in the House and the Senate of the New Jersey Legislature. He was delegate at large from the State in the Republican National Conventions of 1920, 1924 and 1928.

Early Supporter of Hoover.

He was one of the first of the Eastern Republican leaders to espouse the Hoover cause early in the pre-convention campaign of last year. Mr. Edge has been a consistent opponent of the dry law during his career in the Senate. As a member of the Finance Committee he took a part in the drafting of the Senate tariff bill and his name has repeatedly been brought into the lobby testimony by representatives of protected interests. He was born in Philadelphia on Nov. 21, 1874.

His legal residence is Ventnor, N. J., a suburb of Atlantic City. He is reputed to be a man of large wealth, having amassed his fortune in the advertising and publishing business.

The President also sent to the Senate today the following nominations:

Foreign Service Officer, to also be a Consul—Henry Carter of Massachusetts.

To be a member of the California Débris Commission—Lieut. Col. Thomas M. Robbins, Corps of Engineers.

DAVID BAIRD JR.,
Who Succeeds Walter Edge, New Ambassador to France, as United States Senator From New Jersey.

Baird a Lumber Merchant.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 21.—David Baird Jr., named by Governor Larson to succeed Walter E. Edge in the Senate, is a wealthy lumber merchant of Camden and one of the pillars of the Republican State organization in New Jersey.

Under the designation from Governor Larson Mr. Baird will serve until after the general election next year. A successor to serve out the unexpired term of Senator Edge, which will come to an end on March 4, 1931, will be nominated at the New Jersey primaries next June, when a nomination will also be made for the full six-year term to follow.

Governor Larson made his announcement that Mr. Baird would be the successor of Senator Edge at Newark. He had been attending a board of directors' meeting at the New Jersey National Bank and Trust Company when he was informed that the United States Senate had approved the appointment of Senator Edge. Without waiting to receive the latter's resignation as a United States Senator, Governor Larson announced that he would appoint Mr. Baird to fill the vacancy.

"David Baird Jr. is an outstanding citizen who, I know, will reflect great credit on his State as a member of the United States Senate," was all the Governor would say in comment on the appointment.

Whether Governor Larson's designee will be a candidate for either the nomination for the "short" or the "long" term in the United State Senate or for both at the primaries next Spring is not known tonight. Mr. Baird has said nothing himself to justify an inference being drawn.

It is probable that the matter has not yet been determined and that when a determination is reached it will be in the light of developments within the strife-torn Republican organization of New Jersey during the months that will intervene before the June primaries.

The Republicans in this State fully realize that they will be confronted with a hard fight next year when the time comes to elect a successor to Senator Edge.

After many years of factional strife, harmony has become the watchword of the Republican State leaders, and it is certain that the selection of a candidate to enter in the June primaries with the backing of the organization will be made only after a minute measuring of the vote-getting potentialities of several aspirants for the position.

In connection with this the name of Representative Franklin Fort, an Essex County Republican, who is secretary of the Republican National Committee and a close friend of President Hoover, has been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate next year for the seat so long occupied by Senator Edge in the upper house at Washington. Representative Fort is credited with a strong following throughout the State.

Judging from talk in Republican circles, it is regarded possible that Governor Larson's appointee might step aside next year for Representative Fort in the event the latter, as the primaries draw nearer, should indicate his desire or willingness to run. In that event Mr. Baird is viewed as a strong possibility for the Gubernatorial nomination the following year as successor to Governor Larson, whose term will expire at the end of 1931.

Everything so far, however, is speculation, and many friends of Mr. Baird today gave it as their opinion that he would make the race next year.

In that event he will probably have to fight it out in the primaries with former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen. Mr. Frelinghuysen has not as yet made formal announcement of his candidacy. When he learned today of the confirmation of Senator Edge as Ambassador to France and of Governor Larson's announcement, he said that he would issue a statement tomorrow, when it is generally assumed that he will throw his hat into the ring.

It was announced today that there would be a general gathering of Republican leaders at Trenton on Tuesday, when the Legislature is due to convene again. At that time it is expected that the whole situation will be gone over, even though no decisions with regard to the Senatorial nominations next year may be reached so far in advance of the primaries.

One thing is certain: the candidacy of Mr. Frelinghuysen would be most unwelcome to a majority of the Republican leaders of the State, even though Jesse Salmon, chieftain in Essex County, where both Mr. Frelinghuysen and Representative Fort reside, already has come out in support of the former.

It was learned that Mr. Baird, after a recent conference at Trenton, had offered to stand aside as a candidate for the appointment to the United States Senate in favor of former Governor Edward C. Stokes, veteran Republican leader of the State. The appointment was then formally offered by Governor Larson to Mr. Stokes. On Tuesday Mr. Stokes sent a letter to the Governor in which he formally declined the appointment.

In his communication he told Governor Larson that, out of consideration for his health, he felt compelled to refrain from accepting a position for which he had actively contended last year in the primaries against Hamilton Kean, who won the nomination and was elected.

Late today, when he learned of the announcement made by Governor Larson, Mr. Stokes expressed great satisfaction with the Governor's choice.

"The appointment of David Baird Jr. is a deserved recognition of merit on the part of the Governor," he said.

"David Baird has given of his time to an extent scarcely known for the civic betterment of our State. He has shown ability, self-sacrifice, unselfishness and a most commendable willingness to serve the Commonwealth.

"He was not ambitious for this position and was willing at all times and indeed offered to step aside for other available prospects. He therefore was not a self-seeker and the honor comes to him unsolicited after an effort to obtain others to take the place.

"His father, whose exceptionally honorable record and career in this State is a part of our history, will look down with pride upon his boy, sitting in the United States Senate, the highest legislative body in the world."

Baird's Father in Senate.

The father of Governor Larson's appointee, who died last year, served a short term in the United States Senate, filling a vacancy which occurred when Senator Mahlon Pitney died in office while Walter E. Edge was Governor. He received his appointment from the latter and then stepped aside to let the Governor make his way to the Senate.

Mr. Baird occupies an important position of leadership, his influence reaching out to practically all the South New Jersey counties.

He was born in Camden in 1881, and was graduated from Princeton as a civil engineer with the class of 1903. He entered his father's lumber business, and he is now vice president of the company, also vice president of a large insurance company in Camden.

Mr. Baird is a director of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and of the First National Bank of Camden.

NEW GIANT PEAKS ARE FOUND BY BYRD

By Commander R. E. BYRD,
Leader of the Antarctic Expedition.

been bad and, when we passed over these crevasses, my thoughts turned also to those mechanics back in camp who had worked hour after hour in the bitter cold to make the engines right for us. And I couldn't help but send thoughts of thanks to those chaps.

Unfortunately, the mechanics who contribute so greatly to successful flights are generally forgotten. I don't see how it would have been possible to find three better men than Bubier, Roth and Demas. The Marine Corps, army and the Wright Company each has every reason to be proud of its representative.

Follow Mountains 150 Miles.

Not long after passing the crevassed area, we sighted great mountains on the starboard bow. Later, on the return, from 5,000 feet we thought we could follow them for 150 miles. We judge that we saw all the way to Beardmore Glacier, where Scott and Shackleton ascended to the plateau on their polar effort.

Mac photographed this range and a new one running near it in the same direction. We can definitely join up Axel Heiberg Glacier with Beardmore Glacier. This is a magnificent range.

As we approached the mountains peak after peak came into view until finally the whole horizon from the southeast to the southwest was filled with mountains. It looked as if nature had built these impassable ramparts to keep forever the secret of the South Pole.

But, as we drew nearer, we saw huge glaciers from which ice was debouching onto the Barrier through great ragged gashes in the mountains. These are the outlets for the two-mile-high plateau of ice in the centre of which lies the South Pole.

Majestic Succession of Peaks.

Never have I seen such rugged mountains or such magnificent scenery—great mountain masses rising from sea level precipitously to thousands of feet, peak after peak towering heights of ten, twelve and fifteen thousand feet.

Captain McKinley photographed with his mapping camera dozens of mountain peaks never before seen. He will develop his films so that the world can see what we saw and science can study at its leisure and with a microscope these extraordinary glacial phenomena. Describe these mountains we cannot, but the aerial survey camera will do it for us.

Perhaps one of the biggest moments of the whole expedition was the landing at the foot of the mountains, for landing away from base on an unknown field is always uncertain and even more so in the polar regions with a heavy load aboard.

Smith "Brings Mail to Mountains."

So far as our aviation mission is concerned and so far as a very great many other vital things were concerned, all our eggs were in the plane when the landing was made.

All was staked on that landing. It was an unknown quantity. What a colossal mess it would have been had we failed! It was one of those risks one must sometimes take in the polar regions to win.

To Dean Smith was given this big responsibility of landing on unknown ground, the character of which is not easy to judge from the air. But Dean did it. He did his stuff. He carried the mail to the mountains!

When we had built our base and took the air again, we could look back at the little pile of food and gasoline. It appeared very tiny and utterly lonely there on the great expanse of snow with these tremendous mountains in the background.

These great mountains make our problem a peculiarly difficult one and prevent a non-stop flight to the Pole from Little America. We cannot carry a sufficient load of gasoline to scale those peaks, reach the Pole and return non-stop, so that is why we must have gasoline available at the foot of these mountains when we will become short of fuel on our return.

Perilous Landing on the Barrier.

Soon after passing the crevasses on our return, we reached the area between seventy-five and 100 miles from Little America which the dog teams had reported as being dangerous for airplane landing and some parts of it they said were impossible.

About this time the motors began to miss. Harold June reported that we were running low of gas. What had become of the gas we didn't know, but we had plenty aboard when we left the mountains.

Suddenly all three engines stopped. Things looked black, for we were in that dangerous area. Dean Smith had the wheel. Again it was up to him. The terrain looked rough from the air. As we glided down for a landing there was plenty of time to wonder just which sastrugs would smash the landing gear.

When we bumped hard and rocked along crazily and finally came to rest without smashing up, we were greatly surprised. This is the third time that Dean has landed successfully away from base.

Fighting Spirit of the Men.

During the next thirty-six hours out there on the Barrier, a hundred miles from camp, working in the cold, June, Mac and Dean showed the stuff they are made of. I know few things better than fighting the elements and bucking difficulties alongside fellows like these.

Harold June was a great help from the time we left. He is an expert radio operator, mechanic and pilot. He is resourceful and undaunted. Mac had the most strenuous task of us all as he mapped every inch of the flight with a fifty-pound camera.

After we got on the ground Mac worked like a Trojan. I couldn't make him rest. Our big plane is a handful for four men to handle. Mac is preparing to spend tonight developing some of his photographs.

It was, of course, good that we could follow the trail, because if we had landed in an unknown region it would have been most difficult for Bernt Balchen and Carl Petersen to have found us to give us gasoline.

We had perfect weather the whole way. It is remarkable that Bill Haines and Henry Harrison could have predicted with accuracy good weather for 500 miles in this unusually changeable region.

It reminded me of the North Pole flight when Bill said to me suddenly one day, "I have been keeping two good days up my sleeve for your North Pole flight and now I'm going to let them loose, so you'd better go." We went, and Bill was right, as he was this time.

It must not be forgotten that every man in camp contributes to any operation down here. It is their toil in preparation that wins. No leader has ever been helped more enthusiastically than these fellows have helped me. They work so harmoniously together that a leader is no more use than a sore thumb.

Barrier Known 100 Miles Wider.

Now to come to the scientific aspects of the flight from a geographical standpoint. We naturally do not want to draw conclusions until we have studied Mac's photographic maps.

But we can say, in addition to what we have told about the mountain range to the westward, that we seem to have extended the eastern limit of the Barrier about 100 miles, that there appear to be no mountains at Latitude 82 to the eastward, as reported by Captain Amundsen, and that it is doubtful if land exists at his appearance of land.

This is no reflection whatever on Captain Amundsen, as he was himself doubtful about this land and did not name or chart the mountains. In fact, all of us have the highest respect and admiration for the job this great explorer did.

The fine view we had from 5,000 feet seems to indicate that it is not impossible that the Barrier may run on to the eastward hundreds of miles, and there is no proof yet that there is not some connection with the Weddell Sea.

But it is too soon in the game to make any definite statements along these lines. Our photographs, we think, will show a different position for some of the mountain ranges than that shown on the chart, and we believe there will be some interesting things to say after we have studied the photographs.

Finding of "New Family."

"I don't believe I got a bigger kick on the flight than I did on return to Little America when I looked into my room and found my good friend Holly with eight pups.

I was flattered beyond measure that she should have so honored my room. It was only then that I got the drift of the "welcome home papa" sign written on my door in large letters.

Igloo, however, was as disgusted as I was pleased because Holly wouldn't allow him to stay in his box in my room. He didn't seem to fancy being crowded out by a lot of pups. That is probably why he was up and around at midnight when we landed in the plane and why he seemed to have something on his mind.

SLOANE TO GET A DAY OUT OF DEATH HOUSE

Former College Student in Sing Sing Obtains Writ for Plea and Makes Good His Boast.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 21.—By the terms of a writ of habeas corpus signed today by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser, Roy H. Sloane, 24 years old, the former Columbia University student held in the death house at Sing Sing since his part in planning a jail break last week, will enjoy a little excursion to the White Plains court house on next Tuesday morning. Thereby Sloane has kept his promise to the Sing Sing authorities to "get out of this cell at least once" after they, in placing him in solitary confinement, had told him he would have to stay there for the rest of his prison term—a matter of about seven years.

He will argue his sixth application for release on the ground that he is illegally held. His mother, Mrs. Anna Bogenholm Sloane, authoress and lecturer, appeared in court with a bundle of legal papers, which she said had been drawn up by her son. One was a petition for the writ covering eight typewritten pages, and upon which the writ was automatically granted as a matter of legal procedure.

It was announced recently by Mrs. Sloane that her son would transfer his fight for liberty to Kings County, but as he was convicted in Westchester the legal procedure had to be referred to White Plains.

Mrs. Sloane said that Warden Lawes had exonerated her son in the plot to break out of Sing Sing.

In his petition Sloane contends that on May 25, after he had been acquitted of grand larceny at White Plains, he was kidnapped by two keepers from Sing Sing and was taken to the prison. Then he was transferred to Dannemora and later taken back to Sing Sing. Sloane sets forth that his sentence for having brass knuckles is a "nullity and void of legal force, because he had previously been acquitted of grand larceny, and that at the time he had brass knuckles he was not a legal prisoner in Sing Sing." This same point was raised twice before and each time the court remanded him to prison.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE TO TROY IS URGED

INITIAL COST $34,000,000

Report Approved by Chambers of Commerce Would Have State Construct Speedway.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Immediate acquisition by Westchester County of the right of way for the extension of Riverside Drive to North Tarrytown and construction by the State of a riverside speedway to Troy, creating "one of the marvels of the world," are recommended by a committee of the Westchester County Chapter of New York State Society of Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors in a report made public today.

The report was approved last night at a meeting of more than 500 representatives of chambers of commerce along the Hudson River from New York to Peekskill. The reporting committee consists of T. Kennard Thomson, chairman, a New York consulting engineer; E. G. MacBeth and Charles H. Sells.

The report calls for the immediate acquisition of the right of way for the first part of the project from New York to North Tarrytown at an estimated cost of $34,000,000. It proposes that the county acquire by excess condemnation "additional areas on either side of the right of way, wherever practicable, which can be sold after the improvement is completed and the land has increased in value, thus wholly or in part returning to the county the original costs of the lands." The report urges haste in obtaining funds for construction purposes from the State of New York.

Park Commission Plan Commended.

The committee endorses the report on the project between New York and North Tarrytown made by the Westchester County Park Commission, terming it "a careful study of the facts, indicating that this is an entirely practical proposition at an estimated cost of $34,000,000." The committee agrees with the view of Jay Downer, chief engineer of the Park Commission, that the drive should be constructed apart from the streets of the city of Yonkers.

The committee calls attention to the low cost to the State of maintaining the Albany Post Road and declares it is now logical that the State should bear a portion of the expense of building a river boulevard to link New Jersey traffic via the new Hudson River bridge, and the traffic from lower New York State with Northern New York and the West.

Would Run Drive North of Troy.

"Your committee appointed to investigate and report on the proposed Riverside Drive extension from the northerly line of the city of New York to some point in Westchester County," the report says, "is in hearty accord with it and think such a project should be carried through for the general convenience of the public not only of Westchester County, but for use as a main high-speed artery connecting New York City with New York State on the east side of the Hudson River.

"As Broadway extends to and beyond Albany, so should Riverside and Broadview Drive extend to and far north of Troy, never leaving, if possible to avoid doing so, the banks of the Hudson River. The increased assessed value due to such a marvelous drive would repay the State and various counties many times. Aside from the material considerations treated above, too much cannot be said regarding the scenic value of an extension of Riverside Drive through Westchester County, affording the beautiful view of the Hudson River and the Palisades. The grandeur of such a driveway would be one of the marvels of the world, and a very profitable one at that."

14 Federal Women Prisoners Moved

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—In pursuance of its policy to bring about improvement of conditions surrounding Federal prisoners in local penal institutions and jails, the Department of Justice, through the Bureau of Prisons, has ordered the removal of fourteen women prisoners from the South Carolina Penitentiary at Columbia to the workhouse at Cincinnati, Ohio. The reason assigned was the unsatisfactory conditions at Columbia, including the lack of a matron in the women's division. This action follows the removal a week ago of certain men prisoners from the State farm at Magood, S. C., where existing conditions were unsatisfactory to the department.

WAR ON RUM BOATS TOLD AT TRIAL OF 8

THREE CAPTAINS ACCUSED

2 in Court, but the Other Is Said to Have Fled—Bribery Laid to Wylk in Seizure at Dietz Mansion.

Engagements in the "naval warfare" involved in suppressing liquor importation were described yesterday by government witnesses in the trial of Rudolph Wylk and seven co-defendants charged with implication in the "Long Island liquor ring." The case is being heard by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey and a jury.

A. O. Rogers, Customs Inspector, called to the stand by Assistant United States Attorney Thomas E. Kerwin, testified that on April 16, 1927, he and others in a revenue cutter had overtaken the auxiliary schooner Vinces, commanded by Captain Michael Gillom, off Montauk Point, and seized 1,451 cases of whisky and beer, 99 barrels of malt and 551 bottles of assorted liquors.

The capture of the auxiliary schooner Amaranth, one of the syndicate's vessels, was recounted by J. P. Ryan, coxswain of the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell. The cutter crew determined upon the chase after observing the blinking of a mysterious light through a telescope. Concluding that the flashes constituted code signals, they gave chase. At a distance of five and one-half miles the Amaranth sighted the cutter off her port beam and tried to get away. The cutter overtook her nine miles off Long Beach, arrested the crew, including Captain Rupert Hughes, and confiscated 585 cases of gin and champagne, Ryan said. He identified sample bottles in court. He declared that Captain Hughes had left New York on a steamer bound for Canada and had not reappeared to answer the indictment.

Mayme Tyre, a typist, and George E. Manson, boss stevedore of Jacksonville, her employer, identified the signature of Karl Lounberg, captain of the syndicate's vessel Litchfield, one of those on trial. Manson testified that a cargo of lumber was loaded aboard the Litchfield in such a manner as to leave a large concealed hole amidships. The government contends that this hole was filled with liquor. John F. Chapman, ship chandler, also from Jacksonville, identified Wylk as the "Mr. Adams" who had paid him $1,750.94 for repairs to the vessel.

Another witness was Sergeant Walter Brown of the Nassau County police, who told of arresting Wylk and the drivers of a heavy truck parked on the roadway beside St. Joseph's Villa, formerly the Deitz mansion, near Hempstead, L. I. He asserted that Wylk had attempted to bribe him with "a large sum of money," for which he was told to apply to a "third party." Brown declared that a quantity of liquor had been found in the villa.

Others on trial besides Wylk and Lounberg are Fred Rohrer, Otto Dierks, Ernest Whitehead, Peter Blohm, Captain Gillom and Bernard Molitor. The trial will be resumed today.

PAY TRIBUTE TO McGEEHAN.

Bronx Grand Jurors Present Resolution to District Attorney.

A copy of a resolution expressing appreciation of the manner in which John E. McGeehan, recently elected justice of the Supreme Court, has conducted the offices of District Attorney of Bronx County for six years was presented to Mr. McGeehan last night at a meeting of the Grand Jurors' Association of Bronx County at the county court house.

Mr. McGeehan and Charles B. McLaughlin, newly elected District Attorney, spoke to the 100 members of the organization present. The association, which is composed of the entire panel of 500 grand jurors, elected James J. Lyons, who presided last night, as president for the coming fiscal year. Joseph V. Standish was re-elected as secretary-treasurer.

MISSOURI STUDENT, 'STRANDED,' ENDS LIFE

University Freshmen Stabs Himself With Scissors—Leaves a Letter Explaining Act.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 21 (AP).—Edwin A. Garrett, aged 20, of Paragould, Ark., a freshman engineer at the University of Missouri, died in his room here today of a scissors wound in the heart. A university physician said the wound was self-inflicted.

The body was found soon after noon by another student in the house. The physician said that Garrett apparently had been dead since 7 A. M. today. Beside the boy was a glass containing a liquid which had not been analyzed this afternoon.

Members of a fraternity adjacent to the rooming house said they had seen Garrett through his window studying until after midnight.

Garrett left two letters, one addressed to his brother, Thomas V. Garrett of St. Louis, and the other to "Helen," whose identity was not learned. He said he was "stranded," without sufficient clothing or money, that he was failing and that "I have more enemies here than I have friends."

Beside the letters were two empty envelopes addressed to his father, James S. Garrett of Chicago, and his mother, who lives in Paragould.

AVERT NECESSITY OF EXTRA SESSION

Republican Leaders Agree to Validate Building Program in the Next Legislature.

WILL NOT VOID CONTRACTS

Duties of Sites Commission, Declared Illegal, Will Devolve on Department of Public Works.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 21.—The necessity of calling a special session of the Legislature this month has been averted, Governor Roosevelt announced today. He said a "gentlemen's agreement" with the Republican leaders had been reached concerning the State's building program, which, by the decision on Tuesday of the Court of Appeals, had been invalidated.

The court, by its ruling that legislators could not legally serve as members of any commission which handles State funds, rendered illegal all acts of the Building and Sites Commission. The commission has already spent about $30,000,000 since its creation in 1926.

The Governor, in announcing the agreement, said:

"I have reached a gentlemen's agreement with the Republican leaders, which will eliminate the necessity for a special session of the Legislature. Under the agreement, the 1930 Legislature will validate all past acts of the Building Commission, and also validate all work in connection with the State office buildings now in progress of being let."

Contracts totaling about a half million dollars are about to be awarded for the State's new office buildings in New York City and in Albany. The Buffalo building is not affected, the Governor pointed out, because no contracts were to be awarded for some time in connection with that project.

Payments Will Be Delayed.

Under the terms of the agreement, the contractors will not receive their money from the State for the two contracts until after the first of the year.

"It probably will hold up a little of the December money," he said, "but we do not anticipate any trouble."

One of the first things the 1930 Legislature will do is to put through a bill transferring to the Department of Public Works the duties of the Building and Sites Commission.

After the Governor and Republican leaders had studied the opinion of the Court of Appeals yesterday, it was thought that the only way out of the dilemma was to call an extraordinary session of the Legislature, so that all past acts of the commission could be validated. It was believed that if this were not done the work on the two State office buildings would be delayed.

Governor Roosevelt is to leave Albany Saturday for a ten-day stay, probably at Warm Springs, Ga., although he said today he had not definitely decided. He will take the executive budget with him for study.

MAYFLOWER GROUP ELECTS.

T. S. McLane Again Heads New York Society—69 Members Added.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Mayflower Society in the State of New York was held yesterday afternoon at 120 East Seventy-first Street. Sixty-nine new members were reported for the past year, making the membership of the society 1,045. Significance was attached to the fact that more than half of the new members are under 30 years of age. The officers of the society during the past year were unanimously re-elected. They are:

THOMAS SABINE McLANE, governor.
FRANCIS RUSSELL STODDARD, deputy governor.
CHARLES ELLIOT WARREN, captain.
The Very Rev. Dr. HOWARD CHANDLER ROBBINS, elder.
GEORGE ERNEST FARYS, secretary.
WILLIAM HENRY CHILDS, treasurer.
L. EFFINGHAM DE FOREST, historian.
Dr. HENRY DWIGHT CHAPIN, surgeon.

Mrs. Cass Gilbert, Frederick Dwight and Dr. William S. Thomas were elected assistants for two years, and James Stewart Cushman, trustee of the permanent fund for three years.

OPPOSES TARIFF BAR ON ISLAND PRODUCTS

General Parker Says Dependencies Could as Justly Tax Our Exports to Them.

PHILIPPINE GAINS NOTED

Imports From United States Increased 17 Per Cent—Improvement Reported in Porto Rico Also.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The imposition of tariff duties on Philippine and Porto Rican products and the extension of the American Coastwise Shipping laws to the Philippines, both of which proposals have been debated in Congress recently, are emphatically opposed by Brig. Gen. F. LeJ. Parker, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, in his annual report for the fiscal year, 1929, submitted today.

Extension of the coastwise laws to the Philippines, he contended, "would be prejudicial to the interests of the islands and it is at least doubtful whether it would ultimately benefit American shipping."

"If Philippine and Porto Rican products are to enter the continental United States subject to duties such as are imposed on foreign goods, then those dependencies should be accorded the correlative right to collect duties upon products of the continental United States entering their ports," he said.

Turning to general conditions in the Philippines, General Parker said that economic progress was necessarily slow, but on the whole the year had been a satisfactory one.

Trade Gains With Philippines.

Revenues of the Insular Government for the fiscal year exceeded expenditures, and in December, 1928, there was a net unappropriated cash surplus of $6,589,633. The net bonded indebtedness as of June 30, 1929, was $85,517,000, against which there were accumulated sinking funds amounting to $21,759,105.71.

The value of the external trade of the Philippines for the calendar year 1928 registered a total of $289,711,444, as against $271,425,557 in 1927, an increase of about 6.6 per cent. Imports increased in value from $115,851,472 in 1927 to $134,656,893 in 1928, or 16.2 per cent, while exports decreased from $155,574,085 in 1927 to $155,054,546 in 1928, or about three-tenths of 1 per cent.

The balance of trade continued in favor of the islands, but was reduced from $39,722,614 in 1927 to $20,397,648 in 1928.

Of the total external trade 69 per cent was with the United States. Exports from the United States amounted to over $83,500,000, an increase in value of more than 17 per cent.

Tells of Porto Rico Conditions.

In Porto Rico the effect of the destructive hurricane of September, 1928, dominated conditions.

The Treasury, however, showed a cash balance of $816,555 in July 1, 1929, out of receipts which aggregated $15,650,585.

The floating debt was $1,945,833 and the bonded debt was $25,285,000, with $18,356,300 more for the municipalities.

In the external trade, consignments from the United States and from foreign countries showed an increase over the previous fiscal year, the total for 1927-28 being $92,342,329 and for 1928-29, $97,917,759, of which $85,078,866 was from the United States.

Shipments to the United States and foreign countries, however, showed a very great decrease, the total for 1927-28 being $103,534,739 and for 1928-29, $81,850,620, of which $76,471,829 went to the United States.

WOULD-BE EMIGRES SENT BACK TO SIBERIA

Soviet Returning Mennonites of German Descent Although Reich Would Admit 4,000.

By WALTER DURANTY.
Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Nov. 21.—A curious and unfortunate situation has arisen with regard to the several thousand "colonists" of German descent of the Mennonite faith who have been drifting into the neighborhood of Moscow during the past ten weeks in the hope of joining the ten or fifteen thousand Mennonites who have emigrated to Canada during recent years.

The Canadian Government, it appears, was reluctant to grant them entry visas without further investigation and although the Soviet after some hesitation agreed that they might go—several hundred have already left—the German Government also delayed granting transit or temporary visas to Germany until Canada should decide.

The result was that the Soviet a few days ago lost its patience and re-embarked more than 2,000 home for Siberia. Two days ago Germany agreed to admit 4,000, but to date the re-embarkation to Siberia continues. The affair is of more than local importance, as much sympathy for the colonists is being felt in Germany, where large funds are being collected for their relief.

Germano-Russian relations have not improved during the past year and the decision of the Soviet to refuse a visa to one of the most eminent European correspondents, Paul Scheffer of the Berliner Tageblatt, who has spent the last five years in Moscow, has called forth a vigorous protest by the editor of the Tageblatt, Theodor Wolff.

The German Ambassador at Moscow, Dr. von Dircksen, is absent on vacation and his subordinates hope the Mennonite affair will yet be arranged but do not disguise the possible effects of failure to settle it on Russo-German friendship.

RECORD SMOKE SCREEN HIDES CANAL'S LOCKS

Largest Ever Set Off in Panama Tests Causes Vessels to Sound Fog Signals.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BALBOA, Nov. 21.—The largest smoke screen ever set off in the experiments of the Chemical Warfare Section here completely covered the Pacific locks of the Panama Canal at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores today and vessels in the canal soon began sounding fog signals as a light rain held the smoke close to the ground.

Today's was the first experiment with a screen several miles in area, and tomorrow the test will be completed with many airplanes from France Field hovering overhead, trying to spot the locks and other vital structures of the canal which the screen is intended to conceal. An experiment on a small scale with smoke pots, set off around the Pedro Miguel locks last year, prompted this trial on a larger scale.

When huge candles of phosphorus were lighted on the tops of the hills surrounding the Pacific locks this morning the Green Mountains suddenly appeared to be active volcanoes. In less than half an hour the drifting clouds of smoke completely blotted out the locks from observation and photography by the planes overhead. The test tomorrow will be on a more elaborate scale after the experience gained today.

Burr Heads Columbia Bureau.

The appointment of Henry Burr, tenor, as the new director of the Artists' Bureau of the Columbia Broadcasting system was announced yesterday by William S. Paley, president. Mr. Burr was one of the first artists ever heard on the radio. He will begin his new duties on Monday. It is said that more than 5,000,000 phonograph records of Mr. Burr's rendering of "Good Night, Little Girl, Good Night," have been sold.

SEEK AMERICAN SHIP FOR OUR DELEGATES

State Department Officials Try to Get Sailings Changed for Naval Parley Group.

LEVIATHAN MAY BE CHOICE

George Washington Alternate Possibility for 40 Who Will Go to London in January.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—In an effort to obtain passage on an American ship for the American delegation to the London naval conference which opens on Jan. 21, the State Department is negotiating with the United States Lines as to the sailing dates of the Leviathan and the George Washington.

At first, in the belief that no American vessel would be sailing at the time the delegation plans to leave, it had tentatively been decided to obtain reservations on the White Star liner Olympic, which will sail from New York a few minutes after midnight on the night of Friday, Jan. 10.

Conferences with officials of the United States Lines since then have opened the possibility of adjusting the sailing dates of the Leviathan or the George Washington so that the delegation could use one of them. The Leviathan is scheduled to sail on Jan. 18 and arrive at Cherbourg on the 24th, but this might be rearranged so that she would leave New York about Jan. 12. The George Washington is due to sail on Jan. 8 and arrive June 16, but her date might also be adjusted for the accommodation of the delegation.

Under the merchant marine act of 1928 American officials going abroad on official business must travel on American ships, if it is possible to use one, or their expenses will not be paid by the government.

Secretary of State Stimson feels that the delegation should arrive in London at least two days in advance of the conference and the arrangements are now being shaped to that end. The delegates who will leave from the United States include, in addition to Mr. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Adams, Senators Reed of Pennsylvania and Robinson of Arkansas, and Ambassador Morrow, who will come here from Mexico City next month to prepare for the conference.

Accompanying them will be the two chief naval advisers, Admiral W. V. Pratt and Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, retired, and most, if not all, of the other technical advisers from the Navy and State Departments, secretaries, clerks, stenographers and other aides.

The entire group, it is now estimated, will number about forty. The list is now being made up here and has nearly been completed. It will be made public as soon as it is completed. J. Theodore Marriner, chief of the Western European Division of the State Department, will be one of the experts to accompany the delegation, and it is expected that some members of the Navy General Board will also be included.

During the conference the State Department will be in charge of Joseph P. Cotton, Under Secretary of State, and the Navy Department will be under the direction of Ernest L. Jahnecke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

At the offices of the United States Lines it was said yesterday that negotiations looking to the booking of passage for the United States delegates on a United States Lines vessel were being carried on in Washington through Mr. Childess, the company's agent there.

The negotiations, it was understood, centred chiefly on the possibility of booking the party on the George Washington, one of the faster vessels in the fleet. This ship is now in dry dock, but is scheduled to make its first trip after repairs on Dec. 12.

SAYS MEANS EXIST TO LENGTHEN LIFE

Dr. Emerson Declares 10 Years Can Be Added by Providing Funds to Fight Tuberculosis.

2,000 AT HEALTH SESSIONS

Paper by Dr. Stockard Advocating Inbreeding in Production of Geniuses Stirs Discussion.

The means are in the hands of the health authorities to increase the average life span by ten years, but it cannot be accomplished on the scale of support which the public is giving, Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health administration at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, told the ninth annual New York City Tuberculosis and Health Conference at the Hotel Biltmore yesterday.

"We have these means in our hands right now without waiting for a single new discovery of a cure for cancer or any other disease," said Dr. Emerson. He said it could be accomplished mainly by making better use of the methods for the cure and prevention of tuberculosis.

"The annual economic loss for the five boroughs in deaths from tuberculosis is $73,000,000," said Dr. Emerson. "This is at the rate of $7,500 per death and through this indirect way each person of the 6,000,000 in this city is paying $12 a year because of tuberculosis alone when the voluntary collective contributions to the fight on the disease is only 8 cents per capita."

2,000 at Health Meetings.

Dr. Emerson's address was delivered at the health conference luncheon which was one of eight meetings attended during the day by more than 2,000 doctors, nurses, public school health workers, teachers, representatives of eighteen different health organizations and persons interested in public health generally. There were meetings in the morning on child health, health education in high schools and on the general methods being used in the public fight on tuberculosis. Meetings followed in the afternoon on cardiac clinic care, oral hygiene, health education in elementary schools and social hygiene.

A paper delivered at a morning session on child health caused a wave of discussion which did not wane completely until adjournment in the evening. This was the advocacy by Dr. Charles R. Stockard, professor of anatomy at the Cornell University Medical College, of in-breeding in the production of geniuses, which he said "civilization so much needs." Dr. Henry Chapin, vice president of the Children's Welfare Association, replied immediately: "We can wait a long time for this kind of genius." Others voiced their opinions in the corridors.

The idea of "mass treatment of health" was the object of an attack by Dr. George H. Bigelow, Commissioner of Public Health of Massachusetts, in another address at the luncheon.

"As much harm is being done in mass treatment of public health problems as was ever done in mass treatment of disease," said Dr. Bigelow. "I plead for an intelligent individualization of the administration of public health, but that means imagination which is not common in a country worshiping at the shrine of mass production."

Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, Commissioner of Health, also spoke at the luncheon. He told of the results of the diphtheria campaign of his department, saying that if present progress were continued, "by 1931 we can say there is no more diphtheria in New York."

Makes Minimum Wage Plea.

Dr. Wynne made a plea for a minimum wage of $3,000 for public doctors, nurses and health inspectors, the same as was recently voted for policemen and firemen. He also suggested that every young doctor graduated from the New York schools spend three years in public health work, thus giving the city the benefit of his training as well as making himself "public health minded."

An appeal that they make "prevention" and not "cure" the policy of their teaching and practice, was made to teachers and health workers in the public schools by Dr. Iago Galdston, secretary of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association.

"We haven't enough means at our disposal to correct all the defects we find in school children, nor to cure the diseases," he said. "We are going to have to be willing to sacrifice some of the contemporaries for the benefit of those who are to come. I know it is hard. It really is pitiful at times. But we have to approach it as a sort of major surgical operation. Remember at all times that our main purpose is one of prevention."

Dr. George L. Ruhland, Commissioner of Health of Syracuse, said many teachers were emphasizing diet who themselves were undernourished. He said he doubted if some of the "dogmatic" practices taught in the schools were really helpful. He cited the question of posture. He said teachers commanded their pupils to sit at rigid attention, feet flat on the floor, bodies erect and heads up, when in reality if one drew his foot up into his seat and sat on it, that might afford just the relaxation needed.

Dr. Stockard declared that child welfare work is "not altogether good." "It is," he declared, "only a fair proposition at best. It has two sides. It is questionable whether the preservation of the life of weaklings will be tolerated when we're more civilized. A stock breeder wouldn't hesitate to kill a colt with a club foot, no matter how much he paid for its parents."

Discussing Breeding of Geniuses.

"Scientists are often asked," he said, "why they don't breed geniuses. We are also asked why the sons and daughters of geniuses are not geniuses. That is because geniuses usually marry inferior persons. Geniuses occur now only once in a thousand years in one family."

Genius is born, not made, the speaker contended, pointing out that Lincoln came of parents "who did not amount to much"; that Pasteur's parents were "half-educated peasants" and that Shakespeare was not taught to be the world's greatest writer.

"Remember geniuses," he said in conclusion, "when you're taking care to save the lives of weaklings. For without geniuses our civilization could not continue."

Dr. Charles B. Davenport, Professor of Genetics at the Carnegie Institution of Washington, denied what he termed a widespread hypothesis that babies are so alike at birth that they can be molded by environment into almost anything their preceptors desire. He contended that children, from the time of their conception, are fundamentally unlike, some being healthy, some sickly, some cheerful, some sombre by temperament, and that the genetical hypothesis is that some are bound to die young and some to live to grow up, other things being equal.

Three factors seem to operate in the molding of children's lives, according to Dr. Franklin Thomas, superintendent of the Children's Institution, Hastings, N. Y. They are geography, stock and culture. All are important, he said.

Poverty, caused by less than living wages paid to parents, and resulting in child labor with poor housing conditions is the chief cause of poor health among children living in industrial cities, Dr. Willystine Goodsell, associate professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia, declared.

Miss Mary Dillon, principal of Public School 59, Manhattan, and Miss Ellen M. Nugent, principal of Public School 136, outlined the methods now employed in the city's schools to safeguard child health.

3 MORE CITY JUSTICES URGED FOR THE BRONX

Commerce Chamber Hears That Congestion Causes Delays of More Than a Year.

The appointment of three additional permanent justices of the two municipal courts in the Bronx to end "the deplorable congestion" of court calendars in those districts was urged in a resolution unanimously adopted by the Bronx Chamber of Commerce yesterday at a luncheon of the chamber in the Concourse Plaza Hotel.

In the resolution offered by George Goldblatt, a member of the chamber, attention was directed to a condition in the two Bronx courts which, it was said, compels litigants frequently to wait a year or more before their cases are brought to trial. Mr. Goldblatt said the courts were so congested that the present justices would require two years to dispose of the cases now on the calendars. The justices and clerical staffs of the two courts, he said, are now working until 7 or 8 P. M. each day.

"Insurance Day" was observed by the chamber, which has among its 8,200 members 136 who are connected with various branches of the insurance business. In line with the "Buy in the Bronx" campaign conducted by the chamber, several agents and brokers urged the patronage of their fellow members. Logan Billingsley, president of the chamber, pointed out that only 20 per cent of all purchases, including insurance, made by Bronx residents, was from Bronx dealers. An increase of 10 per cent in this trade, he said, "would make this community the richest in the world."

Founded Picke Tutoring School.

In a report of the death of Herbert L. Picke, lecturer and educator, in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Nov. 19, Mr. Picke was incorrectly named as head of the Tutoring School of New York. He was founder of the Picke Tutoring School, while the Tutoring School of New York is headed by George Matthew, a friend of Mr. Picke.

MEET ON SMUGGLING BY TRUCKING HERE

Collector of Customs and Railway and Ship Men Confer on Remedy.

HAUL BY RAILWAYS SOUGHT

Legitimate Goods Substituted for Smuggled on Way From Docks to Railways, It Is Said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—Conferences at which it was hoped to lay plans to stop reported smuggling between docks and railroad stations in New York City were started today between customs officials and representatives of leading railroads and steamship lines.

The conference was called by Commissioner of Customs Eble, who presented to the railroad and steamship officials figures to show smugglers were bringing in large quantities of valuable merchandise, billing it to an inland customs port and switching shipments while they were being carried by truck from the steamship docks to the railroad trains to complete their journey.

R. N. Collyer, chairman of the Trunk Line Railway Association, said the railroad officials would take under consideration the commissioner's proposition that the railroads take over the trucking between the docks and railroads in New York. He added, however, he did not believe there would be any decision for some time.

Trucking of foreign merchandise between steamships and railroads in New York is done by bonded truckmen, but the bond is only $500.

Merchandise may be billed as a certain article, Elbe said, and in reality be jewelry or furs. On the way to the railroad from the dock the valuable merchandise is removed, he said, and goods called for in the bill of lading are substituted, so that when the shipment reaches its inland destination it is found to be as called for.

Approximately thirty persons, including customs officials and railway and steamship and truck company officials, attended the meeting.

The presence of Bon Geaslin, secretary to Senator Hawes, Democrat, of Missouri, was accepted as indication that if the railroads declined to take over the trucking between the docks and railroad stations in New York the government would ask Congress to pass legislation providing for government operation of trucks.

This would take the same form as is now used by the Postoffice Department in carrying mails from the steamships to railroad stations and postoffices. Officials of the treasury, however, declined to discuss this angle.

Rosenbluth Ill of Pneumonia.

City Magistrate Abraham Rosenbluth was taken to the Post Graduate Hospital, Second Avenue and Twentieth Street, yesterday morning suffering from pneumonia. Dr. Herman Mosenthal, his physician, said that his patient had been ill of influenza for several days at his home, 378 Powers Avenue, the Bronx. At the hospital it was said he was resting comfortably.

$50,000 PEARLS FOUND IN STREET BY TAXI MAN

Driver Picks Up Mrs. S. M. Metcalf's Necklace and Is Due to Get $5,000 Reward.

Police Commissioner Whalen revealed yesterday the story of a taxicab driver who picked up a $50,000 pearl necklace in the street at Eighty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue, where it had been lost by Mrs. S. Maude Metcalf of 1,060 Fifth Avenue. The driver, Frank De Luca of 9 Crosby Street, is due to receive a $5,000 reward.

Mrs. Metcalf, widow of Manton Metcalf, donned the necklace, consisting of seventy-seven graduated pearls and a diamond clasp, on Monday for a luncheon engagement downtown. The clasp was a little loose, she told the commissioner. She took a taxicab from a spot near her home, she said, and when she arrived in the midtown area discovered the loss.

That was about noon on Monday, and about the time she was reporting the loss to Albert R. Lee & Co., insurance adjusters of 15 William Street, De Luca was cruising in his cab along upper Fifth Avenue. De Luca is employed by the Yellow Taxicab Corporation. He pulled up to the curb at Eighty-sixth Street and there close to the sidewalk in the dust, he saw something glittering. He picked it up, looked at it and put it into his pocket.

De Luca, according to the police, forgot about his find because he was not much impressed with its value, but later in the day he showed it to other chauffeurs at the West Fifty-seventh Street garage of the company. They told him the necklace was valuable. De Luca took it to Carroll Sinnott, official of the company.

Meanwhile, the Police Department had been notified of the loss by the insurance adjusters, and a general alarm was sent out and a $5,000 reward advertised. When Mr. Sinnott informed the police and the necklace reached Police Headquarters, it was discovered that De Luca's find was the missing jewelry.

Yesterday Mrs. Metcalf went to the Lost Property Bureau and claimed it. At the insurance adjuster's it was said that while no decision had been reached, De Luca would probably receive the reward. De Luca lives with his mother, whom he supports. He was out of town yesterday.

EX-CHANCELLOR ON TRIAL.

Former Arizona University Official Accused of Narcotic Deal.

TUCSON, Ariz., Nov. 21 (AP).—Dr. William V. Whitmore, formerly Chancellor of the University of Arizona, was on trial in the Federal court today on charges of conspiracy to violate the narcotic laws. His co-defendant is Tito Flores, proprietor of a Tucson drug store.

A narcotic agent, the first witness, testified that during eight months, from June, 1928, to March, 1929, Dr. Whitmore issued about 2,400 narcotic prescriptions to fifty persons, which were filled by Flores.

The government alleges also that Dr. Whitmore and Flores conducted a mail-order business in narcotics, supplying customers in several Arizona cities.

FLOWER HOSPITAL EXTENDS CAMPAIGN

Dr. Honan Outlines 20-Year Plan for $19,913,000 Institution at Dinner for Workers.

$1,201,565 RAISED TO DATE

Efforts to Increase Fund Will Be Continued Three Months—Two New Trustees Elected.

With $1,201,565 contributed toward the $3,000,000 fund for the construction and equipment of a new 300-bed building, Flower Hospital's campaign was extended to the first week in February at a dinner at the Hotel McAlpin last night. Three hundred and fifty volunteer workers heard plans for the eventual medical centre which will be completed within twenty years at a total cost of $19,913,000, according to the program.

It was announced that a total of $51,555 was collected last week, including an anonymous gift of $50,000. The trustees of the hospital have guaranteed $1,000,000 toward the fund.

Outlining the prospects of the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital, Dr. William Francis Honan emphasized the educational and research work conducted in the past and the necessity for more space and better equipment. Work was being carried out in the old hospital building under very unfavorable conditions, said Dr. Honan, who termed the need for an up-to-date building for clinical observations, cancer research and homeopathic medicine imperative.

"For four decades," he said, "Flower Hospital has been active, but advances in hospitalization have been such as to make its present plant inadequate for the triple purpose of the institution, namely, the care of the sick, the education of physicians and nurses and research in the prevention and cure of disease."

Solicitation for the balance of the fund was to be continued during the next three months, Charles D. Halsey, president of the board of trustees, announced. Mr. Halsey also announced that Charles Strauss and Howard S. Cullman had been elected to membership on the hospital board of trustees. Mr. Strauss was formerly president of the Board of Water Supply of New York City and Commissioner of Education. Mr. Cullman is a Commissioner of the Port of New York Authority and president of the Beekman Street Hospital.

Ossining Board Weighs A. J. Yerks's Refusal to Resign.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Members of the village board and their legal advisers were today seeking means to dispose of Austin J. Yerks, chairman of the highway committee of the board. Yerks, at the meeting of the board on Tuesday night, refused to resign after the board, by a vote of three to two, asked for his resignation because of his alleged "loose, unbusinesslike conduct."

A. W. Hendrickson, village attorney, said today that the board had no power to remove a member through court action. He said the only relief through the courts would be in the bringing of a taxpayer's action. The board will meet again on Dec. 3, when it is expected something will be done to end the impasse.

The charges against Yerks grew out of the efforts of Trustee J. Harold Purdy to account for 356 Belgian paving blocks which had been stored in Nelson Park since 1928. In a statement to the board Purdy said the blocks were in the park until Sept. 17, when Yerks removed them. Purdy reiterated a statement of Yerks that he had sold the blocks to Alphonse Cardinale at 5 cents apiece, and a statement from Cardinale denying he purchased the blocks or that he knew anything about them.

Prosecution Says McManus Telephone Call Lured Rothstein to His Death

luck, y'understand," had lost and refrained thereafter.

Calls McManus "Best Loser."

Mr. Solomon-Boston proved to be of great value to the defense when James D. C. Murray, counsel for McManus, took him in hand. He gave testimony tending to weaken the State's contention that McManus had killed Rothstein because the game had been crooked. McManus, who lost $51,000 in cash at the play, was "the best loser I ever saw," testified the witness.

Cross-examined by the defense, Bowe and Meehan declared that McManus had never expressed resentment against Rothstein because of the poker loss. The defense brought out that the slain gambler and the defendant had dined together in the interval between the card game and the murder. They had chatted frequently at Lindy's, a Broadway restaurant described as Rothstein's "hang-out."

Dr. Charles H. Norris, Chief Medical Examiner, described the wound in the groin which caused Rothstein's death, two days after his wounding, in the Polyclinic Hospital. The clothing worn by Rothstein when shot was produced and identified. The gambler's shoes, socks, underwear and vest were missing. Dr. Norris could not tell what had become of them. He admitted, however, that no tear had appeared in the vest to correspond to the bullet perforation in Rothstein's coat.

The defense lawyer showed by the trend of his cross-examination of the doctor that McManus expected to suggest that Rothstein had not been shot in the hotel room. Mr. Murray sought to show that it would have been physically impossible for the wounded man to walk 200 feet along the corridor and then descend three flights of stairs. Dr. Norris admitted that Rothstein probably had been in anguish, but refused to concede that he could not have made his way to the servants' exit where he was discovered.

Public Excluded From Trial.

Judge Nott opened court at 10:30 A. M. The public benches were all filled at that hour, although the court attendants and the police detail had excluded the general public. Attorneys and friends of the defendant seemed to predominate among the favored few who got past the guards. The jurors were all in their places and McManus had been sitting for fifteen minutes at his lawyer's table.

The defendant had donned another suit for the fourth day of his trial. He appeared in a well-tailored suit of light brown, tie, socks and breast pocket handkerchief matching. He seemed to have come direct from the hands of a thorough-going barber. Of course he was smiling.

Mr. Brothers, of medium height, ruddy of face and urbane and quiet of manner, lost no time in beginning his presentation of the case for the prosecution. He spoke for forty minutes and raised his voice in emphasis only once—when he said "bang!" referring to the sound of the revolver shot.

It was the duty of the District Attorney, he began, to prosecute criminals and he and his assistants were in no sense police officers. The prosecutors were not, he said, detectives. The indictment against George A. McManus, the missing Hyman (Gilly) Biller and two men named only as Joe Doe and Richard Roe, had not been returned on the complaint of any individual.

Defense Objection Sustained.

"The indictment," he said, "was returned by the grand jury—"

Mr. Murray interrupted. He complained to Judge Nott that Mr. Brothers was summing up. The court sustained the objection. Mr. Brothers slowly took a drink of water, squared his shoulders and began again.

"The first bit of proof we shall offer," he said, "is required by the law, proof of the death. That proof will be given by Dr. Charles Norris, the medical examiner. He will state that the cause of death was a bullet wound, which we will say was inflicted by this defendant.

"The next bit of proof we shall offer you will go to the question of a card game, played in September, 1928. A number of men, including Arnold Rothstein and George A. McManus, met in the apartment of James Meehan. The game continued all night and well into the next day.

"In that game Arnold Rothstein lost $219,000 to Nathan Raymond. This defendant lost $51,000. Practically all of his loss went in cash into the hands of Rothstein. The ill-feeling which we will show arose from this game, arose from the fact that Arnold Rothstein did not pay that debt.

"Suspicion arose in the mind of this defendant that it was a crooked game; that there was some 'ring' whereby he was trimmed. That proof will be offered in such fashion that you will be justified in accepting it as motive."

McManus, he continued, registered at the Park Central Hotel on Nov. 2 under the name of "George A. Richards" of Newark, N. J. He paid for the two-room suite, of which 349 is one room, in advance. He paid again in advance on the next day and on the night of the shooting he retained the rooms again and paid at 8 P. M. The suite, Mr. Brothers explained, was in the south wing of the hotel and at the corner of Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street.

The prosecutor described the physical layout of the hotel at some length, returning to Room 349 itself for a moment to say that it had two windows, and the adjoining room had the same.

"McManus's telephone calls," he said, "will be put in. The State will show that he was a frequenter of Lindy's, a restaurant in Broadway near Fiftieth Street, and that he had been seen there with Rothstein. Arnold Rothstein, it will be shown, was a very wealthy man. He had real estate, gambled and had other enterprises.

Tells of Call to Go to Hotel.

"On the night of the homicide he went down to Lindy's in his automobile, driven by his chauffeur and accompanied by Jimmy Meehan. When they got there, we will prove, by the cashier, a message was delivered to Rothstein.

"The person telephoning said, 'Hello, is this Lindy's? Is Rothstein there?'"

Mr. Murray broke in with his second objection. He argued that the telephone conversation was hearsay. Judge Nott ruled otherwise, saying that he would rule finally when testimony on the point was offered.

"Told that Rothstein had not arrived," Mr. Brothers continued, "the caller said: 'This is George McManus. Tell Rothstein to call up Room 349 in the Park Central.'

Scher, the cashier, wrote the message down and delivered it to Rothstein when Rothstein came in. Rothstein left the restaurant and went north with Meehan. This was the direction he would take to reach the hotel.

"We next see Mr. Rothstein, or a person answering his description, on the third floor of the hotel between 10:30 and 11 P. M. We will show you, by evidence which we have had since the beginning of this trial, that a shot was fired in Room 349. It was heard by a witness who had gone to the elevators. Bridget Farry, the chambermaid, saw the defendant in that room at 10:20 P. M.

Mrs. Putnam Heard Shot.

"The other witness, Mrs. Marian A. Putnam, had approached the elevators to descend to the lobby to buy papers or a magazine. She came to the elevator and heard loud voices, a curse—bang! She was frightened, naturally, and started back to her room. She looked back and saw a man, two hands on his abdomen. He raised his face. She will be unable to say whether there was anger or anguish on his face."

It was just a step, he continued, from the point where Mrs. Putnam saw the man to the entrance to the servants' stairway leading to the ground floor of the hotel. Skipping the stairway, Mr. Brothers described the layout of the ground-floor exit for the hotel employes. There was a desk there, and a watchman, a timekeeper and another man, whose functions he did not at the moment recall, were on duty. Their duty was to halt any one entering except employes and to examine bundles carried out by members of the staff.

"This figure," said Mr. Brothers, "with hands clasped to the abdomen, was seen. Rothstein made his way to the desk and said, 'I'm shot.' The night watchman went to the corner and got Policeman Davis. The policeman returned and asked Rothstein who had shot him. 'I won't tell you,' Rothstein replied."

Mr. Brothers told how Rothstein had been treated on the spot by a doctor. He said that Burdette N. Divers, then chief house detective at the Park Central, would be called by the State. Divers, he said, had searched Room 349. Mr. Murray again objected, but the court said he would let the statement stand pending direct testimony.

Detective Joseph Daly, the prosecutor said, heard of the shooting and went to Polyclinic Hospital to talk to Rothstein, whom he knew. Rothstein was too ill to be seen.

"Daly talked to some of the people outside the room at the hospital," said Mr. Brothers, "and got some information. He went to Lindy's restaurant and go more information. He went to Room 349. It was locked. He and other detectives looked up Divers and the door was opened.

"They found the light burning. The shades were pulled down. They found glasses, some ginger ale and some whisky. In the bureau drawer they found some racing sheets and handkerchiefs bearing initials similar to this defendant's. In the closet they found an overcoat bearing his name.

"They drew up the shades and in the north window and found that the upper corner of the fly screen had been broken out, so that it was open. While they were standing there, looking for blood, of which they found none, the telephone rang. It was answered by Divers. Three men came up.

"They were Frank and Thomas McManus, brothers of the defendant, and Hyman Biller. They had some talk there and the men finally went away. The detectives did not know where George A. McManus lived. Frank McManus and his wife were staying at the hotel. The detectives went to their room and got McManus's private telephone number. The operator refused, because it was a private number, to tell the street address. The detectives didn't get it until two days later, the day Rothstein died."

Mr. Brothers then introduced a new figure in the case, William or Willie Assenheim, chauffeur to McManus, who has two cars. According to the State, the chauffeur went to McManus's home, a seven-room apartment on the tenth floor at 51 Riverside Drive, on the night Rothstein was wounded.

"He went up to the apartment," said Mr. Brothers, "and came down and went away with a new overcoat which McManus had bought. From that night until Nov. 27 McManus was not seen. His wife left the day after the shooting and the apartment was locked up. Assenheim has not been seen since that day.

Asserts Biller Saw Shooting.

"Hyman Biller's connection or relation to Mr. McManus is this: McManus was a bookmaker at the race tracks. Biller was his cashier or 'pay-off' man. We will prove that Biller was in the room when Rothstein was shot.

"On the afternoon of the Sunday when Rothstein was shot, McManus telephoned to a certain drugstore and wanted whisky. The clerk on duty told him that the 'boss' was not in. McManus telephoned twice after that, and on the third call got the proprietor. The proprietor delivered the whisky to Room 349. He will testify that when he entered McManus, Biller and a young lady—Mrs. Ruth Keyes, who had room 330—were there."

Bringing McManus nearer to the hour of the shot, Mr. Brothers said that a witness found him in the room at 8 P. M., when he re-registered and paid for another day.

"There is little doubt," he continued, "but that this witness will identify McManus. McManus was flushed and he was unsteady on his feet. There was little liquor left in the two pint bottles. We have no eyewitness, but the State will show that McManus fired the shot."

The prosecutor next described the finding of the Colt "Detective Special" revolver of .38 calibre, which the State contends was the murder weapon. The revolver was picked up on Seventh Avenue by Al Bender, a taxicab driver, who turned it over to Patrolman J. H. Rush. The gun had been broken open, and only one discharged shell remained in the cylinder.

Rush and Bender were looking at the weapon, which had been bent when it struck the street, when the doorman of the hotel beckoned them over. When Rush heard that a man had been shot, he connected the gun to the wounding. Later, with a flashlight, Rush found five loaded cartridges near where the revolver had reposed. The revolver had been tested by an expert, said Mr. Brothers.

"The bullet in the body of Arnold Rothstein was fired by that pistol," he said.

The prosecutor turned to the behavior of McManus after the shooting. He went in for several hypothetical questions.

"What was the conduct of McManus immediately after the shooting?" he said, "What impelled this defendant to lock that room? Why did he leave his home? Several photographs of this defendant had been in his home. On Tuesday when the police got in with a search warrant only the frames remained. The law permits evidence of flight, as showing that something was feared."

When Mr. Brothers finished his opening, Mr. Murray offered more objections, one of them against the vacant picture frames. Judge Nott said he would rule on that when the testimony was offered.

Dr. Norris Describes Wound.

Dr. Norris, a big man, settled into the witness chair, easy in bearing as one who had often testified. He said that he had been a physician for thirty-seven years and was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia. He explained the routine of his duties. He told of the autopsy which he had performed on the body of Rothstein, the evening he died.

He described the path of the bullet. It entered low on Rothstein's right side and took a downward course, without making an exit wound. Death, he said, had been due to sepsis and shock, the septic condition having induced a bronchial pneumonia in both lungs, a usual development. On his direct examination by Mr. Brothers the Medical Examiner produced the leaden slug he had extracted from Rothstein's thigh.

The bullet was marked in evidence. The clothing was then held up before the jury and identified. The suit was dark blue with a white pencil stripe. The garments were badly wrinkled. The bullet had made a hole in the skirt of the coat and near the right pocket of the trousers. The only mark on the body, said Dr. Norris, aside from the wound, was a trifling abrasion on the side of the right calf.

Mr. Murray, taking the witness over for cross-examination, questioned Dr. Norris on the missing clothing and shoes. Dr. Norris said he assumed they had been turned over to the police, but admitted that he had not seen this done, nor did he have any idea where the clothes were now.

The defense lawyer then put a series of questions seemingly designed to show that Rothstein had been so badly wounded that he would not have walked from the room to the ground floor. He pointed out that he would have had to traverse 190 feet of corridor before reaching the stairway.

"Would a wound in the abdomen be painful?" he said to the witness.

"I was never shot in the abdomen," said Dr. Norris.

"Would you say it was pleasurable?"

"No; rather annoying."

Mr. Murray became nettled at Dr. Norris and asked:

"Isn't it a fact that you never operated in your life on anything but a corpse?"

"I never practiced surgery," replied Dr. Norris.

Dr. Norris and Murray Clash.

There ensued a long tilt between the attorney and the witness. Mr. Murray finally obtained a statement that Rothstein might have encountered difficulty in walking, but Mr. Brothers, on redirect, obtained a countercheck to this. Dr. Norris said that Rothstein might have been numbed by the wound and thus would have experienced no initial pain.

The physician ended his testimony as luncheon recess was taken. When the court reconvened at 2 P. M. Mr. Pecora took over the examination of the witnesses. Meehan was called to the stand.

He folded his arms and looked full at Mr. Pecora. After he had straightened out his definition of a "commission broker," he said that he had known Rothstein for eight years and McManus for the same period. The witness said that he knew Sam Boston, his brother, Meyer Boston; Bowe and Alvin C. Thomas, known as "Titanic Thompson."

Mr. Pecora then asked if he knew Joe Bernstein and Saul Saltzer, as players in the big game of poker. The witness denied knowing them. This was the first mention of these men in the case, and their place in the State's theory of the murder was not explained yesterday.

"Do you recall one Saturday night early in September, 1928," said Mr. Pecora, "when these persons called at your apartment?"

"Yes," said Meehan.

"Who called that night."

"Arnold Rothstein, Bowe, McManus, Sam Boston, Titanic and several others."

"What took place?"

"They started playing bridge and later it went into a stud poker game. The game started between 12 and 12:30 P. M. and lasted until about 10 P. M. the next day.

"Did they use chips?" asked Mr. Pecora.

"No," said the witness, "cash."

"What denominations?"

"Oh, fives, ten, twenties and hundreds."

Mr. Pecora asked who had dealt the cards. Meehan said the players had two dealers. He knew only one of the card-shufflers and then only as "Red." He had never seen them since that long-drawn-out game, he declared.

He was asked how high the stakes had been. He explained about the ball game and his sleep, and said he could not be sure.

"The pots opened maybe with $50," he said, "and there was no limits to the bets."

Meehan said that he had been asleep when the game broke up. Thus he could not be expected to know who had lost or won and whether any I. O. U.'s had been exchanged.

"Do you know what 'markers' are?" asked Mr. Pecora.

"I've read about them," said the witness.

"Just read about them, eh—never seen them?"

"No, only read about them," said Meehan.

"What are they?"

"Marked cards."

Mr. Pecora pressed for an answer as to whether Meehan had seen any of the I. O. U.'s. Meehan finally admitted that he had seen "pieces of paper being passed," but he had not observed the amounts. He thought that only $16,000 had changed hands in the game.

The witness said that he had not seen McManus since the game.

He was asked if Nathan Raymond had not been in the game. "Nigger Nate" had been a player, he admitted, but he did not know whether he had won $219,000 from Rothstein. He denied that he knew Mr. Murray, but added that he had talked to him over the telephone once.

Mr. Pecora sought to impeach the witness from a stenographic record of his answers given five days after Rothstein's death to Assistant District Attorney P. Francis Marro, who had charge of the investigation at that time. Mr. Murray's objections were generally sustained by Judge Nott.

Mr. Pecora then paraded into court the Boston brothers, Thomas, Bowe and Sidney Stajer, the last-named a friend and business associate of the slain gambler. He lined them up against the counsel rail and called them by name, asking Meehan if he knew them. The witness knew them all.

Mr. Murray reserved his cross-examination, indicating that Meehan will appear again.

Bowe Describes Stud Game.

Bowe took the stand and said he lived at 56 Park Avenue. He wore a gray suit and a blue shirt with collar and tie to match. He is about 45 years old, florid and partly bald.

He said that he played cards and bet on the races and had played at Meehan's several times. He recalled the epochal stud game quite well.

"I played six or seven hours," he said, "and then would lay down and rest. I was tired, and when rested would go back. The bets were $5 to $10 a card and table stakes."

The witness said that "two boys" acted as dealers. He said that he knew one, Red. He had been his chauffeur at one time, said Bowe, and he believed his name was Martin-Martin Olin, as he recalled it. He had not seen him lately, the witness declared, but had encountered him once since the memorable game. He met him in Baltimore.

"How long did the bridge game last?" said Mr. Pecora.

"About an hour," said the witness.

"When did the stud game begin?"

"I'd say about 2 o'clock in the morning."

"Did you win or lose?"

"I lost $5,700."

"Did McManus lose?" continued Mr. Pecora.

"Yes, he lost $51,000."

"Did he pay?"

"Yes, in cash and in checks."

"Did Arnold Rothstein lose?"

"Couldn't say the exact sum, but he was putting money in his pockets. Maybe he lost a couple of hundred thousand."

"When he lost, did he put in money?"

"No, he put in markers or I. O. U.'s."

Heard Rothstein Lost $219,000.

"Titanic," said the witness, won between $20,000 and $25,000. This sum, he thought, was won entirely from McManus. Raymond had Rothstein's promise to pay $219,000, he had heard after the game ended, the witness added.

He was asked what had prompted the decision to supplement the stud poker stakes with bets on who held the highest card of each deal.

"The game got slow," said Bowe, "so we began to bet on the high card."

It was then that Bowe appealed for a pack of cards so that he could demonstrate rather than explain just how the game was played.

Mr. Murray started his cross-examination by calling the witness "Martin" and urging him to stop "mumbling, so we can hear you."

"Would the loss of $50,000 cause McManus to become resentful?" he said.

Bowe looked as if he were surprised that any one should think such a thing of the defendant.

"No," he said with emphasis, "that wouldn't mean a thing to him. He has lost $50,000 in a single race. He never complains."

"Did he always pay his losses with a smile?" said the defense attorney.

"He did," said the witness.

"Did McManus, either by word or act, complain or appear resentful over losing this $50,000 at the game?"

"No, he did not."

Saw McManus With Rothstein.

Bowe said that he saw McManus and Rothstein in Lindy's the day after the game and that both had seemed on good terms. They sat at the same table and McManus was eating.

"Did their friendship continue up to the night of Nov. 4," said Mr. Murray.

"All the time," replied Bowe.

"Rothstein didn't win George McManus's money in that game, did he?"

"He won some of it, but he didn't win it all."

"He won a very small amount of it, didn't he?"

"Yes."

Sam Solomon, or Boston, was called. He is interested in W. L. Darnell & Co., commission brokers. He admitted that his regular occupation is placing wagers on a 2½ or 5 per cent commission basis.

"On horse races?" asked Mr. Pecora.

"No, never, never," said Boston, excitedly, "on football games, baseball games—never the horses—only sporting events."

The witness differed with the preceding witnesses on the date of the big game. He thought that it was early in October, placing the date then because he had gone to the "opening game of the world's series" on the afternoon of the day the game began.

"Did you play in the game?" said Mr. Pecora.

"No, I went up on other business."

"Did you see the I O U's?"

"Yes—pieces of paper with maybe $3,000, $5,000 or $10,000 written on them. The stakes were, maybe, $5,000 on a card."

He explained that he had risked his $50 bet to oblige his friend, Nate Raymond, who had just wagered $250. Raymond, the witness explained, urged him to put up the $50 "just for luck."

Mr. Murray scored for the defense with the first question he put to Boston.

"Did you know George McManus to have registered under different names at hotels?" he asked.

"Yes, because of his business."

"Did you know that he had registered under other names at the Astor, at the Manger and at the Pennsylvania—did he tell you why?"

"He said that he didn't want his business known, how much he was losing or winning, and how much he was betting."

"Did McManus ever complain at losses?"

"He was a good loser, the best loser I know. It was nothing for him to lose a lot of money. He had done it for years before this game was planned. He paid with a smile, too."

The witness was asked to describe Rothstein's reputation for paying debts.

"Excellent," he said, adding that he had never known of an instance where the dead man had failed to settle. This portrait of Rothstein contradicted reports current along Broadway, after his death, that the gambler had adopted a policy of withholding payment as long as he could, hoping to win back his losses in later games.

The examination of Boston ended at 4 P. M. and Judge Nott adjourned the trial until 10:45 A. M. today. This is fifteen minutes later than the usual opening, owing to the fact that the court has to pass sentence in another case this morning.

McManus, apparently buoyant over the developments of the session, was escorted from court to his waiting automobile by five policemen. This precaution was to protect him from the over-curious crowd that awaited him in the corridors of the courts building.

In allowing McManus to remain free under $50,000 bail, the "usual procedure" is being followed by Judge Nott, according to Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora.

Asked last night if it was not unusual that McManus, although standing trial for murder, was allowed his liberty under bail, Mr. Pecora said:

"No. The question of bail in such cases lies in the discretion of the trial judge. Where a defendant has been previously admitted to bail before trial, the bail is continued in a number of criminal cases, and Judge Nott in this case is following the usual procedure."

WALKER SAYS HE LET EDITOR VISIT STAJER

Explains Watson Told Him Man in Jail Might Help Solve Rothstein Mystery.

Mayor Walker stepped in yesterday to put at rest the inferences that an attempt had been made to influence witnesses in the Rothstein case. The Mayor himself assumed full responsibility for permitting Victor Watson, managing editor of The New York American, to visit Sidney Stajer, one of the trial witnesses held at the Raymond Street jail, Brooklyn, in November, 1928.

The Mayor said that Richard C. Patterson Jr., Commissioner of Correction, allowed Mr. Watson to see the prisoner and that Mr. Patterson accompanied the newspaper man on the interview mission all by his, the Mayor's orders. This was the Mayor's statement:

"Victor Watson got in touch with me first, I think by telephone, anyway I saw him afterward. He showed me communications he had received from Sidney Stajer asking Mr. Watson to come to see him. I think these communications stated Stajer had something important to tell Mr. Watson.

"Mr. Watson notified me of this at night, after visiting hours in the Raymond Street jail where Stajer was being detained. Because of the rules, Mr. Watson said, he could not get into the jail to see Stajer to find out what Stajer would disclose.

"I asked Mr. Watson if he thought Stajer could help solve the Rothstein mystery. Mr. Watson thought that Stajer might have some valuable information which he was prepared to reveal. Therefore, I called Correction Commissioner Richard C. Patterson Jr., and told him that I wanted Mr. Watson to be allowed to enter Raymond Street jail to see Stajer. Commissioner Patterson asked whether I desired him to accompany Mr. Watson and I said I preferred that he would do so.

"Accordingly, not upon his own initiative or responsibility but upon my orders, he took Mr. Watson to Stajer. I felt that this was the right thing to do if it would help to serve the ends of justice, particularly if it would aid in solving a murder mystery.

"Commissioner Patterson was with Mr. Watson when the latter interviewed Stajer. He asked no questions. Unfortunately, nothing came of it. No material evidence resulted from the talk with Stajer. Whether Stajer changed his mind or wouldn't talk in the presence of Commissioner Patterson, I don't know.

"Before Mr. Watson called on Stajer I stipulated, and he agreed, that he was not acting in the capacity of a newspaper man but as a citizen desirous of aiding in the administration of justice. It was further agreed, at my suggestion, that any information Mr. Watson might obtain was to be turned over to the District Attorney and not to be published until released by the proper authorities, with the further understanding that all newspapers were to share equally in whatever revelations resulted from the Stajer interview. Mr. Watson readily acquiesced in these conditions.

"So far as Commissioner Patterson is concerned, I repeat, he acted on my orders. Mr. Watson saw Stajer on my authority. I would extend the same privilege to any other responsible citizen who sincerely believed he could serve the ends of justice."

In a statement issued Tuesday, when the suggestion of witness-tampering was made, Mr. Patterson accepted responsibility for the interview. He did not mention the Mayor. Mr. Watson, in a statement the same day, made no mention of the Mayor.

The suggestion that an effort had been made to influence a witness was made by James D. C. Murray, attorney for George A. McManus, on trial for the murder of Arnold Rothstein. It came during the questioning of a prospective juror for the trial of the case when Mr. Murray asked: "If it turns out that Commissioner Patterson did certain things to influence witnesses to the detriment of this defendant, would you be inclined to believe him if he is called here to give testimony?"

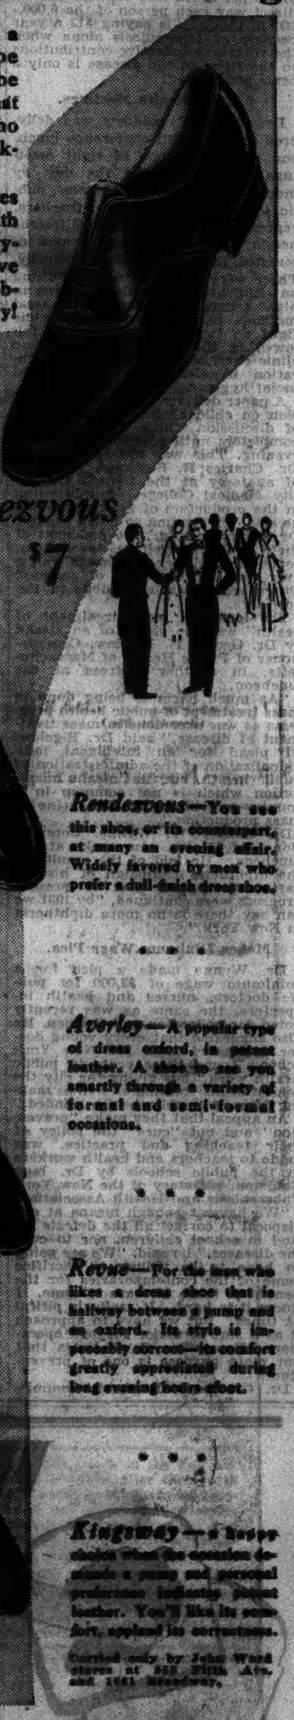
It needn't cost any more to be correctly shod in the evening

IF you've been paying a premium for dress shoe correctness—don't! Let it be broadcast here and now that fine evening shoes cost no more to make than fine walking shoes.

Here are four dress shoes which invite comparison with custom footwear in everything but price. When you've tested the quality you probably won't mind the economy!



Rendezvous $7

Averley $7

Averley—A popular type of dress oxford, in patent leather. A shoe to see you smartly through a variety of formal and semi-formal occasions.

Revue $7

Revue—For the man who likes a dress shoe that is halfway between a pump and an oxford. Its style is impeccably correct—its comfort greatly appreciated during long evening hours afoot.

Kingsway $9

Carried only by John Ward stores at 555 Fifth Ave. and 1641 Broadway.

WE like to speak of our customers as "shoe-wise." And they don't mind. They take a certain pride in their solution of the shoe problem. Selecting from the most complete line of styles, leathers, and sizes in town, they are always correctly, comfortably shod, always pleasantly conscious of a substantial saving.

URGES INSURANCE AS OLD AGE HELP

Dr. Rubinow at Albany Social Workers' Meeting Says Country Is Rich Enough to Carry Burden.

CHILD CALLED CHIEF CROP

Arthur W. Tawns Predicts Guidance Clinics Are Coming Soon to All Parts of Country.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—"Old-Age Security" was the subject of discussion at a dinner attended by delegates to the State Conference on Social Work tonight. The speakers included Dr. I. M. Rubinow, director of the Zionist Organization of America.

Dr. Rubinow said there were five ways in which the economic needs of aged people can be met. He enumerated them as follows:

1. One may be that exception whose earning capacity remains little impaired. Economically, it means that one may avoid old age altogether.
2. One may provide for old age out of earnings of his lifetime—the method of individual savings.
3. One may be cared for by his children or relatives.
4. One may be cared for by a larger social group.
5. A comprehensive social action may be taken by organized society, meaning government, through proper legislation.

"There are also two methods, old-age pensions and compulsory old-age insurance," he said. "Under the one the public purse pays the entire cost, while under the other the future beneficiary and industry and perhaps the State Treasury share the cost.

Prefers Insurance Plan.

"The State can pay only by taxing the very classes who would contribute under an old-age insurance scheme," Dr. Rubinow argued. "An insurance plan has many advantages. It distributes the cost so that the burden is more easily carried. It takes advantage of the effect of the law of compound interest. It permits of adjustment of pension to the differences in earning capacity and it puts a lesser burden on the fiscal and taxing machinery.

"For these various reasons there is a strong trend toward old-age insurance schemes.

"If we can carry the cost of automobile expansion and of expensive road building and even the cost of municipal corruption," he concluded, "I think we may safely assume America is rich enough to carry the burden of a decent provision for the aged."

Discuss Veterans' Problems.

The problems to social workers of the dependent ex-service man were tr[illegible] in papers presented at a m[illegible] today of the committee on the family.

"Legislation for the World War participant has been far more liberal than for any other war veterans," W. J. Powers, administrator of the World War relief committee of Rochester, said. "Certain modifications are needed and doubtless will be made gradually in the World War veterans' acts," he stated. "The service organizations have these changes in mind. One is the need for extra compensation for dependents of men who have permanent disability ratings."

Children "Most Important Crop."

At another subsidiary meeting Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Federal Department of Labor, designated the child as the "most important crop" of the nation.

John T. Eagan of the Board of Child Welfare of New York City, prophesied that within three months the allowances to widows and dependent mothers in New York City at least must be increased.

Psychiatric child guidance clinics are coming very shortly in all parts of the country, Arthur W. Towne, director of the Onondaga Health Association of Syracuse, prophesied at a meeting of superintendents of children's institutions.

R. W. Wallace Becomes President.

Mrs. Sidney C. Borg of New York tonight retired as president of the conference. She was succeeded by Richard W. Wallace of Albany. Other officers chosen are: Vice presidents, Edward M. H. Lewis of Syracuse, Paul F. Warburg of New York and the Rev. Joseph L. May of Utica; treasurer, George J. Gillespie of New York; executive committee, the Rev. William Meegan of Buffalo, Mary Pelevesky of Brooklyn and Oscar W. Colt of Rochester.

A resolution urged on Governor Roosevelt and the Legislature the importance of developing as speedily as possible the New York State Training School for Boys at Warwick, Orange County, and that the appropriations be given first consideration among those planned for social service institutions in the coming session.

FINDS RECENT WORKS ENRICH BIOGRAPHY

Dr. Harper of Princeton Sees the American Revealed in 70 Books He Read as Pulitzer Judge.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Although perhaps none of the American biographies of the past two years is a permanent addition to literature, yet, during this period, "biography has been enriched and has revealed many interesting varieties of American character," according to Dr. George McLean Harper, Woodrow Wilson Professor of Literature at Princeton University, in an interview today. Dr. Harper is one of the judges for the Pulitzer prize in biography and has made a survey of seventy recent biographies by Americans on American subjects.

Biography is a difficult combination of science and art, Dr. Harper said. He discovered while reading these seventy books that many were marked by a "distressing boastfulness" and a "narrow nationalism, showing the lack of perspective of their authors. However, he said, the books demonstrated that Americans "are irrepressibly cheerful and hopeful."

"Fifty years ago nearly every biography had as its subject a New England character," he asserted. "Today the South and West have come into their own. The lives of the poor as well as the rich are biographical material today."

Among the books examined by Dr. Harper and which he ranks high are J. Hendricks's "The Training of an American, Early Life and Letters of Walter H. Page"; Judge Robert Watson Winston's "Life of Andrew Johnson" and Major Gen. Hugh Lenox Scott's "Some Memories of a Soldier."

SAYS 41,000 IN STATE NEED OLD AGE RELIEF

Mastick Estimates the Cost of Pensions for Them at $12,000,000 a Year.

Group insurance is no substitute for pensions for the aged because these policies are seldom written for more than $1,500, State Senator Seabury C. Mastick, chairman of the joint legislative committee for old age relief, declared in a talk yesterday before the Ethical Culture Society, 2 West Sixty-fourth Street.

"Employers hesitate to hire aged men and pay a higher rate on their compensation insurance," he continued, "as old men are more likely to be injured in industrial accidents than younger men."

Senator Mastick said that poverty does not constitute a crime, but is an economic condition which the State is bound in some way or other to recognize. He estimated that 41,000 persons in the State more than 70 years old would be subject to old age relief and that the cost of such a law would be $12,000,000 annually, at the rate of $20 a month to each applicant.

"I do not believe there should be a fixed minimum age for persons seeking old age relief," he said, "as such a stipulation would impose hardships on helpless people younger than the minimum."

Senator Mastick pointed out that the passage of an old age pension law would not depopulate institutions for the aged, as many old people would still need hospital and institution care and some would have no other place to go.

ORTIZ RUBIO ASKED HERE BY T. W. LAMONT

Mexican President-Elect Is Reported Considering Trip Before Inauguration.

HINT OF NEW DEBT PARLEY

Rival's Intimidation Charges Denied —All Prisoners Seized in Riots on Election Day Freed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—An invitation to Pascual Ortiz Rubio, the President-elect of Mexico, to visit the international committee of bankers in New York before he assumes office in January was received today from Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., on behalf of the committee.

The telegram congratulated Señor Ortiz Rubio on his enormous majority Sunday and is looked upon as a gesture of good-will and as evidence that the bankers see a possibility of early renewal of pourparlers for another international debt agreement.

There have been rumors here that Señor Ortiz Rubio might go abroad before his inauguration, but no official announcement.

Last year upward of 37,000,000 pesos (about $18,000,000) were appropriated in the budget for payment of interest to the holders of Mexican securities and it is reported that the bankers voluntarily consented to delay the payment in order to allow Mexico to meet the expense of the Escobar rebellion. It is also said that in view of the then prevailing Mexican economic and financial situation negotiations looking for another international agreement were suspended.

That action on the part of the bankers went far to enable Luis Montes de Oca, the Finance Minister, to place Mexico's internal house in order. This he has done, to the extent of keeping Federal wages and salaries up to date and paying cash for merchandise and supplies.

It is the general opinion here that, if Mexico can continue without incurring new liabilities for four years of peace under Señor Ortiz Rubio, this republic's national finances may be placed on such a footing of soundness as has not been possible in the last fifteen years of uncertainty.

Señor Ortiz Rubio, who has been resting at Guadalajara after his fatiguing campaign, the most strenuous peaceful campaign in Mexico's history, returned to the capital this morning.

He had been in the resort city since several days before the election, and still showed signs of fatigue on his arrival here today. Although a large crowd of admirers besieged his home to congratulate him, he excused himself from seeing any one except close personal friends. He was accompanied on his return by Manuel Pérez Treviño, chairman of his party and his chief political adviser.

Election Riot Prisoners Freed.

All those who were arrested by the police in the election disturbances Sunday were released today. Apparently it has been impossible to fix responsibility for the deaths of sixteen persons who were killed in the disorders. Injured persons who were held in hospitals as material witnesses also have been allowed to return home.

The official ballot boxes used Sunday were gathered together today and deposited at the Chamber of Deputies, where an official count will be made and the result proclaimed in a special session. The boxes were collected entirely by civilians, with neither troops nor police present even as guards.

Mexico City newspapers assert that former President Calles will be back in Mexico by the first of the year and will immediately take over his task of financial reorganization of the National Railways. [Paris dispatches say General Calles will sail for New York on Dec. 5]. He will be assisted in his task by Señor Montes de Oca and the present Minister of Communicados, Sanchez Mejorsda.

Ambassador Morrow declined today to discuss the news from Washington that he had been appointed one of the United States delegates to the naval disarmament conference in London in January. This mission will require his absence from Mexico at the time of transfer of the Presidential power from President Portes Gil to Señor Ortiz Rubio, but there is no reason to believe that would affect the relations of Mexico with the United States.

Vasconcelos Charges Denied.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21 (A).—The newspaper Excelsior quotes Señor Ortiz Rubio as denying charges of the Vasconcelistas that they were not permitted to vote for their candidate in Sunday's election.

He termed the charges camouflage to cover up the fact they represented only an infinitesimal minority of the nation's voters.

WOOL TARIFF RISE VOTED BY SENATE

House Increase From 31 to 34 Cents Sustained, 44 to 26, In Committee Defeat.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS TODAY

House Readily Supports Action of Upper Branch in Calling Quits on Special Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—American wool growers won a victory when the Senate, by a vote of 44 to 26, late today rejected the Finance Committee amendment to reduce to the existing rate of 31 cents the duty levied in the House tariff bill of 34 cents a pound on high-grade raw wools. The vote had the effect of retaining the increase of 3 cents a pound over existing law, as voted by the House.

While the Senate worked on the wool schedule and moved toward this important vote, the House concurred in the adjournment resolution passed by the Senate yesterday.

The House will adjourn a few minutes after it meets tomorrow and the Senate some time before 10 o'clock tomorrow night until the regular session convenes on Dec. 2.

Denunciation of the proposal to increase the raw wool rate and of the wool schedule in general was indulged in today by Democrats, including Senators Walsh of Massachusetts and George of Georgia. But Western Senators, including Steiwer of Oregon, Thomas of Idaho and Connally of Texas, led a successful drive for increased protection for sheep raisers.

George Recalls Schedule K.

"Make no mistake," Senator George said, "we call this Schedule No. 11, but it is the same old obnoxious and iniquitous Schedule K which the American people so well know. It is the same old schedule which introduced compensatory duties for the manufacturers and which will militate against everything you give the farmer on the raw material."

Mr. Walsh said that the increased duty on raw wool used by 60 per cent of the textile manufacturers was 10 per cent additional to the 60 per cent increase given in 1922 over the Payne-Aldrich rate.

"With respect to wool rags," he continued, "the chief material used by 40 per cent of the establishments engaged in the manufacture of wool cloth and used in turn for making warm and suitable clothing for the middle and poorer classes, the proposed increase of duty is 100 per cent. The handling of Schedule K of the old wool schedule in the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill wrecked the Republican party in two elections.

"The excessive advance in the duty on wool in the Fordney-McCumber tariff of 1922 contributed largely to increasing the Democratic strength in the House of Representatives and giving the Democratic party only one vote less than necessary to control the Senate."

Reports of an agreement between Western wool growers and Eastern wool product manufacturers to support each other in the basic and compensatory duties agitated the Senate. In some quarters it was forecast that the Democratic-Progressive coalition might refuse to raise the compensatory duties to correspond with the increase in the raw wool rate, although Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee announced a plan for the levies on wool manufactures to be stepped up correspondingly.

There are prospects of a fight tomorrow over the rate on wool rags. The present rate is 7½ cents a pound, which the House increased to 8 cents. The Finance Committee tripled this to 24 cents.

Vote on Raw Wool Duty.

The roll-call resulting in defeat of the committee amendment on raw wool and sustaining the House increase was:

Pairs announced were all general pairs.

There was virtually no debate in the House over the adjournment proposal. When the resolution came up, Republican Floor Leader Tilson said he had hoped the tariff bill could have been passed by the end of the special session, but "the ways of the Senate are different from those of the House." Representatives Schafer of Wisconsin and Howard of Nebraska offered short objections to adjournment, before an overwhelming viva voce was taken in favor of the plan.

BALL POOL OWNER ON TRIAL

J. J. Otto Accused of Perjury in Hiding Higher-Ups in Case.

James J. Otto, one of the three owners of the defunct Albany Baseball Pool, was placed on trial before Federal Judge Coxe yesterday on an indictment charging perjury. The alleged perjury was committed when Otto was testifying before the Federal grand jury in an effort made by United States Attorney Tuttle and his assistant, Thomas T. Cooke, to learn whether there were more powerful men behind the pool whose names had not been divulged.

Otto was brought here from the Atlanta Penitentiary, where he is serving a term for mail fraud. Many questions were asked concerning his associates in the pool. It was said that he could have answered some of them but that he had refused to give the government any aid. The jury box was tentatively filled at the close of the day. The taking of testimony will begin this morning.

Counsel for Otto are George E. Medalie of this city and J. L. Delaney, Joseph A. Murphy and Roscoe C. Irwin of Albany.

SINCLAIR ARRIVES AT RANCOCAS FARMS

Oil Man Is Host to Friends at Jobstown (N. J.) Cottage—Long Island Estate Guarded.

JOBSTOWN, N. J., Nov. 21 (AP).—Harry F. Sinclair, who was released from jail in Washington today, was host to several close friends in his cottage at Rancocas Farms tonight.

The oil man arrived here late in the evening, going to his cottage over back roads. With him was his wife, who accompanied him from Washington.

The shades of the green and white cottage were drawn tight and servants guarded the doors, but there was a light in nearly every room. A butler, the only person who would answer rings, admitted that Mr. Sinclair was inside, but announced that he would not see any one.

It is at Rancocas that Mr. Sinclair has his famous racing stables. It was stated that Mr. Sinclair probably would devote much of his time tomorrow to his track affairs, watching particularly the two fillies sired by the famous Zev, upon whom his stables pin hopes for the Kentucky Derby.

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT NECK, L. I., Nov. 21.—Though only a caretaker and two gardeners were at the Kings Point estate of Harry F. Sinclair tonight, the local police were keeping a special lookout on surrounding roads to prevent a repetition of visits by reporters and photographers, who were put off the grounds during the day.

Employes said that they had not been told when to expect Mr. Sinclair. Mrs. Sinclair has not been at Kings Point for several days.

FOURTEEN ARE KILLED IN 3 AUTO CRASHES

Five Women Are Killed in Texas, Five of Family in Tennessee and Four Men at Erie, Pa.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 21 (AP).—Five women were killed here today when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a motor car of the Santa Fé Railroad.

A negro who was driving the car was taken to a hospital. Before losing consciousness he gave his name as Rabbit Gatt and said his home was in Leonard, Texas.

Several hours after the accident the dead were identfied as Mrs. Charles Clark, aged 42; Mrs. A. P. Grider, 41; Mrs. G. R. Grider, 65; Mrs. H. S. Pendergrass, 65, and Mrs. Dolly King, 39, residents of Leonard, excepting Mrs. King, who lived at Fort Worth.

The women left Leonard this morning to motor to Fort Worth for a luncheon.

JACKSBORO, Tenn., Nov. 21 (AP).—W. H. Metzler, a coal miner; his wife, two daughters, 5 and 2 years old, and a son, aged 18, were killed instantly today when their automobile was struck at a crossing near a railroad cut by a Louisville & Nashville passenger train.

Parts of the automobile were scattered for a quarter of a mile from the scene of the collision. The bodies of the victims were taken to Lafollette.

Dr. J. P. Lindsay, who was sitting on his porch fifty feet from the accident when Metzler's car approached, said Metzler apparently became panic-stricken when the train whistled as he reached the crossing and jammed on his brakes, bringing the automobile to a stop directly in the path of the locomotive.

Four other children survive the Metzlers.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 21 (AP).—Four men were killed today when a New York Central passenger train struck two automobiles on a grade crossing during a snowstorm.

The dead are Clyde L. Hinkson of Erie; Tony and Joseph Stahon, brothers, and Louis Evans, all of Wesleyville, a suburb of Erie.

DENTAL MECHANICS STRIKE.

600 Union Members Expected to Be Joined by Others in Walkout.

A strike of workers in dental laboratories throughout the city was called last night by the Dental Laboratory Workers' Union, 96 Fifth Avenue. The strikers will meet this morning in Irving Plaza Hall, East Fifteenth Street and Irving Place.

About 600 members are in the union, but almost as many more are expected by the strike leaders to respond to the walk-out call. They demand an eight-hour day, forty-four-hour week, minimum wage scales, time-and-a-half for overtime, more sanitary conditions and union recognition.

R. J. Cary Left Estate to Widow.

The will of Robert J. Cary, vice president and general counsel of the New York Central Lines, was filed yesterday for probate. It leaves all of his estate, formally valued at more than $10,000, to his widow, Fanney Cary of 65 East Ninety-first Street, who is named executrix. The testator, who died on Nov. 6, made his will on Nov. 8, 1915, while a resident of Chicago.

ADMITS 'FRAMING' RUM LAW LIFERS

Ex-Michigan Dry Agent Says Evidence Was Planted That Convicted Man and Mother of 6.

ACCUSES FELLOW OFFICER

He Declares In "Confession" at Chicago That His Conscience Has Been Bothering Him.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The outlook for freedom in the near future brightened tonight for Fred Palm and Mrs. Etta Mae Miller, Michigan's "life-for-a-pint" prisoners, following a "confession" by Frank Eastman, former Lansing police dry enforcement officer, that the man and the woman are in the penitentiary for the terms of their natural lives as the result of frame-ups by members of the Lansing police force.

Eastman and his former partner, William Knapp, were the plain-clothes detectives who arrested Palm and Mrs. Miller on the charges that put them behind the bars. In the case of the woman, mother of ten children, it was their testimony that convicted her for the fourth time of selling a few pints of liquor, thus making it possible for Judge Charles B. Collingwood of Lansing to give her the life sentence. Now Eastman says his conscience has been bothering him.

"Palm had two felony convictions against him when Knapp and I caught him on July 27, 1927, with two pints of liquor in his car, in front of the Olds Hotel in Lansing," said Eastman. "That made the third felony charge, and Palm jumped a $6,000 bond, failing to appear for trial.

"One night late in September, Johnny Moore, the desk sergeant, told us he had a telephone call that Palm was out at his home. He gave us a bench warrant and told us to go get him. Knapp and I went to the house.

"Knapp went to the front door and Mrs. Palm slammed the door in Knapp's face, but I opened the back door and walked in. As I walked down the hallway I saw part of a pint of gin on the floor. I picked it up.

"As Knapp and I took Palm away I asked him about the gin. He said he knew nothing about it. I jokingly said, 'Well, I'll have to charge your wife with it.'

"When we got to the station I turned the gin bottle over to the desk sergeant as a matter of course. I thought Palm had been brought in as a fugitive on the Olds Hotel case. The next day in court I heard him pleading guilty to possession for having the gin I had found in his house.

"I turned to Johnny Moore, the sergeant. I said 'My God, Johnny, have you booked him with that?' He put his finger up to his lips and said, 'Sh-h-h-hhh.'"

"What about Mrs. Miller?" Senator Person asked.

"I'll tell you about that," Eastman replied. "Mrs. Miller's fourth conviction was bad enough, but the liquor in the third one was planted in a cupboard in her house by Knapp's orders, and I can prove that."

Eastman was asked concerning the fourth conviction of Mrs. Miller.

"Knapp and I drove slowly past a house about two blocks from Mrs. Miller's home. We saw Etta Mae come out of this house and walk to an automobile in the driveway. We saw her hand something in and one o fthe men in the car hand her something.

"We then chased the car for more than a mile and during the chase two bottles were thrown out. The corks had been drawn, but there was a little liquor in each bottle. It was on our testimony to that effect that a Lansing jury convicted her."

LEADERS TO CONFER ON CENSUS HERE TODAY

Federal Officials to Join Move to Acquaint Business Men With Importance of 1930 Canvass.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Leading government officials and business men will participate in a series of seventeen regional conferences intended to acquaint business men with the importance of the 1930 census. The first conference is to open at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York City.

Among those who will take part are Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Julius Barnes, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Fred M. Feiker, managing director of the Associated Business Papers; Colonel L. S. Horner of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company and chairman of the business advisory committee of the census of distribution, and William M. Steuart, Director of the Census.

Representatives of many communities within a radius of 100 miles of New York are expected to attend the conference, which was called by Robert M. Davis of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, New York City. The proceedings of the conference will be broadcast by the Columbia system.

The next regional conference is scheduled for Philadelphia, Nov. 25, followed by a similar meeting in Atlanta on Nov. 27. Subsequent meetings scheduled are: Detroit, Nov. 29; Buffalo, Nov. 30; Pittsburgh, Dec. 2; Cleveland, Dec. 4; Chicago, Dec. 5; New Orleans, Dec. 7; Dallas, Dec. 9; St. Louis, Dec. 11; Omaha, Dec. 12; Denver, Dec. 14; Seattle, Dec. 17; San Francisco, Dec. 19; Los Angeles, Dec. 20, and the final meeting at Boston, Jan. 4.

HENNESSY MAY RETIRE.

Park Commissioner Fails to Get Another Age-Limit Waiver.

Failure of the Board of Estimate yesterday to extend further the waiver of the age limit in the case of Park Commissioner Joseph P. Hennessy of the Bronx was interpreted at the City Hall as indicating his probable retirement from the city.

On two previous occasions the Board of Estimate has waived the age limit for him for periods of two years, but when his name came up for action yesterday, along with a number of other city employes, his case was the only one not acted upon. Disposition of Mr. Hennessy's case was deferred "for two weeks." There will be no meeting of the Board of Estimate before two weeks have expired, meanwhile, in the absence of action yesterday, Mr. Hennessy will have been automatically dropped from the service.

Commissioner Hennessy is 74 years old. He was appointed Park Commissioner of the Bronx on Jan. 17, 1918, in the administration of Mayor Hylan.

26 DIE IN TIDAL WAVE OFF NEWFOUNDLAND

waterfront and in some cases property far inland was swept away including many dwellings.

The roads between Lamaline and Lords Cove were seriously washed out and all the bridges between these points were washed away or rendered impassable.

An early message from Magistrate Hollett of Burin to Sir Richard Squires, asserted that at Lamaline fourteen lives had been lost, eight at Point Aux Gaul.

At Burin, it was stated, sixteen dwellings, containing nine women and children were carried out to sea. The inhabitants of the stricken area were exposed to the elements for four days with no means of communication except by courier.

Property loss was estimated at over $100,000. Practically all the families had their Winter provisions and fuel swept away.

At Port Au Bras, on the west side of Placentia Bay, fourteen fishing vessels, dories and fishing skiffs were destroyed.

The telegraph office at St. Lawrence lies anchored in the middle of the harbor. Messages from Port Union, on the northeast coast, state that the tidal wave carried away the breakwater.

Health Head Goes to Scene.

As soon as news of the catastrophe reached St. John's, a meeting of the Executive Council was called. It decided to dispatch the Meigle at once with doctors and nurses. Dr. Alexander Campbell, Minister of Public Health, will personally supervise the relief operations. The ship carried, as well as food and medical supplies, fuel, building materials, clothing and telegraph instruments.

"The full magnitude of the havoc wrought will not be known for several days. Grave fears are entertained for the residents of Flat Island on the west side of Placentia Bay, which, as the land is low, may have been completely inundated.

Dr. Campbell, before the boat left, stated that at present it was impossible to estimate the full extent of the damage, but that conditions would in all probability be bad. In the small settlements which are dotted around nearly every cove on the coast the people kept their supplies of food and Winter provisions in the fishing stages which overhang the sea and in nearly every case there were swept away.

"Met with S. S. Glencoe at Bay Dargent. Glencoe reports called at St. Lawrence today. Thirty-one buildings swept into sea. Nearly all boats and government wharfs destroyed. Strong west wind with snow. Terrible destruction along coast.

"Hundreds of people homeless. No communication except by wireless from coastal steamers. Shortage of food, medical help and medical supplies."

It will probably be several days before the smaller settlements can receive help. In the section affected the staple industry is cod fishing and in most cases the fishermen had disposed of their catch and laid in their Winter supplies. These are reported gone as well as their fishing gear, their boats and their wharves.

The merchants also have suffered heavily, as only a part of the season's catch of dried fish had been sent to market.

Near Epicentre of Quake.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 21 (AP).—The steamer Daisy, a government boat, is giving assistance to the stricken communities of the Burin Peninsular. Among the other vessels along the coast is the Portia, which wirelessed first news of the disaster.

Already in St. John's a fund is being collected for the aid of the Burin people.

The peninsula, a narrow outpost of Southern Newfoundland, was in a direct line with the epicentre of Monday's break in the Pandian Fault, and apparently caught the first shock of the disturbance.

All the places mentioned in the tidal wave area are situated within a distance of thirty miles of each other. The stretch of coast faces southeast.

Sticking finger-like to the southwest from the mainland of Newfoundland, the peninsula is fringed with high, precipitous cliffs. Burin Inlet, along which most of the deaths were reported, is a narrow entrance through eighty-foot cliffs that front the Atlantic Ocean.

Some reports said that the wave, crowded into the narrow inlet by high rocky cliffs, reached a height of forty feet in Burin, and swept away all property along the water front.

A picture of waters receding, leaving vessels helplessly aground to wait their return, comes from Catalina, in the district of Bonavista on the east coast, reached by the wave early Tuesday morning. This is in line with the experience of Glace Bay, N. S., where the water receded and returned at fifteen-minute intervals.

A report received tonight from the steamer Georgia, said she was proceeding to St. John's with several of her crew injured. The message asked for a pilot and doctors. Neither the nature of the injuries nor the cause was mentioned.

Word of Disaster Received Here.

News of the earthquake and tidal wave along the southern shore of Newfoundland was received by private sources here yesterday. A native Newfoundlander, who is now working as an operator in the oceanic cable department of the Western Union here, learned from an operator friend at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, of the death of ten persons at Lamaline.

W. R. Dove, a St. John's merchant, who is a brother-in-law of Captain Bob Bartlett, the Arctic explorer, sent the following message to G. P. Putnam, 2 West Forty-fifth Street:

"Monday, Nov. 18, at 5:05 P. M. severe earth tremor, followed 7:35 P. M. by an enormous tidal wave on southwest coast of Newfoundland, causing tremendous property damage all along coast to dwellings, stores and warehouses, together with schooners and equipment destroyed, many people being engulfed with their homes. Loss of life will probably be great. Section most badly affected was in vicinity of Burin, the chief fishing district of southwest coast. Among other property destroyed is a large quantity of dried fish. Telegraph system still disrupted. Only communication by government coastal steamer which arrived there this morning. Further particulars will follow in morning's issue."

The entire south shore of Newfoundland is thickly sprinkled with fishing villages, Captain Bartlett said. He estimated its total population at between 25,000 and 50,000. There is practically no farming except the keeping of small gardens by some of the residents, he said, but the district is well wooded and many fishing schooners are built along the southern coast. The whole region is normally connected with St. John's by both telephone and telegraph, but these were disrupted by the earthquake.

The country inland from the southern coast is uninhabited, Captain Bartlett said. Along the west coast from which no reports of damage have come yet, there are numerous paper mills.

Automotive Engineers Elect.

The metropolitan section of the Society of Automotive Engineers meeting last night in the American Women's Association Clubhouse, 353 West Fifty-seventh Street, elected Herbert Chase and A. L. Beall to represent it on the nominating and the sections committees of the national organization. William J. Muller, designer of the Ruxton front drive automobile, explained the principles of this type of car. George A. Round was chairman.

THE NEW SUPER-AUTOMATIC KELVINATOR

With Ice-O-Thermic Tubes . . . Introducing Amazing New Advantages in Balanced Electric Refrigeration

On display Saturday

TODAY, with the announcement of the new Super-Automatic Kelvinator, electric refrigeration enters a new and wider sphere of usefulness for thousands of home-makers the world over.

If you, for one, have sought an electric refrigerator that completely divorces from your mind all worry as to the proper care of food, you will find your highest expectations realized in this new Kelvinator.

Nothing to Regulate—100% Automatic

Kelvinator, never deviating from its path of making electric refrigeration even more trouble-free, more convenient and more economical, has designed its newest product to be 100% automatic in operation.

There is nothing to regulate—whether you want speedy freezing of ice cubes and desserts or delicate foods kept at their palatable best for hours and days at a time.

Ice-O-Thermic Tubes—A Startling Advance In Electric Refrigeration

A new Kelvinator discovery—Ice-O-Thermic Tubes—makes possible far faster freezing of ice cubes. For example, the mere placing of a tray of water in a special ice compartment concentrates intense freezing power in this direction. Ice is ready in a remarkably short time. Desserts in a correspondingly brief period. Yet food compartments remain always at the same safe temperature—between 40 and 50 degrees—neither too warm nor too cold.

Not content with bringing you the finest automatic care of food and far faster freezing of ice cubes, Kelvinator surrounds this more efficient service with fresh beauty and sterling quality in cabinet construction.

New Metal Cabinets—Will Last a Life-time

Each new Kelvinator—and they are priced as low as $185, f. o. b. Detroit—is of rugged metal construction, porcelain-lined throughout to permit easy cleaning. Massive chromium-plated hardware in dull finish adds both to the attractive appearance and durability of these models. Larger models are equipped with separate cold storage chambers and are electrically lighted.

To know how much more value your refrigerating dollar now commands, see the new Super-Automatic Kelvinators on display at our showrooms. You will be surprised to learn how easily you may enjoy Kelvinator's many new conveniences immediately under the Kelvinator ReDisCo monthly budget plan.

as low as $185 F. O. B. Detroit

Features Which Place Kelvinator Years Ahead in Modern Refrigeration—

1. Ice-O-Thermic Tubes—giving new fast freezing of ice cubes and desserts. Fully automatic—no regulation needed.
2. Balanced Refrigeration—separate temperatures for food preservation, cold storage and ice freezing.
3. The Cold-Keeper—Holds cold over longer periods—thus reducing operating periods of mechanical unit.
4. Greater Economy—Less current consumed, because of infrequent starting and stopping.
5. Abundant Ice Supply—Capacities up to 35 pounds of ice at a single freezing. New flexible rubber ice tray.
6. New Metal Cabinets, Porcelain-Lined—Will last a life-time without deterioration. Larger models electrically lighted.
7. Generously Powered—Each Super-Automatic Kelvinator shows; 100% over-load capacity under test in room with 100 degree temperature.

LIVINGSTON LISTS REPUBLICAN ILLS

Lays Defeat Partly to Defections on Racial Grounds and the Dry Issue.

URGES PARTY REFORMS

Favors Formation of County Advisory Groups and Restoration of City Convention.

Striking changes, not only in the organization of the Republican party but in the structure of the City Government, were recommended yesterday by Jacob A. Livingston, chairman of the executive committee of the Kings County Republican Committee, in a statement to the enrolled Republican voters of Brooklyn. Mr. Livingston gave his view of the reasons for the diminishing vote in the city and State elections and told what, in his opinion, must be done to defeat Tammany.

Asserting that attempts to "Republicanize a Democratic city" by naming a Republican for Mayor had failed, Mr. Livingston declared that Republicans in the future should choose an independent Democrat as their candidate for Mayor, supported by a proper fusion ticket. To make this easier of accomplishment than at present he declared for the restoration of the city convention to nominate candidates for city-wide offices.

Urges Bipartisan Boards.

Bipartisan control of the police and the schools by the establishment of a bipartisan Police Commission and a bipartisan Board of Education also was urged by Mr. Livingston, who suggested that the bipartisan principle, now applicable only to the Tax Commission, the Board of Assessors and the Board of Elections, be extended to include a bipartisan Board of City Magistrates and a bipartisan Municipal Civil Service Commission.

To reduce further the number of Democratic officials in the city, Mr. Livingston suggested that justices of the Supreme Court should be appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the State Senate. This method of selection, he added, would take the judiciary out of politics.

In his suggestions for a reorganization of the Republican party, Mr. Livingston failed to recommend a city leader and went no further than to recommend the creation of an advisory committee for each county and the election of each county leader by the vote of all enrolled party members instead of by the Assembly district leaders as at present. He suggested the establishment of a "militant and humanizing" Republican party in the city and had some minor suggestions about bringing together the "wet" and "dry" Republicans and those of the so-called higher stratum with "the mediocre and plain strata."

Reviews Past Campaigns.

In giving the reasons for repeated Republican defeats since he became Brooklyn Republican leader in 1912, Mr. Livingston reviewed each campaign since that time. Regarding the result in Brooklyn at the recent election, he said:

"In 1929 Walker carried the county over La Guardia by 149,005. We conducted in this county, exclusive of clubhouse meetings, fifty-five meetings well attended, postal cards for these meetings being addressed to the registered voters, and did everything we possibly could to bring about a victory. Reasons for defeat. Thousands of dry Republicans refused to support our candidate. Thousands of Republicans refused to support our candidate because of his nationality. We elected three Democratic Justices of the City Court, ten Democratic Justices of the Municipal Court, one Democratic Justice of the Supreme Court, twenty-three Democratic members of the Assembly and twenty-four Democratic members of the Board of Aldermen."

In his summary of the reasons for the repeated Republican defeats, Mr. Livingston listed as causes the great increase in the number of voters, with failure of the Republicans to get a fair share of those of foreign extraction, the great increase in the number of city employes who vote the Tammany ticket, Republican transit legislation at Albany, the injection of prohibition as a political issue, the enfranchisement of women, with a greater percentage of Democratic women voting; the size of the respective campaign funds, estimated by Mr. Livingston as having been $1,500,000 for the Democrats and $250,000 for the Republicans this year; inability to convince the voters that Tammany Hall could be beaten and repeated nomination of a Republican to head the anti-Tammany ticket.

Mr. Livingston declared that there should be a proper reapportionment of the Congressional, Senatorial and Assembly districts in accordance with the Federal and State Constitutions.

KOENIG TELLS OF MOVE TO STRENGTHEN PARTY

Informs County Committee That Conferences Are Being Held to Formulate Plan.

Samuel S. Koenig, Manhattan Republican leader, told members of the Republican county committee, meeting at the New Palm Garden last night for the first time since the election, that conferences of prominent party men and women were being held continually with a view to forming a harmonious plan to strengthen the party.

"I feel at the present moment," said Mr. Koenig, "that we should not take up any matters that perhaps are occupying the minds of our friends. Perhaps it would be better to leave that to some occasion more appropriate. The party workers are to be congratulated on the splendid fight they made under very adverse conditions.

"This is not the time to analyze results, but for your information I can tell you that there are plans under consideration for the good and welfare of the party in the city and the State. Men and women of all shades of opinion are conferring in an effort to get a harmonious plan to strengthen the party. These plans have not yet reached the stage where a fair report is justified. But I can assure you that these conferences are going on and will continue, and we hope as a result of them to establish a vigorous party in the city and certain parts of the State."

Mr. Koenig by inference replied to critics who voiced their objections to him after the defeat. New York County, he said, had something to point to, in that the Republicans of the county had returned the only Republican Assemblymen from the city and had also elected the only four Republican Aldermen. He introduced the eight successful candidates, Assemblymen Lefkowitz, Moffat, Rivers and Perkins, and the Aldermen, Baldwin, Manzelo, Hawkins and Moore, who rose to receive the applause of the committee members.

"We are under great obligation," said Mr. Koenig, "to the man who led the fight for us when others did not want to, and the party is indebted to that man, Major La Guardia." Applause followed this statement.

Littauer Estate Is $10,897,707.

Special to The New York Times.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The transfer tax appraisal today showed that the estate of Eugene Littauer is worth $10,897,707. William Littauer of Washington, D. C., gets $250,000. The remainder is divided into five equal trust funds, the income from which goes to Mr. Littauer's brother, William, three nephews, Harold C. Richard, Walter L. Richard and George N. Richard of New York City, and a niece, Catherine Louise Doeller of Washington.

VARIED INDUSTRIES IN PRISONS URGED

Massachusetts Official Says Concentration on Few Lines Arouses Opposition.

TRADE SCHOOLS PRAISED

E. C. Bagley Tells Crime Board of Results Achieved by Fitting Convict to Suitable Job.

Two Massachusetts officials told of the prison industries of their State at an all-day meeting of the New York State Crime Commission at the Bar Association Building yesterday. Members of the commission, of which State Senator Caleb H. Baumes is chairman, agreed that the prison industrial work in that State was the best they had studied.

Edward C. Bagley, Deputy Commissioner of Correction, and Howard B. Gill, superintendent of the State Prison Colony at Norfolk, outlined the work being done in Massachusetts. Mr. Bagley was before the commission for three hours in the morning, while Mr. Gill consumed all but the last fifteen minutes of the three and one-half hour afternoon session.

Mr. Bagley discussed the sale of the products of prison industry, and the question of putting the prisoners to work. He said excellent results had been obtained through fitting the individual prisoner to a suitable job. He explained that diversified industries had been established, with close attention to the probable opportunities for work which the prisoner would have when released.

Tells of Trade School Benefits.

Mr. Bagley mentioned that stocking making had been transferred from the men's to the women's prison ten years ago. Thomas S. Rice of the commission commented that Sing Sing prisoners object strenuously to making stockings, contending that it is "women's work," and Mr. Bagley said that the stocking factory should be removed from Sing Sing for that reason.

Mr. Bagley said that the improved spirit manifested by the prisoners after trade schools were established had resulted in more work being accomplished in the half-day still devoted to industry than had been accomplished previously in the full day.

Mr. Bagley recommended that the New York law requiring State and municipal departments to buy prison-made goods be amended to provide "teeth," as in his State. In Massachusetts, he explained, the Commissioner of Correction has the power to stop payment on orders for goods which could have been supplied by the prisons and to recommend prosecution to the District Attorney.

Criticizes Atlanta Prison.

Mr. Gill declared that opposition to prison industries by business and labor was due to putting prison-made goods on the market below the current price and to concentration of prison labor on one or two products so that the market was glutted. A fair-price policy, diversification of prison industries and complete frankness and publicity about all business affairs, Mr. Gill said, would wipe out all opposition.

Mr. Gill cited Atlanta Penitentiary, where he said practically the whole prison population was employed in the manufacture of cotton goods, as an example of the bad effects of concentration.

"The result is a growing opposition on the part of the textile manufacturers," he said, "which will eventually put the prison industry out of business, as it should be put out of business."

Mr. Gill also told of the new prison at Norfolk, which is being constructed largely by convict labor, working in cooperation with the labor unions and side by side with union laborers.

Samuel Lewisohn, of the national committee on prisons and prison labor, spoke briefly on the need for improving the parole system in the State. The commission will meet again at 10 o'clock this morning.

FEDERAL PRISONS HELD 12,833 AT END OF JUNE

From 6,000 to 9,000 Were Also Government Prisoners in City and County Jails.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The number of inmates of all Federal prisons increased during the year ended June 30, according to statistics made public today by the Department of Justice.

In Federal prisons, reformatories and State prisons at the close of the fiscal year there were 12,833 convicts, not including part-time prisoners in county and city jails, of which there was an average of from 8,000 to 9,000.

Of the total 3,589 were convicted under the Volstead law, 2,234 for narcotic violations, 1,515 for transporting stolen automobiles, 903 for violating the postal laws, 211 for slayings and 148 for robbery.

TO RESUME WORK AT LUXOR.

Howard Carter Hopes to End Task at Tut-ankh-Amen's Tomb in 1930.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 21.—Howard Carter, who is now here, will leave for Luxor soon to resume work on Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb, which he hopes to complete by the end of 1930. Four shrines remain to be removed from it.

It has been suggested that Mr. Carter, after completing his work at Luxor, should turn his attention to finding the body of Alexander the Great, who, according to Plutarch, is buried in a golden coffin in Alexandria. Mr. Carter is not sure whether he will undertake the task, but may do so a year after he is done with the Valley of the Kings.

Meanwhile, he is engaged on the completion of three popular volumes on Tut-ankh-Amen.

name of his attorney, Frank Aranow, in whose suite at 84 William Street he has his law office.

The statement said the indictment was dismissed, not on technical grounds, but upon "grounds which involve the substantial merits of the case."

"This decision directly determines that no indictment should have been brought against Judge Mancuso," the statement concluded.

Isidore Glauberman of 132 Nassau Street, attorney for Paterno, Rose and Soraci, initiated the action which resulted in the overthrow of the formal charge against the directors. He filed demurrers on behalf of his clients on Oct. 22, citing the Georgia case, and then submitted a fifty-two-page brief on Oct. 30. Similar motions were made by Mr. Aranow for Mr. Mancuso and Robert S. Johnstone for Isadore Siegeltuch, who is himself an attorney. Oral argument was heard by Justice Tompkins at his chambers in Nyack last Friday.

Text of Decision.

His decision, as sent to the District Attorney, reads:

New York Supreme Court—New York County.

The People of the State of New York, against
Francis X. Mancuso, Anthony Di Paola, Salvatore Soraci, Leonard Rose, Frederick Ferrari, Isadore Siegeltuch and Francis S. Paterno, Defendants.

Tompkins, J.

The above named defendants were indicted under Subdivision One of Section 297 of the Penal Code and are charged with having participated, as directors, in the fraudulent insolvency of the City Trust Company.

The last paragraph of Section 297 must be read in connection with Subdivision One and as a part thereof. A penal law of the State of Georgia, similar, in all its material provisions, to Section 297 of our Penal Code, has been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. (Manley vs. Georgia, 279 U. S., Page 1.)

The validity of Section 297 has never been adjudicated by any court in this State so far as we can find, and its provisions are so nearly identical with the Georgia statute that I feel constrained to accept the decision in the Manley case as controlling authority, and it follows that the demurrers must be allowed.

If these defendants as directors of the trust company have wilfully done any act which is expressly forbidden by law or have wilfully omitted any duty imposed upon them by law they may be indicted under Subdivision Two of Section 297 of the Penal Code, as to the validity of which there is no question.

The demurrers to the indictments against Soraci and Rose for making false entries, &c., are overruled.

Dated, November 20, 1929.

The demurrers which are overruled against Soraci and Rose were on separate indictments in connection with the filing of a false report to the Banking Department.

Section 297 contains two parts and the directors were accused under the first part, which reads:

"Every director of a moneyed corporation who in case of the fraudulent insolvency of such corporation shall have participated in such fraud * * * shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

A concluding paragraph, and it is this part which was held to deprive the defendants of the protection of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, says:

"The insolvency of a moneyed corporation is deemed fraudulent unless its affairs appear upon investigation to have been administered fairly, legally and with the same care and diligence that agents receiving a compensation for their services are bound, by law, to observe."

Mr. Banton holds that this paragraph is not essential to the State's case. He says that this does not concern the crime itself but the evidence regarding the crime.

He maintains that the State has ample proof of the fraud in the failure of the City Trust without relying on that specification. It is on this contention that the appeal will be brought. He will confer with Special Assistant Hiram C. Todd, appointed specially to prepare and try the City Trust cases, and Assistants Ferdinand Pecora and Harold W. Hastings regarding the argument on appeal and the advisability of recalling the grand jury.

McAdoo Warns of Impostors.

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo warned the public yesterday against impostors posing as representatives of magistrate court employes' fraternal organizations, whether they offered to sell tickets for social affairs or advertising space in publications. He said such attempts were being made to collect money under false pretenses.

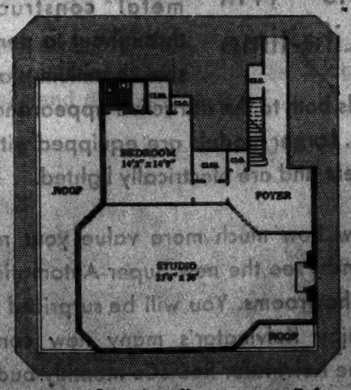
ISOLATION
at 42nd Street

These studio apartments in Windsor Tower are high above the city overlooking the East River

AT the very top of Windsor Tower, the great new Tudor City unit, are a few studio apartments, high above the East River. On the other side they are as superbly isolated. The noise of the city far below fades to a dim murmur. Each has its own large roof garden. And from here and from the windows there are magnificent views up the river and over the city.

Living rooms, two stories high, have many windows—in many cases on three sides—which reach from floor to ceiling. There are broad galleries and fireplaces in deep Elizabethan inglenooks. One type of studio is illustrated. Others have one or two bedrooms. All have generous roof and closet space.



Lower floor of studio—4 rooms. Balconied 2-story living room, 11 closets, 3 bedrooms—and 1500 sq. ft. of roof space.

There are many other fine apartments of one and two rooms in Windsor Tower and all enjoy the many privileges of Tudor City. Three restaurants, miniature eighteen hole golf course, golf school, maid and valet service, private school for children, indoor and outdoor playgrounds, community stores, nursing bureau. All are hotel apartments. Prices range from $3500 to $8500 for studio apartments. 1 room apartments from $775. 2 room apartments from $1250. Any apartment may be rented furnished at a reasonable additional charge. Apartments in Windsor Tower are now open for inspection and leasing. Ready for occupancy on January 1st, 1930.

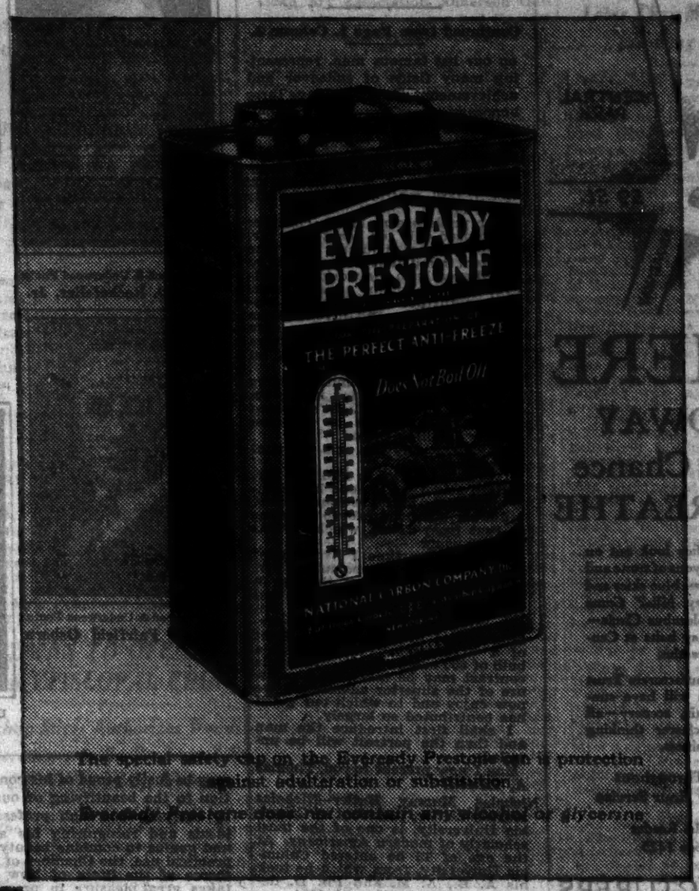
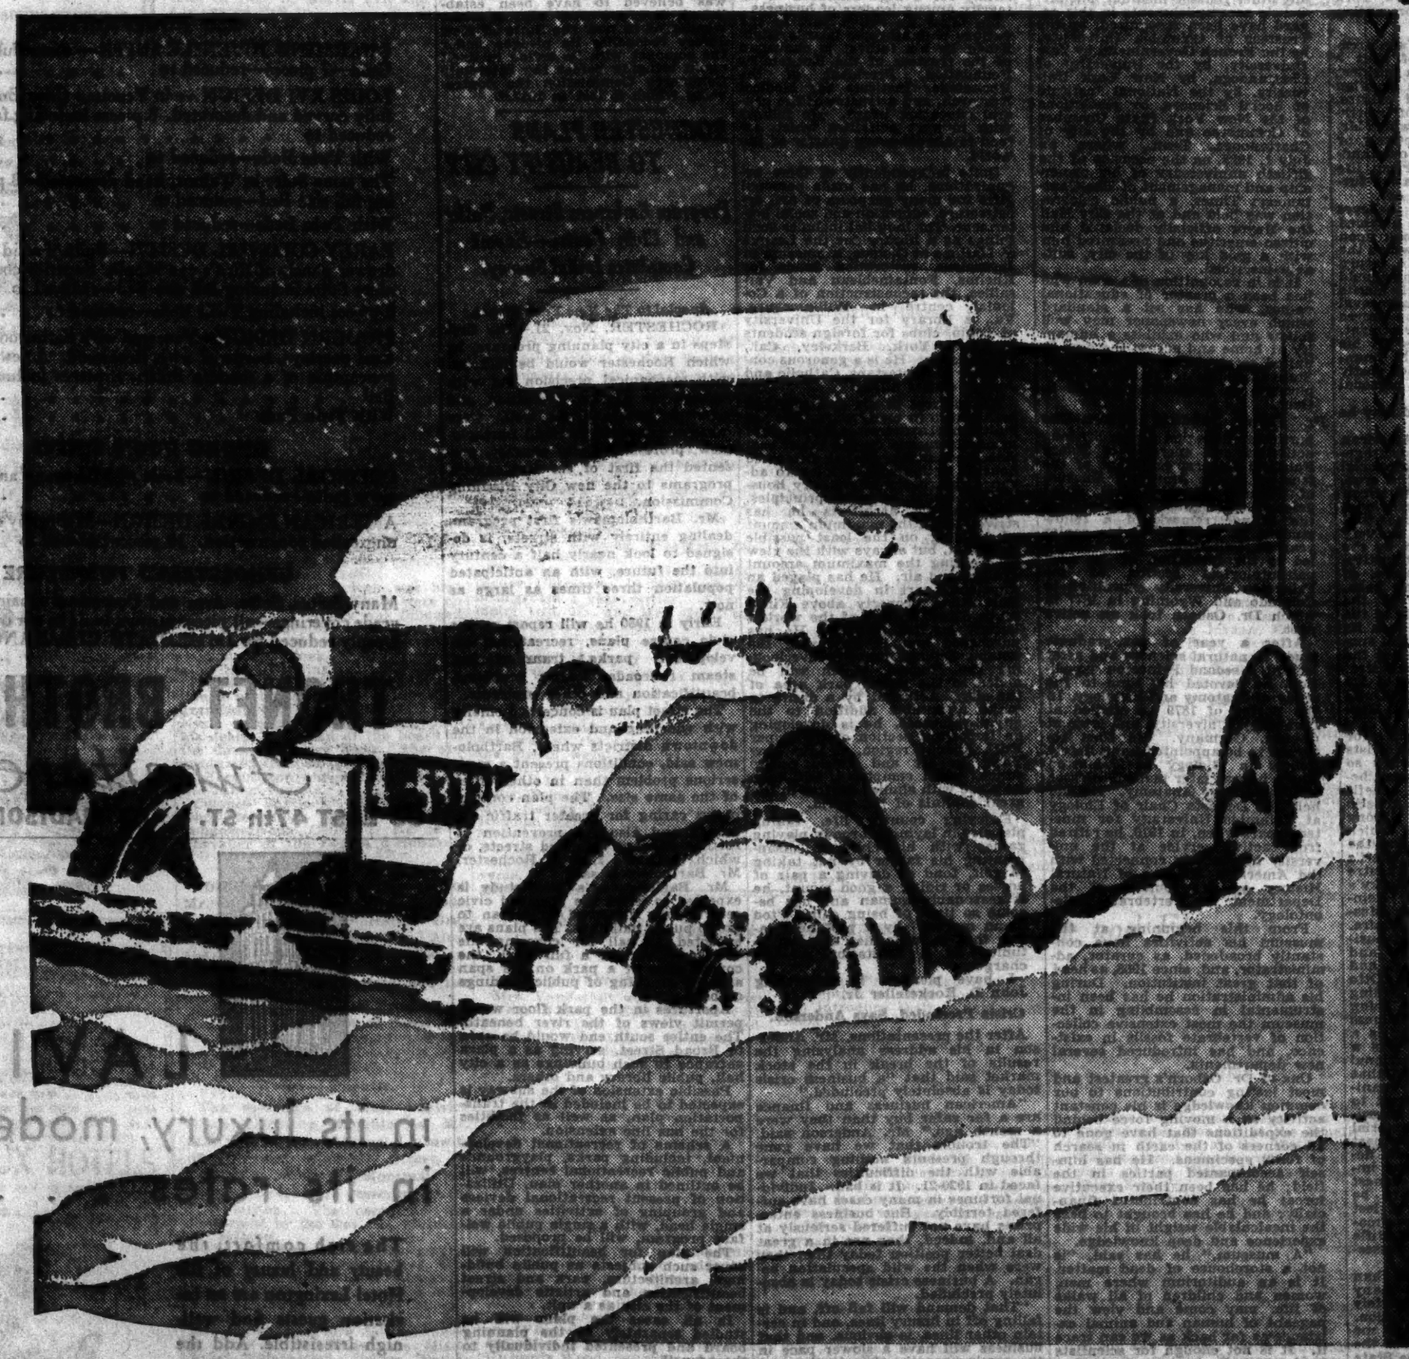
DELAY IS DANGEROUS WINTER'S HERE! >>>

MAKE SURE TODAY THAT YOUR CAR IS SAFE ALL SEASON <<< GET ONE SUPPLY OF EVEREADY PRESTONE



The special safety cap on the Eveready Prestone can is protection against adulteration or substitution.

A GREAT SUCCESS! THE MOST TRUSTWORTHY, PERMANENT PROTECTION >>>



EVERY day's delay from now on means greater risk for your car—more possibility of a frozen radiator, a cracked motor. Don't take needless chances when one filling of Eveready Prestone will keep your automobile safe through the severest winter.

With one supply of this perfect anti-freeze in the radiator, any car can be driven continuously through warm and cold weather without the possibility of lessened protection—Eveready Prestone provides permanent security as long as it is in the cooling system. Because of its lasting qualities and because it is a pure, undiluted product (less of which is needed) Eveready Prestone becomes a very economical investment in cold-weather safety for every car owner.

Before you add Eveready Prestone to the water in your radiator, have your cooling system thoroughly serviced. Be sure your car has a clean cooling system, free from accumulated scale and rust; with all connections tight and leak-proof. Then, one supply of Eveready Prestone will relieve you of all anti-freeze worries and inconveniences for the entire winter.

So successful has Eveready Prestone been in furnishing ideal cold-weather protection that the U. S. Navy uses it in the giant "Los Angeles" and smaller dirigibles. The water-cooled planes of the U. S. Army air force are protected with it. Commander Byrd took Eveready Prestone to Antarctica with him to safeguard his tractors, snowmobiles and generating plants. Wherever protection—sure, lasting, harmless protection—is needed, this perfect anti-freeze is in service.

Eveready Prestone is entirely different from ordinary mixtures or solutions. It is a new chemical compound, discovered to possess all the properties which the National Bureau of Standards has pointed out as essential for an anti-freeze.

Nothing else provides the complete satisfaction possible with this ideal anti-freeze. Your automobile represents an investment that needs this certain, harmless assurance of safety. Have the circulating system of your car made clean and tight today and get your winter's supply of Eveready Prestone. It is sold by garages, filling stations, automotive supply shops and hardware stores.

9 POINTS OF SUPERIORITY

1. Gives complete protection.
2. Does not boil off.
3. Positively will not damage cooling system.
4. Will not heat up a motor.
5. Circulates freely at the lowest operating temperatures.
6. Will not affect paint, varnish or lacquer finishes.
7. Non-inflammable.
8. Odorless.
9. Economical—one filling lasts all winter.

Thoroughly tested and 100% approved by the American Automobile Association.

Prepare Your Car for Winter Driving

Every reasonable precaution should be taken to provide a car with defense against the hardships and dangers of winter driving. Be certain the crankcase, differential and transmission of your car have the right oil and grease for winter. See that the winter front works properly. Have your spark plugs, cables and batteries looked over. Radiator and water-jacket should be cleaned. See that all connections are tight and that all accumulated rust and scale is flushed out.

SEVEN ARE HONORED BY STATE CHAMBER

on our list famous men, representing many fields of endeavor and achievement. Today we have three honorary members—Elihu Root, Charles Evans Hughes and Thomas A. Edison. Of all of our honorary members, Mr. Edison holds the record for the longest term of membership, having been elected on Oct. 7, 1889, a little more than forty years ago.

Our predecessors in the chamber recognized only ten years after Mr. Edison's great triumph with the filament lamp that he had already added greatly to the world's knowledge and to human advancement. With a further forty years of scientific discovery and invention we cannot fail to recognize how wise and how foresighted those members were when they elected him an honorary member.

His manifold contributions have been so widely heralded in the recent celebration of Light's Golden Jubilee that there is no occasion for my detailing them.

May I say only this as a personal experience:

I went to Mexico in 1881 and Mr. Edison asked me to send him bamboo in all the varieties found there. I did so, but none proved superior to that from China, which he was already using.

Much of the time I lived under canvas and when opportunity permitted I drove a nail through a board, skewered a candle on it and read far into the night with entire satisfaction. Now in the evening I read by the reflected light of a "Luminator" with a single bulb of 300 candle power. And this contrast may be taken as a measure of the superior advantages we now enjoy and to which our guest has contributed so largely.

I shall first introduce the man and then the portrait will be unveiled.

May I now present to you, Thomas A. Edison.

Nicholas Murray Butler—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, is one of the most scholarly of modern Americans. At the age of 16 he entered Columbia University, from which he took his A. B., A. M. and Ph. D. degrees in 1882, 1883 and 1884, respectively. Upon his return from continued studies abroad in the universities of Paris and Berlin he became an instructor at Columbia University, rising through all the professional degrees until he became, in 1890, Dean of the Faculty of Philosophy. Meanwhile, in addition to his duties at the university he found time to study the educational systems of the State and city and to compile statistics and official documents relating to them. He was president of Barnard College and the first president of the New York College for the Training of Teachers (now Teachers' College of Columbia University).

On the resignation of Seth Low, then eleventh president of the university, to become fusion candidate for Mayor of New York City, to which office he was elected, Dr. Butler was appointed acting president. On June 6, 1902, he was elected president.

While having a genius for keeping in his hands in an unusual way the necessary facts connected with the university's administration, he has found the time and energy to give to many varied public interests both in the United States and foreign countries. He has been one of the largest contributors to the literature of his profession; he has taken a prominent part in politics; he has been actively interested in many organizations outside the field of his profession, among which are the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the National Institute of Arts and Letters, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the New York Philharmonic Society and the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York; he has received honorary degrees from twenty-four of the largest universities, both American and foreign; he is Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor and holds orders from Prussia, Greece, Serbia, Belgium, Poland and Italy.

To those who know him his versatility is a constant source of wonder. With apparently equal aptitude he discusses philosophy, politics, literature, finance, educational theory and administration. As a student he is thorough; as a thinker he is logical, consistent and honest. We regard him as an example of the most progressive element in contemporary educational life, and as such the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York takes pleasure in presenting Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

Cass Gilbert—During the last decade the eyes of the world have been turned toward America for inspiration and knowledge in that field of art in which we have excelled—architecture. Cass Gilbert is one of the outstanding figures in this profession and has, by his genius, helped to make New York's skyline one of the wonders of our time.

It is to him that we owe, among other things, the imposing mass of the Woolworth Building, the United States Custom House at Bowling Green, the new building of the New York Life Insurance Company on Madison Avenue, and, most recently, the Hudson River Bridge at Fort Lee which will be not only beautiful architecturally, but the longest suspension bridge yet to be built.

Cass Gilbert has expressed in his buildings his belief in America's love for and appreciation of beauty. He has developed that beauty by line, fine proportion and interesting mass, rather than in elaboration of ornamentation; he has frankly and freely allowed his building to express its use and its structure but at the same time has preserved a beauty of economic and commercial value.

His expressed ideals in regard to his profession are that an architect must be an artist in every sense of that word; that he should intelligently grasp and practice, in so far as time and opportunity permit, all branches of the fine arts; that he must be a master builder and must know every detail and phase of the work all the way from the drawing of the designs to the practical completion of the building.

Proof of the fact that his ability and genius have been recognized in many ways and over a period of many years is evidenced by his appointment by President Roosevelt as chairman of the council of fine arts and by his appointment by President Taft and reappointment by President Wilson as a member of the committee on fine arts. He was one of the founders of the architectural league and its president, 1913-14; he was elected to the National Academy in 1908; he was president of the American Institute of Architects, 1908-09; president of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, 1919; president of the National Academy of Design, 1925-27; he is honorary corresponding member of the Royal Institute of British Architects; honorary member of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada; member of the Legion of Honor; and he holds the Order of King Albert of Belgium.

Believing that we in New York may be justly proud of his contribution to the beautifying of our city by carrying out high professional ideals and recognizing his ability and genius to combine beauty with practical use, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York takes great pleasure in presenting to you Cass Gilbert.

Otto H. Kahn—Otto H. Kahn's career is convincing proof that a man may be successful in business and yet be zealous in his devotion to things of beauty and culture. There are few fields of worthwhile human endeavor in which Mr. Kahn's interest is not actively or latently engaged, but his outstanding contribution to American life is his constant and unwearied furtherance of the cause of art.

He himself feels and believes that every man who has attained material success should look upon himself as an investment which the community has made. In return for opportunities offered he should pay dividends in service. He merits the commendation or disapproval of his fellow-citizens as he proves to be a good or a bad investment. Mr. Kahn has chosen to do his share through his aid to art, financial support, and what is of vastly greater importance, his personal interest and effort.

His activities in this field may be considered twofold.

First. To aid individual American talent by sympathy, encouragement, understanding and financial support, and to further the creation and development of American art institutions. The individual artists and the artistic causes that have benefited by his help are very numerous and are covered by the cloak of anonymity. Of art institutions the Metropolitan Opera, of which he is and has long been, president and chairman of the board, stands conspicuously at the head of the list. He has been its leading spirit and its principal supporter. Among the others are the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, the Federation of Arts, School Art League, Arts Council, Theatre Guild and Miss Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theatre.

Second: To make it possible for the best of foreign art and artists to be brought to this country so that the American public may become acquainted with and benefit from the most worthwhile artistic achievements of Europe. Among enterprises of that nature which found in him their inspiration the most prominent are Diaghileff's Russian Ballet, Copeau's Theatre du Vieux Colombier, Stanislavsky's Moscow Art Theatre, Max Reinhardt's Repertory Company, Messager's Orchestra du Conservatoire.

The day has passed when business look saskance at art and treats it as a trivial thing, and one perhaps to be ignored. Otto Kahn is quite right in holding that "it is more and more being recognized by hard-headed business men in America that beauty is a good investment, that art has a very social, cultural, educational and even economic value and that the cultivation of art in its manifold manifestations is an asset to the community. The very magnitude and intensity of our material growth and achievements this past decade make it all the more desirable and of all the greater importance to the nation, that earnest attention and fostering care be given to things of the spirit, lest it should come to pass that our material occupations thwart and stifle our more precious national possessions."

I have known him for more than a quarter of a century under many trying conditions and so intimately as to feel for him a real affection. It is a great gratification to me to present to you on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York Otto H. Kahn.

Adolph S. Ochs—Adolph S. Ochs, at the age of 11, had a newspaper route upon which he delivered The Knoxville Chronicle. By 15, after availing of such educational facilities as Knoxville offered, he entered the employ of that paper and when, at 17, he left its service the editor commended him as honest, zealous, reliable and trustworthy; quick to comprehend and faithful, being endowed with an intellect capable of reaching the highest point in mental achievement. It is not too much to say that this forecast of Mr. Ochs's character and capacity has been fully justified.

Later he saw service with The Louisville Courier-Journal, Knoxville Daily Tribune and The Chattanooga Times, which last paper he purchased at the age of 20 years and still owns. He was largely responsible for the organization of the Southern Associated Press. He obtained control of THE NEW YORK TIMES in 1896. His expressed ambition then was to give through it the news, all the news, in concise and attractive form, in language permissible in good society, impartially, without fear or favor, regardless of party, sect or interest involved; to make the columns of the paper a forum for the consideration of all questions of public importance, and to that end to invite intelligent discussion from all shades of opinion.

It is not too much to state that THE NEW YORK TIMES has obtained a foremost place in the journalism of the world and is noted for maintaining the highest standard of journalism and as appealing to intelligent, thoughtful people.

Time will not permit a review of the many additions in its development or the efforts made to give the news as early, if not earlier, than it could be learned through any other reliable medium, but Mr. Ochs's accomplishments in this regard have been recognized, by the Trustees of Columbia University, by the French Government, by Yale University, by the University of Chattanooga, by New York University, by the National Institute of Social Sciences, by resolutions of the New York State Chamber of Commerce and by the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., where, on July 1, 1928, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his ownership and management of The Chattanooga Times, a public celebration was held and at the City Hall the Mayor officially declared him citizen emeritus and presented him with a gold key of the city, suitably inscribed.

It is in recognition of a man who has been a creator of educational values, who has set a standard which every newspaper may well follow and who exhibits a humanity at home and across the seas in united service that the New York State Chamber of Commerce takes pleasure in presenting Adolph S. Ochs.

Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn—The particular direction of the life-long activities and energies of Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the trustees of the American Museum of Natural History, and noted paleontologist, was determined by the chance remark of a fellow student at the end of his senior year at Princeton. This remark led to the formation of the first paleontological section of the Princeton University expedition to Colorado and Wyoming in 1877 in which Dr. Osborn took an active part.

After a year of post-graduate study in natural sciences and after leading a second Princeton expedition, he devoted his time to the study of anatomy and histology. In the Spring of 1879 he studied at Cambridge University, and later at Coburg, Germany. He then returned to be appointed immediately Fellow in Biology at Princeton where he was later made Professor of Comparative Anatomy. He had held the DeCosta Chair of Biology at Columbia University for nineteen years when, in 1910, he retired from active service at the university but became connected with the American Museum of Natural History as the founder of the Department of Vertebrate Paleontology.

From this beginning at the museum his activities have constantly broadened, as curator, administrator, and, since 1908, as head of that great institution. During his administration he has been instrumental in assembling in the museum the most extensive collection of vertebrate fossils in existence, and has introduced several new departments.

One of Dr. Osborn's greatest and most lasting contributions to our common knowledge is his constant activity as a moving force behind the expeditions that have gone to all corners of the earth in search of fossil specimens. He has himself accompanied parties in the field; he has been their executive force; he has contributed financially; and he has brought to bear the incalculable weight of his wide experience and deep knowledge.

"A museum," he has said, "is not a storehouse of dead matter. It is an auditorium where men, women and children of all walks of life, may come and view the pageant of human and animal existence as far back as we can trace it. It is not enough for scientists to know. It is important that people should know." This great humanising influence has made itself felt in all of his varied and outstanding work; but never more than in his writings. "That the people should know" is his aim in writing and his works have been translated into many different languages.

The world would not have advanced spiritually and materially if such seekers after truth had not published their contributions to science. No man has done more than he to widen the horizons of our knowledge, through the recording of the results of his scientific researches so that the layman may actually see them in the museum, or read of them in the lucid phrases that make it possible for one to thrill at his disclosures.

For these achievements he has been honored by Princeton, Trinity, Columbia, Cambridge, Oxford and Christiania Universities. His relation with the Chamber has the force of a tradition. His maternal grandfather, Jonathan Sturges, was a member of the Chamber from 1834 to 1874, a period of forty years, and one of its Vice Presidents from 1863 to 1867. His father William H. Osborn, was a leader in the Illinois Central Railroad and promoted its extension to New Orleans.

I beg to present to you Henry Fairfield Osborn.

John D. Rockefeller Jr.—It is sometimes said that John D. Rockefeller Jr., is interested not in making money but only in giving it away. As a matter of fact, he devotes much time to his heavy industrial and financial responsibilities. Not content with things as they are, he seeks to improve industrial relations and to deepen the sense of social responsibility in corporation management, standing firmly for a high standard of integrity among leaders of business.

He takes an active part in the various philanthropic boards established by his father; is chairman of the trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation, President of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, and a trustee of the general education board. He follows with interest activities which attend to almost every quarter of the world.

Quite independently of these organizations, he has made personal gifts for many purposes of art, architecture, education and social betterment. The long list includes such things as a library for the League of Nations at Geneva, a museum in Jerusalem, restoration funds for Rheims, Fontainebleau and Versailles, the reconstruction of a Colonial centre in Williamsburg, Va., a library for the University of Tokio, clubs for foreign students in New York, Berkeley, Cal., and Chicago. He is a generous contributor to Protestant, Catholic and Jewish causes alike.

His interest in his own city has been shown in many ways. He has built model apartments for people of moderate means on the upper east side, and in this he has combined housing with thrift, helping to advance the theory of sanitary housing on sound business principles. Through his architects he has striven to get the maximum amount of building on the least possible land area, but always with the view of securing the maximum amount of light and air. He has played an important part in developing the East River property above Fifty-ninth Street as one of the world's largest medical centres. He has purchased and is improving the notable Billings property overlooking the Hudson, which will be added to the public park area of the city. Actuated by a desire to make a notable addition to the city's resources, he is developing an important section of the upper Fifth Avenue region, to give New York an art and music centre which, when completed, will take its place with similar centres in the great capitals of the world.

Enjoying country life, taking pleasure in laying out roads, playing games with his children, disappointing his father by not taking to golf, fond of driving a pair of horses or riding a good mount, he is reasonably human and has become so tired of being called "too damn modest" by a profane relative that he welcomes this opportunity as a refutation of the charge.

I have pleasure in presenting John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Crisis Precluded, Says Anderson.

After the presentations, Mr. Anderson in his address analyzing the results of the break in the stock market said that "a business crisis today is absolutely precluded."

"American business and finance are a far safer buy than they were a month ago," Mr. Anderson said. "The trouble that we have gone through presents nothing comparable with the difficulties that we faced in 1920-21. It is bad. Individual fortunes in many cases have suffered terribly. But business enterprises have not suffered seriously at all and, indeed, they are in a great deal better position today than they were when the wild speculation began. A business crisis today is absolutely precluded.

"That demand will fall off, and is falling off in luxury lines, and in certain other lines, is obvious, and that business will have a slower pace in the coming months than in the past twelve months is reasonably to be expected. But the movement is from an entirely high level, and it is incredible that the movement should be anything like as much downward as it would be if a business crisis had intervened. We shall be talking about profits rather than solvency in the coming months, and if the profits are less satisfactory than those of the past twelve months, we have surely not grown so soft that our commercial and financial fabric cannot stand that."

Blames Cheap Money.

The basic causes of "our present troubles" were attributed by Mr. Anderson to excessively cheap money and unlimited bank credit available for capital uses and speculation from early 1922 until early 1928, with an interruption in 1923.

The "match to the powder keg" was set in 1927, Mr. Anderson said, when we lowered our rates of interest sharply and greatly expanded our volume of credit. It was then, he said, that the spirit of speculation became irresistible.

"We have fallen down a hill and we find ourselves bruised and scratched, and with our nerves unstrung," Mr. Anderson said. "But no bones are broken and there are no internal injuries. We are perfectly able to get up and walk. It is just as well, however, that we shouldn't try to run very fast immediately. There are those who would like to have us start running immediately by applying great doses of the same false stimulant that set us on our headlong, breakneck, heedless race that culminated in the fall over the hill. But I think that most of us will agree that it is just as well to quiet down a bit, study the sign posts and pick out safe roads to follow."

Stock market prices have had an immense slaughter," Mr. Anderson said. "Whether the next move will be up or down I do not know. But the market has a bottom. There are cushions and even powerful springs at the bottom, in the buying of investors who are waiting for the time and in the covering purchases by short sellers. At all events we may safely say that the market is now in a fighting range. It is a fighting market and a two-sided market, and it is an immeasurably safer market than it was a month ago."

Loree Recalls 1917 Treaty.

Mr. Loree declared the move of the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase rate differentials in favor of Philadelphia to 4 cents and of Baltimore to 6 cents was bound to injure greatly all industry and commerce in the Port of New York district. He likewise referred to the situation arising from the demand of New Jersey for the abolition of free lighterage in the Port of New York as "potent and sinister."

Reviewing the history of this problem, Mr. Loree emphasized the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1916 establishing the present system whereby both sides of the Hudson are treated as parts of one entity and recalled that in 1917, in accepting this decision, New Jersey had concluded a treaty with New York which sought to put at rest all controversies of this character.

"Under this compact the New York Port Authority has functioned," Mr. Loree said. "It built the Outerbridge Crossing and the Goethals Bridge connecting Staten Island with New Jersey at Perth Amboy and Elizabethport, and now has under construction a bridge connecting Manhattan with New Jersey at Fort Lee. Meanwhile the Holland Tunnel has been built and matters seemed to be working out to the general satisfaction.

"One ought not perhaps to be surprised—human nature being what it is—that again selfish interests should promote antagonism where peace was believed to have been established, but one may express some wonder as to how the State of New Jersey reconciles its pledges under the compact with its action in itself again bringing before the Interstate Commerce Commission the controversy which it lost in 1917."

ROCHESTER PLANS TO BEAUTIFY CITY

Program Embraces Streets, Parks and Civic Centre—Expert Completes Initial Survey.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 21.—The first steps in a city planning program, by which Rochester would be laid out with mechanical precision but with an eye to beauty, recreation and physical problems as well, were taken today when Harland Bartholomew, professional city planner, presented the first of six development programs to the new City Planning Commission.

Mr. Bartholomew's first program, dealing entirely with streets, is designed to look nearly half a century into the future, with an anticipated population three times as large as now.

Early in 1930 he will report on the civic centre plans, recreational development, parks, transportation, steam railroads, traffic problems, beautification and other problems.

The street plan is concerned chiefly with widening and extension in the downtown districts where, Bartholomew said, conditions present a more serious problem than in other cities of the same size. The plan contemplates caring for greater traffic demands and also the prevention of further jogs and dead-end streets, of which there are 1,700 in Rochester, Mr. Bartholomew said.

Mr. Bartholomew's next study is expected to cover the proposed civic centre, long discussed as a plan to group public buildings. The plans are expected to call for covering the Genesee River for a full block, the construction of a park on the span and the grouping of public buildings on both sides.

Apertures in the park floor would permit views of the river beneath. The entire south end would be open to Broad Street, serving as a plaza entrance to such buildings as a city hall, public library and others.

Possible extension of the subway is expected to be included in the transportation plan, as well as facilities for the bus line extension.

A scheme of recreational development, including parks, playgrounds and public recreational centres, will be outlined in another plan. Utilization of present recreational devices and grouping of activities under a single head, with a single public welfare program, will be proposed.

The plan for beautification will cover such subjects as public buildings, architecture, park and street beautification and artistic development of the city as a unit.

In all cases the plans will be studied separately by the planning board and presented individually to the council.

Mr. Bartholomew was retained by the new city manager government as part of the program to develop the city with regularity. Members of the City Planning Commission, leading citizens, serve without pay.

GUGGENHEIM PRESENTS CREDENTIALS IN CUBA

New Ambassador Tells Machado He Will Work for Mutual Friendship of Countries.

Special to The New York Times.

HAVANA, Nov. 21.—Harry Guggenheim, American Ambassador to Cuba, presented his credentials to President Machado this morning. A squadron of the President's guards escorted the Ambassadorial party from the hotel to the palace, where it stood at attention while the Cuban National Army band played.

President Machado and the Cabinet members awaited Mr. Guggenheim in the reception hall of the palace.

In presenting his credentials as Ambassador and delivering the letter of recall of Colonel Noble Brandon Judah, his predecessor, Mr. Guggenheim declared that he would "be governed by one dominant desire, that the bonds of sympathy between the two countries shall be strengthened."

Some Men Never Grow Up

The boy builds a house of blocks only to have it fall because it is top heavy.

Some men never outgrow the childhood habit. They build up their capital only to see it disappear in unsound investments. The boy enjoys the crash but to the man it is a serious business.

Such a calamity can be averted if you invest your money where your principal is sure to be protected.

MISS CONDON BRIDE OF LESLIE H. PELL

Suffragan Bishop Shipman Performs the Ceremony in St. Bartholomew's Chapel.

CONSTANCE NASH MARRIES

Wed to Colonel David E. Sherlock, D. S. O., of British Army, in St. Agnes Church—Other Nuptials.

Miss Elisabeth Stuyvesant Condon, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gerald Condon of this city and Southampton, L. I., was married to Leslie Hyde Pell, son of the late Alexander Mercer Pell and of Mrs. M. Ecclesine Daly of Paris, France, yesterday afternoon in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church. The Right Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan Bishop, performed the ceremony in the presence of near relatives and a few intimate friends.

The chancel of the little Byzantine chapel was banked with palms and cybotium ferns and there were vases of white chrysanthemums on the altar. Clusters of these Autumn flowers were fastened to the ends of alternate pews along the main aisle.

The bride was escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage. Her gown of ivory-colored flat crêpe was made on simple lines with a long train, over which in graceful folds fell her veil of old rose point lace, mellowed with age to a deep ivory color.

Mrs. Armour was matron of honor and her sister's only attendant. Her gown of silver brocade was fashioned along medieval lines and her headdress was of silver lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow calla lilies.

Mr. Pell was attended by five of his cousins, the Rev. Walden Pell 2d, as best man, and for ushers Robert Thompson Pell, John Howland G. Pell, S. Morris Pell and F. Livingston Pell Jr.

Following the ceremony there was a small reception in the ballroom of the Park Lane.

After their wedding trip Mr. Pell and his bride will live at 230 East Seventy-first Street.

Sherlock—Nash.

An international wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon in the Church of St. Agnes, East Forty-third Street, when Miss Constance Nash, elder daughter of Warren Bynner Nash of this city and Beacon Farm, Goldenbridge, N. Y., was married to Colonel David E. Sherlock, D. S. O., in command of the Fifty-fifth West Lancashire Division, Royal Artillery, and son of Mr. and Mrs. David Sherlock of Tullamore, Ireland. Only immediate relatives were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. George C. Ehardt.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a princess gown of ivory-colored satin and an old rose point lace, heirloom in the Nash family. It had been worn by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Antonio Ponvert, the former Miss Mubelle Nash, at her marriage. The bridal bouquet was composed of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Beatrice Nash was maid of honor and her sister's only attendant. She wore a frock of blue velvet with a hat of brown velvet, and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Major Edward Sherlock was best man for his brother. There were no ushers. The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's father, 410 Park Avenue.

Colonel Sherlock and his bride, after their wedding trip, will live in Liverpool, England, where he is stationed with his regiment. She is a granddaughter of the late William A. Nash, a former president and, until his death, chairman of the board of the Corn Exchange Bank. She was graduated from Miss Porter's School in Farmington and is a member of the Junior League.

Pincus—Krug.

Miss Jean Hazel Krug, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Krug of Brooklyn, was married to Harold Graf Pincus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Pincus of this city yesterday afternoon at the Ambassador. Dr. Alexander Lyons performed the ceremony.

Miss Natalie Pincus, a sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. Walter Krug, a brother of the bride, was best man for Mr. Pincus.

Wener—Liebowitz.

The marriage of Miss Beatrice Grace Liebowitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Lionel Liebowitz of 272 West Ninetieth Street, to Lawrence Wener of Montreal and this city, took place yesterday at the Ritz-Carlton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan.

The bride's mother was her matron of honor. The bride's sisters, Miss Sylvia and Miss Ruth Liebowitz, were maids of honor, and the other bridal attendants were Mrs. Michael Addison and Mrs. Harry Furst, cousins of the bride; Mrs. Samuel Cohen, a sister of the bride; the Misses Ethel Katzenstien, Esther Ruskay and Helen Wener, a cousin of the bridegroom. Joy Liebowitz was flower girl. Jacob H. Wener of Montreal was best man for his brother.

Jandorf—Hammel.

Miss Hannah Hammel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Hammel of 317 West Eighty-seventh Street, was married to Albert Edwin Jandorf of Kew Gardens, L. I., shortly after noon yesterday at the Dorset. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Aaron Eiseman. Miss Adele De Goff was maid of honor for the bride and the other attendants were Mrs. Albert Halford, Miss Clementyn Livingston and Miss Wilma Phillipson.

Mr. Jandorf had Albert Heifan for his best man, and the ushers were Jean Van Brink, Archibald Himmel and Seymour Hammel, uncle of the bride. A reception followed. The couple will go on a wedding trip, and on their return will live at 214 West Eighty-seventh Street.

Halpern—Silverman.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Silverman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Silverman of 915 West End Avenue, to Dr. Samuel Halpern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Halpern of Newark, took place last night at the Hotel Astor. The Rev. Dr. Max D. Davidson of Perth Amboy, N. J., performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, had her sister, Mrs. Max Grober, for her matron of honor. The maid of honor was Miss Miriam Gladys Silverman, niece of the bride. Two other small nieces, Thelma Silverman and Zelda Grober, were flower girls. Hyman Halpern was best man for his brother.

The couple will sail tonight on the Olympic for a wedding trip in Europe.

Ransom—Bridger.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The wedding of Miss Evelyn Preston Bridger, daughter of Edgar Bridger of Sutton Manor, New Rochelle, to Norman K. Ransom, son of the late Dr. Charles Cook Ransom and Mrs. Ransom of New York, took place this evening at the Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle. The Rev. Dr. George Reynolds, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Rochelle, performed the ceremony, which was attended by about sixty-five relatives and friends. A reception for 150 guests was held after the ceremony in the ballroom of the club.

Miss Clara Conway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Conway of New Rochelle, was the maid of honor. Lennox Ransom of Boston, a brother of the bridegroom, was the best man. There were no ushers.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, Mr. Ransom and his bride will reside in Sutton Manor, New Rochelle.

Alling—Robbins.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The marriage of Miss Mary Kent Robbins, daughter of Mrs. Lyman Hubbard Robbins, and the Rev. Roger Alling, assistant at Trinity Episcopal Church, Princeton, took place at Cincinnati, Ohio, on Tuesday of this week, it was announced here today. The ceremony was performed at the Church of the Resurrection, Fernwood.

Mr. Alling attended Kenyon College and General Theological Seminary in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Alling will be at home after Dec. 15 at 30 Nassau Street, Princeton.

Houghton—Prichitt.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Caroline Howard Prichitt of Charlton Avenue, South Orange, widow of Hugh K. Prichitt of New York, was married tonight to Dr. James Tilly Houghton of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in the First Presbyterian Church here by the Rev. Dr. Edmunson, in the presence of relatives.

Dr. Houghton is a graduate of Harvard University and the Harvard Medical School. He was surgeon of the 165th Infantry in New York, the old Sixty-ninth, and also of the Rainbow Division. Since the war he has been connected with several exploring expeditions. He was medical director of the Greek relief in Athens under General Haskell.

Upon their return from their wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Houghton will reside in South Orange.

Guild—Eden.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—Miss Ann Louise Eden, a New York artist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Y. Eden, was married here today in the parish house of the Presbyterian Church to Luerelle V. CADMAN TO OFFICIATE IN EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Bishop Stires Authorizes Wedding Ceremony to Be Performed by Congregationalist Minister.

The Right Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Long Island, has authorized the performance of a wedding ceremony tomorrow in the Church of St. James, St. James, L. I., by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, who is a Congregationalist minister, it was learned yesterday.

The wedding is that of Miss Gretta Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Smith of Smithtown, L. I., to Leverett Lyons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lyons of 244 New York Avenue, Brooklyn. The Smith family worship at St. James Church, while Mr. and Mrs. Lyons and their son are parishioners of Dr. Cadman.

Bishop Stires's action is in contrast with the attitude of Bishop William T. Manning, who last December refused to permit the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, a Baptist, to officiate at the marriage of Miss Virginia Rolland, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Karl Rolland, pastor of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, in her father's church.

The Rev. John C. Runkle, pastor of St. James's Church, said last night that he had received Bishop Stires's authorization for Dr. Cadman to conduct the ceremony. He declined to discuss the apparent contradiction between the attitudes of Bishop Stires and Bishop Manning. Efforts to reach Bishop Stires and Dr. Cadman were unsuccessful.

PREMIER MET DAWSON IN PENNILESS DAYS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—On the anniversary of the commencement of King George's grave illness, Lord Dawson of Penn, the royal physician, told a gathering of the Royal Society of Medicine tonight that it was a suitable moment to state the King, in his recovery, "goes from strength to strength."

Premier MacDonald was present at the banquet and recalled an occasion forty years ago when he and Lord Dawson were so broke that they had to walk part of the way home from Bloomsbury to North London.

"The first time I visited Buckingham Palace as a guest of the King," said Mr. MacDonald, "a distinguished looking man, whom I had been informed was Lord Dawson, came and shook my hand in a most familiar way saying, 'have you forgotten me?'

"Then he reminded me of a night when we had a frugal supper together in a Bloomsbury restaurant when he was a medical student and I a city clerk. Our combined wealth was insufficient to save us from walking as far as Holloway station.

"Could any of you, with all your capacity to forecast, then have said to both of us: 'Gentlemen, you will bid each other good night tonight at the corner of Holloway station and it will be your fate not to meet again until invited as guests of his Majesty to partake of his hospitality at Buckingham Palace!'"

A Son to Mrs. Thomas R. Jarman.

Word has been received here of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roden Jarman of Crozet, Albemarle County, Va., on Tuesday at the University of Virginia Hospital. Mrs. Jarman is the former Miss Augusta Firth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Firth of 1,293 Madison Avenue. The child will be named for his father.

A STRONG DELEGATION.

By adding Secretary ADAMS and Ambassador MORROW to the list of American delegates to the London Naval Conference, President HOOVER has given one more proof of the high importance which he attaches to their task. The negotiation will be delicate and difficult. In England at present the expectation is that it will extend over at least two months. There will be many conflicting points of view to reconcile and differing national demands to reduce to unanimous agreement. For the ultimate purposes of our domestic politics, Mr. HOOVER has selected two Senators, one a Republican and one a Democrat. They will be accompanied to London by two Cabinet Ministers and will be joined by three Ambassadors. It is particularly fortunate that the President is to avail himself of the services of Mr. MORROW. His reputation, already high and built higher by his work in Mexico, his familiarity with conditions and personalities in Europe, his ability to grasp complicated affairs, his flexible resource and patience in conference—all these qualities indicate him as just the man for the confidential and critical work now to be assigned to him.

The decision to ask Secretary ADAMS to go along with Secretary STIMSON is apparently intended to reassure any of our naval experts who may have felt a little worried about possible developments at London. Mr. ADAMS may not rank as a great authority in technical matters connected with the navy, but he is the head of the Navy Department, and is to have with him as skilled aides, who know all that is to be known about our naval problems, Admiral JONES and Admiral PRATT. In the hands of these men the fundamental interests of the navy will surely be safeguarded. They would not stand by and see what they felt to be the necessary first line of national defense carelessly weakened to the point of danger.

Thus the President seems to have completed a delegation strong at every point—politically, technically, diplomatically. If his plans do not succeed in London, it will not be for lack of having able men to present them and contend for them. But neither he nor Prime Minister MACDONALD would admit, after their meeting of minds, and in view of the enthusiastic backing which they have received, each from his own nation, that any such word as fail can be found in their lexicon.

THE SENSITIVE PLANT.

Since the majority of the Senate in the special session has been more eager to make "campaign material" for 1930 than to make a tariff, it is natural that an exasperation of temper, in part due to growing physical weariness, in part to political excitement, has been shown from time to time. Some manifestations of sensitiveness are surprising, even when full allowance for circumstances has been made. The Caraway committee has called to Washington a New York banker who ventured to blame the course of the coalitionists in regard to the tariff bill. With the correctness or incorrectness of his opinions we are not concerned; but we had supposed that it was the right of any citizen, even a banker, or a protected manufacturer, to utter his views about public questions, nor were we aware that there was any such offense as lèse-majesté of the Senate.

The culprit wasn't trying to influence Congress, or he wouldn't have censured the Senate. Was he trying to influence public opinion? Either offense, if not coincident with the purposes of the coalition, makes the offender a sinister lobbyist. If a manufacturer wants higher rates and sets forth his case or has it set forth, he is that infamous character. The farmers and the farm associations make their demands. These come through a hundred channels. The Congressional Record sags with them. The Senate grants them with enthusiasm. The farmers are sacred characters, pleading for emancipation and justice. Though they have the most powerful of lobbies, they are not lobbyists. For the Senate's delicate sensitiveness is accompanied with a larger zone of insensitiveness.

In a newspaper article a man made certain statements about business and finance and Congress. He even asked it to adjourn, which it is about to do. Whereupon certain Senators manufactured what Lord BRYCE called "mere rhetorical thunder addressed to the nation outside." That is harmless, but notice again how the august augurs flare up at the slightest stricture on themselves and criticize their critic intemperately and indecently. According to Senator BORAH, this unfortunate is "the venal slave of the interests." His statements are "mendacious." He is willing to "prostitute his intellect for certain purposes," and so on. Protected by his constitutional guarantee from being questioned "for any speech or debate," Mr. BORAH can insult and libel with impunity. The practice is too common in the Senate. It is one to which a man of Mr. BORAH'S calibre should be too magnanimous to descend.

It should be humiliating for Senators to reflect that these immune discharges of abuse are innocuous. A man would have to be a proved and notorious rascal before the country would take seriously the privileged billingsgate of Congress. But statesmen so susceptible to affront ought not to be so quick to give affront. After the recess, let us hope that the Senate's just sense of self-importance will be less often diverted into making itself ridiculous.

JUVENILE DELINQUENTS.

It would be of public interest to know how the increase in juvenile arrests for ten months of 1929, reported by Commissioner WHALEN, as compared with those of the like period in 1915, is to be related to the figures in Commissioner PATTERSON'S report of last July. They showed a "persistent decrease in the "percentage of prisoners between 16 "and 21 for 1916 to 1928." According to that report, there was not only a relative decrease during the period, but an encouraging diminution in actual numbers, the ratio of the juvenile prisoners to the total number admitted to city institutions remaining practically stationary for the last four years. Justice HOYT of the Children's Court reported a few months ago that juvenile delinquency began to show a falling off in his court after 1912 to 1917, when it rose slightly during the war, and then from 1918 fell or remained stationary till 1925, since which time there has been a perceptible rise. There seems to be nothing to foreshadow such a startling increase as Commissioner WHALEN reports (114 per cent). What occurs between arrest and imprisonment may give a more hopeful view. May it not be probation?

At best, the matter is serious. Commissioner WHALEN'S proposed cooperation between the Police Department and the social agencies in reaching individual boys who are in the way of becoming delinquent—hanging around pool-rooms and speakeasies and in other unwholesome surroundings—is excellent. It would be still better if the social agencies were adequately equipped to give attention to these individual boys, one by one. For "mass reform" is impracticable, except as playgrounds, boys' clubs, improved dwellings and the like furnish better environment. But brothers in the same physical environment live in varying mental environments due to their varying intelligence, emotional natures and other traits. The delinquents are found to be duller than others, except in mechanical ability. This suggests junior trade schools as one means of turning to good ends talent that, left to itself, tends to become a menace.

There is no panacea. There is no typical child. More and more, character training must seek to adapt itself to the individual who is, especially in large communities, liable to be treated simply as an impersonal unit in a social and industrial mass.

EDGE AND BAIRD.

The long-expected has happened, and Senator EDGE of New Jersey is our new Ambassador to France. He is of a type different from that of his eminent and beloved predecessor, but his qualifications for large affairs have been proved through long years in high office and in business. He knows the world of finance, of politics and of society; and his household also can be expected gracefully to make the transition from Atlantic City and Washington to Paris. The French will find Mr. EDGE a fit representative of Eastern citizenship, enjoying the close personal friendship of President HOOVER and familiar with the aspirations of France. After his selection was decided upon, and in fact made known, Mr. EDGE remained in the Senate beyond the time when his successor would have to face a special election this Fall, and also beyond the time when he could render the Administration any further service on the tariff bill. He quits the scene with the good-will and respect of his colleagues, who confirmed his appointment instantly in open executive session and dispatched to him a friendly telegram.

The expected has happened also in the appointment of DAVID BAIRD of Camden to fill Mr. EDGE'S place in the Senate. Once it became clear that Mr. BAIRD wanted to sit in his father's seat, the present Governor of New Jersey was in no position to refuse if he had wanted to. Mr. BAIRD is probably the most powerful Republican leader in the State. The romantic elements were also regarded in the appointment. Mr. BAIRD'S father, after helping Mr. EDGE to become Governor, was named United States Senator by Mr. EDGE, who now relinquishes the seat in favor of his appointee's son. Thus it becomes strictly a family affair, with every one happy except perhaps former Senator FRELINGHUYSEN. South Jersey overlords are difficult enough to defeat when they are merely supporting other candidates for office; when they are incumbents out for new terms the task becomes formidable. Should Mr. BAIRD decide to run next year for an elective tenure, and Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN remain in the field, the race will thrill Jersey from the Ramapos to Cape May.

ROMANCE IN THE ANTARCTIC.

Commander BYRD'S flight to the Queen Maud Mountains, 440 miles distant, and back to Little America had gratifying results. The navigation left nothing to be desired. When the mountains were reached the flying party was more than half-way to the South Pole, and a spot not far from Mount Nansen, whose ruggedness AMUNDSEN admired, was selected for a supply base. There a monument of fuel and oil cans was made and a cache of rations laid down. Pictures of the mountains were taken. Moving pictures, which should be seen in New York next year, were not forgotten. A pass for flying through the mountains seems to have been found. With favorable weather BYRD should be at the South Pole nine or ten hours after leaving Little America. With dog-sleds the journey took AMUNDSEN fifty-six days.

An experience that must have elated Commander BYRD was safe landing with skis on hard snow furrowed like flint. The speed with which a plane is driven along in the Antarctic impressed the fliers when they saw below them, looking like immovable midgets, the men of the geological party. There had been anxiety when a leak of fuel occurred on the way to the mountains. Fortunately, by quick recourse to inner tanks, the plane was kept going. A forced landing was not necessary until a point ninety-five miles from Little America on the way back. There "all three motors," said the Commander afterward, "quit at once." The landing on the sastrugi was a model of dexterity. Fifty gallons of gas, intended for the mountain base but poured into the tanks for the return trip, should apparently have been enough, but the leak was as bad as ever. With the plane down, the reserve machine, left behind at the base, was urgently needed, and was soon on the scene with reserve fuel. It returned when the big plane failed to appear at Little America. Hours had been spent by the Byrd party in trying to get their plane started. One trouble was a frozen magneto. But the plane, with the engines warmed up, was soon ready to take to the air.

The success of BYRD'S expedition depends upon the airplanes. One he lost in a storm in King Edward VII Land last February, and it will be replaced when the supply ships come back from New Zealand. The preliminary flight to the mountains brought out qualities of initiative, energy, team-work and good nature in the crew that proved that it could be depended upon in any emergency. The full reports by radio to THE TIMES make thrilling reading, and show that the day of romantic adventure is not past.

ENGINEERING AND GRADE CROSSINGS.

Logic would seem to be on the side of Governor ROOSEVELT'S proposal that the engineering work connected with the removal of grade crossings be transferred from the Public Service Commission to the Department of Public Works. It would save the State about $60,000 a year in engineering fees and would permit the Public Service Commission to concentrate on its judicial function of passing upon the various claims for and against removing grade crossings.

It is the Governor's contention that there is at present duplication of effort. Certainly there is duplication of workers. The Department of Public Works maintains an engineering staff. The Public Service Commission does likewise. The Governor's plan would eliminate the necessity for the latter. In anticipation of the obvious criticism that engineering opinion is necessary for the commission, Mr. ROOSEVELT points out that often the courts are required to pass on such questions, and manage to do so without maintaining a staff of engineers. Certainly in most cases the main points are general—i. e., concern the danger to the public of permitting the grade crossings to remain.

There has been a tendency at times to blame the Public Service Commission for the slowness with which the work of abolishing grade crossings has proceeded. This is hardly fair. The commission had the double task to which the Governor referred, and has until recently been hampered by local politics. The original bond issue of $300,000,000 for the purpose of getting rid of grade crossings provided that the railroad company was to bear half the cost, and the other half was to be divided between the State and the county or city. Owing to the difficulty of raising the local contributions, several important projects were delayed. The change in the law, made in 1927, seeks to make it easier for the State to provide for financing its share. But the delays are still many, and the actual difficulties of doing the work without blocking traffic have in some cases made the process slow as well as costly. It is evidently with the desire to speed up the work rather than in any way to reflect on the Public Service Commission that the Governor's proposal has been put forward.

THE NEW LATIN QUARTER.

Perhaps no section of any city, changing its character and habits under the pressure of time, has aroused so much literary lament as that caused by the remolding of the Latin Quarter of Paris. In an article in the October number of Lectures pour Tous, ANDRE LAPHIN adds his voice to the chorus. The old Quartier Latin is no more. In its place has come the great and still growing Cité Universitaire. Of course, the Musée de Cluny and the Tower of Saint-Germain-des-Prés are still there, but the old spirit is gone. No more vagabonds in broad-brimmed, romantic hats, no more soft, flowing ties, no student berets, no vogue of long, waving hair. Of the famous cafés, only the names remain—the Cluny, the Source, the Soufflet, the Deux-Magots. Now they are cafés de grand luxe, where their former patrons would be ill at ease. The Vachette is replaced by a bank. The Vieux-Colombier Theatre made famous by COPEAU is today a cinema palace.

To offset the loss of so much glamour, M. LAPHIN outlines the enormous growth of the University City. The vast increase in the number of schools, the infinite diversity of courses offered, the building of dormitories for students, the founding of cheap but pleasant tea rooms and restaurants, the information bureaus, the employment agencies for students, the influx of foreign students with their national foundations, the greatly increased number of women students—all these have come along with the gradual metamorphosis of the old Latin Quarter. "At present, no city in the world "can compare with Paris as an "educational centre."

In 1900 there were 11,000 students, of whom 1,200 were foreigners. In 1927, the latest date for which statistics have been compiled, there were inscribed in the five Faculties of Paris 26,108 students—18,893 French and 7,215 foreigners. At that time 28 per cent of the student population was foreign-born. In 1921 there were only two German students, but by 1928 their number had increased to 502. This flood from other nations is attributed not only to the changed character of the Latin Quarter, but to "the development of means of communication, "the success of our arms, the rôle "that our country has played in "world politics." With pride M. LAPHIN notes this tribute. But he sees also a grave danger to the well-being of native students in this educational invasion. Foreign students and foreign countries appear to be wealthier than France and her students. There is danger that the young intellectuals of France will be choked out, disregarded in their own country. With money and leisure at their disposal, it is the foreigners within her gates who launch the literary and artistic styles in Paris.

A happier view was taken by a writer in La Nouvelle Europe recently. He saw the mingling of many nationalities in the Cité Universitaire not as a menace to French intellectual growth, but as a fortunate means of encouraging the youth of different nations to know and understand and like each other—in short, as one of the most powerful and happy means of international good-will and peace.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Dangers From Low Fliers. Although the reports indicate that the pilot who lost his life when his plane crashed into a house in Sixty-fourth Street was doing his best to reach open ground in the park, the accident is a reminder that there is as yet inadequate protection to those below from the carelessness or misfortune of aviators.

During the last Summer complaints were made about low flying and "stunt" flying over crowded areas near the flying fields. One young woman was penalized for flying low over the East River. The accident which occurred on Wednesday is the very thing which those who have protested against careless flying feared—that if anything goes wrong when the plane is too low there is no possibility of avoiding an accident which, as in the case of the plane forced down at one of the beaches last Summer, may endanger the lives of dozens of persons.

Commissioner WHALEN has announced that stringent restrictions will be enforced. But the most effective control is at the flying fields, and consists not only of thorough inspection before every flight, but of special warnings to all pilots to avoid low flying and all "stunts" over crowded areas, whether these be beaches, towns or cities.

Those who go up in planes accept the risks of accidents. But there is no justification for their exposing others to injury or death. Had the unfortunate aviator landed in the street on Wednesday he surely would have killed others besides himself.

A Penny for Your Weight. American fads cannot progress far without being overtaken by American business ingenuity. The interest we take in our health has led to the curious habit of weighing whenever opportunity offers. Some doctors say that our health would be better if we did not watch it so closely, but whether that is true or not, we do watch it, and the penny scale is one device for checking up on it.

Scale distributers have been going over their accounts and find that weighing is on the increase. As more pounds are taken off, more people mount the trembling platform and anxiously watch the indicator swing around. In New York so many people weigh that the scale manufacturers can afford to bet with them on their guess about weight. If you guess right you get your penny back.

In Oklahoma City there are only ninety penny scales. The citizens pay $27,000 a year to see if they have gained or lost. That is a lot of pennies, but the average is only $25 a month per scale. That sum is not a bad return on a very moderate investment.

Los Angeles, with less than ten times as many people, has almost 100 times as many scales. It is only to be expected that they would pay well, as the eighteen-day diet and the movie ambitions of half the population make weighing a necessity. Besides, the California weather is a help to the business, as overcoats, which discourage prospective weighers, do not have to be shed to get an accurate answer to the penny.

A "New Low" in Autographs. If several thousand acres of diamonds were suddenly found and thrown on the market their value would suffer great depreciation. Will the news from Washington similarly affect the HOOVER autographed scribbling scraps? The President has let it be known that he has been giving away these drawings all his life and autographing them when anybody asked him. Many children own at least one apiece; associates everywhere from the Antipodes to Alaska possess them.

Ever since he can remember, the President has had the habit—which many others share with him—of drawing idle designs on a piece of paper while listening to some one else talking. There is discussion of a "bear" market in these designs, and some people who were examining closely the sample recently printed, searching it for symbols of the President's subconscious, are disappointed.

Yet may not the very plethora be the making of the market? Isn't it possible that henceforth no enthusiastic Hoover home will be without one of these ikons, handsomely framed? People can use their own judgment what title to give each design. The one recently published seemed to be an impression of Senate procedure. While the existence of many will perhaps reduce the price of any single one, possessors of five—such as each of the ATKESON children—should be able to buy considerable supplies of candy with the proceeds of sale.

Benefits of Breaking Training. The dangers of a too methodical upbringing for children were pointed out at a recent meeting of the National Council for Mental Hygiene in London. Dr. HELEN BOSS declared that a never varying régime of clock-like regularity is not the ideal one for modern children. She considers that it does a healthy child no harm to have a large and sticky feast of cream buns once in a while and make himself sick. In fact, such a juvenile orgy has its benefits. From it the youngster learns the meaning of satiety, and gains a knowledge of the workings of his own body far more practical than anything which could be taught him from a book.

The child who always has his spinach and carrots at the right moment, who goes to bed in a quiet, darkened room at the same time every night and takes the correct exercises at the correct time, is apt to become too dependent on routine. He may grow into the sort of man who is miserable if dinner is five minutes late, and who suffers from insomnia if he is disturbed by the rattle of a window, a crying baby or a barking dog.

It is certain that children at least will be delighted with Dr. BOSS'S suggestion. Mothers who have followed the baby's schedule with religious fidelity should welcome justification for an occasional lapse. If the theory could only be carried a little further and all children be gradually trained to sleep through violent radio concerts, the city's anti-noise campaign could quietly end with the coming of age of a noise-proof generation.

A Retort to Dr. Johnson.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Topics of the Times you give Dr. Johnson's definition of oats. He defined oats as the food of men in Scotland and of horses in England. He was countered by a Scotchman who said, "And where will you find better men and horses?"

DEMOS DETHRONED.

One Sees in Senate Mix-Up a Failure of Democratic Government.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The current Senatorial imbroglio marks the failure of democratic government in the United States. Demos no longer rules. A political clique has usurped control. A majority of the people have chosen as their representatives in Congress members of the Republican party, elected upon a definite platform. One of the major planks in that platform was and has always been a high protective tariff. The insurgents, in setting at naught the efforts of the majority party, have contravened the will of the people. Democracy, in this particular aspect, no longer exists.

It may be contended that men are sent to Congress, not platforms. That Congressmen have a right to revise their opinions subsequent to their election. If this be true, then democracy has never been more than a hollow mockery. What boots it the right to vote if the right to shape the policies of government does not exist? In England, had a coalition of opposing parties destroyed the efforts of the Labor group, the issue would have immediately been referred to the people, and the future policy of the government regulated by the result thereof. Chronological elections, neat and orderly though they be, can never serve effectively as mechanisms for the expression of the will of the people.

Several years ago the late Senator La Follette decried the "assumption that because our form of government was democratic it was automatically producing democratic results." The present contretemps in the Senate is a case remarkably well in point. There is no doubt that the English system of government, with its capability for immediate recourse to the people, is, despite its monarchical label, the most democratic government in the world today.

LIGHTERAGE CHARGES.

New Jersey Railroads Must Absorb Cost of River Transfer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of THE TIMES appeared a news item entitled "Jersey Fights Free Lighterage."

In the first place, it may be well to say that there is no such thing as "free" lighterage in New York Harbor. The rail carriers publish rates that include the cost of lighterage, also rates that apply to their terminals only. Rates between New York and Chicago as well as other Western points include lighterage, competition rendering this necessary.

As is known, the New York Central has a direct rail connection with Manhattan Island, which enables that road to make deliveries from the Harlem River to St. John's Park at New York rates.

To meet this competition railroads terminating in Jersey City or Hoboken have of necessity to absorb the cost of getting freight across the Hudson River. If these roads undertook to add to their terminal rates, which are the same as those published to and from New York, the cost of river transfer, the excess over rates of the New York Central would be so great as to divert to that road practically every pound of competitive freight handled in both directions. This would mean a serious loss to New Jersey, and it is difficult to believe that any one having the interests of that State at heart could foster such an illogical and undesirable plan with a view to putting it into effect.

Tea Dressed Up.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter from H. Glynn-Ward strikes a responsive chord. However, I do not feel that our visitor's objection is to the clothing in which New York's tea generally appears, but to the fact that the tailor in some instances has gone in for form-fitting material.

It must be agreed that when tea is packed by a machine which eliminates the possibility of manual handling, a forward step has been taken in the direction of securing a sanitary product, and if the cloth be sufficiently porous and the tea therein packed loosely, it should be possible to secure a tea of the strength desired by the strongest male and one adapted to the milder taste of the gentler sex.

The tea tag, which our visitor described as coyly peeping over the side, makes an excellent handle so that the consumer may withdraw the bag when the color of the beverage indicates that the desired strength has been attained.

An Unnecessary Noise.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why should the knife-grinder have the special privilege of annoying the New York public with his constant bell-ringing and shouting, waking one up in the morning and disturbing one trying to work? If I want a knife or a pair of scissors sharpened, I can take them to a store and have this done. Cannot something be done to stop this nuisance?

FEAR OF THE "FAITHFUL."

I called to the shipwrecked of faith:
Who will beat through the ponderous
backwash ebb of the sea
And, bucking despair, struggle violently upright to land, Breaking vertiginous ways through sharp crags, and with me
Stomach a turbulent potion of sea-brine and sand?

But they droned:
Better float, prone on the undulant
billows of faith—
Lulled by illusion—rest far from the horrid roar
Of bickering surf, than follow that blasphemous wraith
You call Truth to the perilous heights of an alien shore.

THE CASE OF THE DOG.

Opinions Vary on the Proposed Abandonment of the Muzzle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES editorial "Dogs in the City" is the best presentation I have seen of "A Bill of Rights for the City Dog" that is fair to the city, the dog and dog owner. The barbarous law compelling a dog to be muzzled as well as leashed while on the streets of the city is a reproach to mankind and an injustice to a harmless and docile animal. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should be commended for asking that the law be amended to do away with the muzzle, but to compel all dogs to be leashed so the city can be protected from the dogs and the dogs protected from careless auto drivers.

Senator VEST, a great lover of dogs, has stated that dogs can be taught several intelligent actions and are susceptible to moral influence. Dogs have feelings and passions similar to our own. Our oppressive conduct toward them usually puts their resentful emotions into action. So unmuzzle the dog and let him come into his own.

The great moralist CHARRON says: "The man is wise who considers them and who will make them his lesson and his benefit. They are of the same family as ourselves, and it is base to use cruelty to them."

Distemper Is Curable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From the standpoint of one who has handled many stray dogs may I say that I think THE TIMES editorial of Nov. 18 gives an incorrect impression of distemper? While it cannot be denied that this is a wasting disease, and, in extreme cases, the convalescence covers several weeks, it can be cured and is not necessarily fatal. I have nursed several dogs back to health from this disease, some of them all but dead when they came to me, and in no case were there any after-effects, one dog living thereafter for sixteen years. Nor, though handling them entirely alone, have I ever suffered any infection, though the disease is contagious among the dogs themselves.

Appreciation of Editorial.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to express my appreciation of THE TIMES editorial "Dogs in the City." The dog question is a very serious one which I hope the press in general will handle in as sane a way as THE TIMES has done.

Those familiar with the splendid work of the S. P. C. A. will take its statements and recommendations without question.

Would Retain Muzzles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The arguments put forth by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals for the abolition of the ordinance requiring muzzling of dogs in New York City require serious attention and resistance.

The reasons which prompted the enactment of this ordinance still exist. Muzzling has little or no effect upon the prevalence of rabies among dogs, the society contends, but it does not deny that muzzling has prevented a greater number of persons from being bitten. It was amazing to read that in New York City alone, in 1928, 6,000 persons were bitten by dogs. One can readily visualize the situation and the greater number of persons that would have been bitten if dogs had been allowed to go unmuzzled. I am as great a friend of the dog as any man, but under the conditions of congestion and overcrowding in this city I see great need for limitation of the dog's freedom.

It is a matter of common knowledge that even the ordinance requiring the muzzling of dogs is not adequately enforced. The 6,000 cases demonstrate this. If the ordinance is repealed and the one suggested by the society substituted, the number of persons bitten by dogs will increase. The suggested ordinance requiring all dogs be kept on leash is absurd if the dog is not muzzled. The ordinance would never be enforced and the real purpose of the present muzzling ordinance would be defeated.

Free Clinics for Animals.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Humane Society of New York recently sent out announcements of its intention to conduct a free clinic for animals on Saturday afternoons. It says: "This will be the first clinic established in New York which will treat sick animals belonging to the poor gratis and administer medicine free of charge."

In 1909 the New York Women's League for Animals, Inc., established a free daily clinic at 325 Lafayette Street, with Dr. Edwin R. Blamey in charge. The printed reports of Mrs. James Speyer, the league's president, show that in its first four years this clinic treated 28,600 dogs, cats, horses and other animals without charge.

In 1912-13 the league built at 350 Lafayette Street the hospital now known as the Ellin Prince Speyer Hospital for Animals, and the free service was continued there. At the present time over one-fourth of its cases are free ones, and this means not only clinic treatment and medicine, but in many instances admission to the wards. Waifs received in the Homeless Animals Department have whatever medical care they need.

The clinic is open every day except Sundays and holidays, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., and the hospital is never closed, day or night, to any animal that needs help.

THE LAW'S TROUBLES.

Lawyers Are Much Concerned With the Slowness of Justice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with great interest the report of Governor ROOSEVELT'S speech on changes in law which are required. He says: "It is the lawmen and not the legal profession who are bitterly complaining of the costliness and slowness of justice."

The Governor may be interested to know that it is not the laymen who complain so much as it is the lawyers. We professional men have known for years what was the matter, but we could not get the public interested. I have been trying for fifteen years by means of articles published in various magazines to get up enough public interest to modify the law and bring it abreast of the time.

The lawyer knows better than the layman how much waste and extravagance and stupidity there is in the procedure. And the lawyer knows how much money he loses and how much time in the process of trying to obtain what is called justice. The lawyer, therefore, recognizes the importance of a change in the law to make the obtaining of justice easy and speedy.

May I suggest that one of the most important and fundamental reforms that ought to be introduced in any rational system of justice is the abolition of our present idiotic rules of evidence? Days are wasted in wrangling between lawyers on points of evidence, and a great deal of legitimate and illuminating matter is excluded because of our medieval system.

GOOD FOR MANUFACTURERS

Minimum Stock Policy a Help In Maintaining Retail Buying.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recent crash in stock quotations should have a very different effect upon general business from that caused by the financial panics of the past.

In former periods of security of business inflation most distributers, such as the department stores, found themselves with heavy stocks of merchandise which they decided to reduce to a minimum before making further commitments. The result was a very bad effect on the primary markets of production, and caused short-time manufacturing schedules or sometimes entire shut-downs.

During the past few years the policy of working on minimum or modest stocks, with frequent fill-ins, has become almost universal. Manufacturers chafed under this change on the part of buyers, but yielded to it, and now they find it a blessing. The retail distributers have no large inventories to reduce before making further purchases, and must replenish their stocks more or less as they have been doing in the recent past.

Therefore, the manufacturers will either not experience at all, or will feel only to a slight degree, the set-back between purchases which they felt in past experiences where conditions like the present ones prevailed.

This is not merely theory, but such change is already noted by some manufacturers. They did not recognize the change as the insurance against sudden gaps in purchasing which it has turned out to be.

The Stable Rate Base.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I trouble you further with just a word on the "Stable Rate Base" proposed before the New York Commission on the Revision of the Public Service Commission Law?

In your issue of Nov. 18 M. Maldwin Fertig proposes actual cost and investment. I assume, both from his letter and from my personal acquaintance with his views, that he does favor a stable rate base which does not fluctuate with prices and costs of construction. If, as a lawyer, Mr. Fertig will give it as his legal opinion that the initial valuation of existing properties can be based upon actual investment without defeat before the courts, I shall certainly agree with him that that would be the "simplest, most inexpensive and most logical method" of procedure.

The problem is to fix an initial valuation upon existing properties which will be fair to both the public and the companies and which will stand the test before the courts as not confiscatory and not invading the inherent rights of investors.

Can actual investment be taken for that purpose? Would it stand before the courts?

A World Peace Day.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is extraordinary the extent to which some of us are utterly oblivious of the existence of the Germans. It is a good idea—that of your correspondent Mr. Arms—that we should have a common Peace Day which all of the world could celebrate, but it is rather absurd to propose that Armistice Day should be that day. Armistice Day is for the Germans a day of humiliation and grief, and they are far from wishing to perpetuate the memory of it. How can one be so inconsiderate?

A Correction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There appears in your paper of today an article touching certain insurance frauds in which I am referred to as the attorney for the insurance companies interested. This statement is incorrect. Of the companies involved, the Security Mutual Life Insurance Company is the only one that I represent.

The statement attributed to me that the insurance companies lost between $60,000 and $100,000 is inaccurate. I did not make such statement. As far as I know, the insurance companies did not suffer such loss owing to the fact that the fraud was discovered before the damage was done.

GOOD'S BODY RESTS IN HIS HOME CITY

Old Friends and Associates of Late Secretary Meet Train at Cedar Rapids.

MILITARY FUNERAL TODAY

President Gage of Coe College Will Deliver the Oration in the First Presbyterian Church.

Special to The New York Times.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Nov. 21.—The body of James W. Good, this city's most distinguished son, rests tonight in a flag-draped casket in the home of his father-in-law, O. J. Deacon.

Tomorrow at 11 o'clock, in the First Presbyterian Church, his home town will pay him a final tribute, and an hour later in Oak Hill Cemetery, taps will be sounded over the grave of a man who came here a poor country boy in the early nineties to obtain an education, and rose to be head of the War Department.

Secretary Good's body arrived here from Washington on a special train at 2:45 P. M. today, with high government officials and members of Congress acting as an honorary escort. As the train drew into the station, 100 soldiers from the Fourteenth Cavalry at Fort Des Moines stood at attention until the body was carried to a caisson. While the military band played "Lead, Kindly Light," the procession, flanked by a squad of motorcycle police and with muffled drums beating, moved up First Avenue to the Deacon home.

The funeral party was met at the train by Amer Sergent and H. E. Shangler, former law partners of Mr. Good, and by Mayor J. F. Rall and other leading citizens.

Final details of the funeral were waiting tonight on a consultation with Mrs. Good, she went directly to her father's home, not accompanying the body.

College President in Charge.

Dr. Harry M. Gage, president of Coe College, will be in charge of the funeral and will deliver the oration. Rev. Dr. Robert Little, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Good was a member, will preach the sermon.

During the funeral march tomorrow, nineteen guns will be fired at one-minute intervals when the cortege leaves the church, and another salute will be fired at the cemetery just before the sounding of taps. Whenever the troops present arms during the military service, four ruffles and flourishes will be sounded by the band, as provided for the rank of Secretary of War.

Those who accompanied the body from Washington were Colonel Campbell H. Hodges, personal representative of President Hoover; Secretary of the Navy Adams; Patrick J. Hurley, Acting Secretary of War; F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War; Major Gen. Summerall, Chief of Staff; Colonel John B. Shuman, Major Beach of the Medical Corps, Dr. James and Captain Forster, former aide to Secretary Good.

In the Congressional group were Senators Steck and Brookhart of Iowa, Senator Deneen of Illinois, and Senator McKellar of Tennessee. The Representatives included Cyrenus Cole of this city, who succeeded Mr. Good in Congress, Clark R. Chindblom of Illinois, Frank H. Foss of Massachusetts, and Lamar Jeffers of Alabama. Several personal friends accompanied Mrs. Good.

Governor Hammill and members of the Iowa Executive Council will arrive tomorrow for the funeral. Politicians and friends from Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska are here for the services.

There was a profusion of flowers accompanying the body from Washington, two trucks being necessary to take them to the church. Crowds stood with bared heads at every station from Clinton, where the train crossed the Mississippi River into Iowa. Every flag in this city is half staffed tonight, and tomorrow all schools will be closed and all business shut down during the funeral hour.

White House Flag at Half-Staff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Establishing a precedent, President Hoover today ordered the White House flag flown at half-staff until after the funeral tomorrow of Secretary Good. It was the first time the White House flag had been lowered to half-staff for any other than a President, as in the case of President Harding; a member of the President's family, as in the case of Calvin Coolidge Jr., or a former President, as in the case of Woodrow Wilson.

The President previously had ordered flags on all government buildings and on naval vessels to be half-staffed until after the funeral. His action today was taken as still another indication of the deep regard he had for the late Secretary of War.

DELAYS PICKING SUCCESSOR

Hoover Will Not Fill Good's Place for Some Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—President Hoover is likely to take his time in the selection of a successor to the late James W. Good as Secretary of War, it was indicated at the White House today.

None of the crop of candidacies which have sprung up for the post since the death of Mr. Good have been urged at the White House, as far as it could be learned today, and it was certain that none of them would be considered for some time.

It is understood that Acting Secretary Hurley is likely to retain that post for some time, and it is not at all unlikely that he may eventually by the President's choice for the Cabinet post.

Rumors that former Senator Wadsworth of New York was under consideration were discounted at the White House, and it was understood that he would not be considered.

FLAGPOLE FOR FT. SUMTER.

War Department Approves the Memorial to Confederate Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Permission was granted by the War Department today to the executors of the estate of Elias Mackintosh Chisch Anderson Lawton to erect a flagpole at Fort Sumter, S. C., and to emplace a tablet donated by the Charleston Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, commemorating the Confederate defense of the fort.

The flagpole was provided for in the will of Mrs. Lawton to be erected to the memory of her father, General Robert Anderson, the defender of Fort Sumter. The design of the flagpole and tablet has been approved by the Commission of Fine Arts.

Man Kills Shark in Battle Off Cuba, but Will Lose Arm

Special Cable to The New York Times.

HAVANA, Nov. 21.—A Japanese fisherman of Cienfuegos, Cuba, was the victor after a spectacular struggle with a man-eating shark off the coast near his home today.

Gamataro Yugoago was returning in a small boat from fishing grounds when an enormous shark attacked the craft. Yugoago tried to beat off the monster with an oar but the man-eater returned to the attack time and again until the frail craft was in danger of upsetting. Seizing a fish knife the Japanese jumped overboard to join the issue as man-eater to man.

The shark sank its teeth into the man's arm, but Yugoago succeeded in knifing the monster in the stomach until he killed it. But physicians say it will be necessary to amputate the victor's arm.

MANY NEW YORKERS VISIT MALDEN GRAVE

Storm Fails to Deter Pilgrims to 'Shrine' as More Cures Are Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

MALDEN, Mass., Nov. 21.—The first snowstorm of the season, accompanied by a wind that whistled through the trees in Holy Cross Cemetery here today, failed to halt supplicants at the grave of the Rev. Patrick J. Power, which has become a shrine for thousands because of reputed miraculous cures effected there. Many from New York City and vicinity were among the pilgrims during the day.

An incident that astonished persons in the cemetery occurred when Lena Thomes, 46, of Taunton, proceeded barefooted from the cemetery gates to the grave. Many saw the woman take off her shoes and stockings when she arrived at the cemetery. She said it was her third visit to the grave, that she had suffered from rheumatism in both legs and that she was cured after a visit last week. Her appearance today was to give thanks for her recovery.

Mrs. Mary Lapinsky of Long Island City reported as deaf and dumb since birth, was escorted to the grave and cemetery by several friends. No result was announced.

A reported recovery was that of Joseph F. Dantos, 36, of 947 Sixth Avenue, Astoria, L. I. Taken to the grave in a wheel chair and then back to the cemetery gate, he is said suddenly to have arisen from the chair and walked unassisted to the automobile in which he had come here. It was stated that for the past three years his right arm and leg had been paralyzed.

Max Bizer of Paterson, N. J., brought his wife to the shrine. She has been paralyzed for eight years. Early in the day three Chinese from Dover, N. H., appeared at the shrine, carrying a crippled Chinese boy, and were accompanied by a group of Chinese from Boston.

Faith that his paralysis will be cured was expressed by Frank Vignois of 423 East Twentieth Street, New York, after he had visited the grave. He said he would make daily visits for five days in the hope of a complete cure.

Samuel Cohen of Chicago was arrested by Malden police after his hard-luck story had netted him more than $100 from pilgrims at the grave. Cohen had limped into the cemetery, but after the police had removed several yards of bandages they found his legs sound and held him for vagrancy.

FARE INCREASES ASKED FOR JERSEY TRAFFIC

Transport Seeks 10 Cents Cash From Casual Riders, but Would Sell 20 Tokens for $1.

A plan to preserve the existing five-cent trolley and bus fare for regular riders in New Jersey but to increase the fare to 10 cents for casual riders was proposed yesterday in the new rate schedule filed by the Public Service Coordinated Transport with the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners. This company is the operating subsidiary of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, and serves 233 municipalities of the State.

Its schedule came in the form of a request to put into effect, for an experimental period, a rate of fare which provides for the sale of 20 tokens for $1, thus preserving the present five-cent rate for regular riders and a charge of 10 cents for the casual rider who prefers to pay cash fare, the rate to apply in zones where a five-cent fare now is charged.

Thomas N. McCarter, president, in his letter to the board says: "For the past six years this company has been endeavoring to solve the local transportation problems of the State under the existing five-cent fare, which was adopted as an experiment at the suggestion of your board. This rate has so many desirable features that the company has been carrying on with it in the hope that through economies in operation and with the cooperation of the public and the board the rate would produce sufficient revenue to meet the costs of operation and enable the company to function adequately.

"Since the inauguration of the five-cent fare the company's operating revenues have failed to meet operating expenses and fixed charges by about $6,000,000, with no return upon nearly $48,000,000 invested in the property represented by stock of the company. This situation, and the necessity of establishing the credit of the company, so that it can attract the necessary additional capital with which to furnish the public adequate and proper service, require some change in the rate of fare."

The company requests that the new fare schedules be put into effect on Jan. 1 without hearings. At the present time, the petition states, the company operates 1,800 buses over 1,226 miles of routes and 1,579 trolley cars over 800 miles of tracks.

Art Furniture Sale Brings $11,771.

The three days' sale of French and Italian renaissance furniture, tapestries, brocades, primitives, and other art objects began yesterday at the Plaza Art Galleries, Inc. The session netted $11,771. A carved stone figure of a goddess with dog at guard brought $600 from J. C. Bullard, who also paid $650 for a companion stone figure.

DR. V. C. VAUGHAN, EDUCATOR, IS DEAD

Scientist, 78, Was Former Dean of University of Michigan Medical School.

HE SERVED IN TWO WARS

He Took Part in Santiago Campaign as Division Surgeon and Received D. S. M. in 1917.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Victor Clarence Vaughan, scientist and former dean of the University of Michigan Medical School, died unexpectedly here tonight of heart disease.

Dr. Vaughan was born at Mount Airy, Randolph County, Mo., seventy-eight years ago. He received his medical degree from the University of Michigan in 1875. Directly after his graduation from the medical school he began his association with the faculty of the university which continued for forty-six years, except for the interruptions occasioned by his service in two wars.

For eight years Dr. Vaughan was an assistant in the chemical laboratory. He did not attain a full professorship until 1883, when he became Professor of Physiological and Pathological Chemistry. His work was altered four years later when he assumed the chair of hygiene and physiological chemistry and also became a director of the Hygienic Laboratory. He occupied these positions for eighteen years, 1887-1909. He was dean of the medical school for thirty years, 1891 to 1921.

Dr. Vaughan served in the Santiago campaign of 1898 as a surgeon with the rank of Major, advancing to Division Surgeon before the end of the war. In the World War he was a Colonel in the Medical Corps, having charge of communicable diseases. He was chairman of the division of medical sciences of the National Research Council and was a member of the Typhoid Commission. He received the Distinguished Service Medal.

Dr. Vaughan had been president of the Association of American Physicians and of the American Medical Association. He was a Knight of the Legion of Honor. In a paper presented before the American Chemical Society at Richmond, Va., in April, 1927, he advanced the view that the essence of life is in protein, that all organisms rise from it.

Crain Says 10 Commandments Have Not Yet Been Repealed

"The Ten Commandments are unrepealed and are binding on all those who live on Park Avenue or Fifth Avenue, on Forsyth Street or the Bowery," District Attorney-elect Thomas C. T. Crain said yesterday at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor in celebration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's National Sabbath Alliance.

Mr. Crain urged a "wholehearted observance of God's day" and said that he hoped the time would soon come when laborers would have some other day beside Sunday to devote to "secular pleasure." One hundred and forty-four women attended the luncheon and the business meeting which preceded it. The Rev. H. L. Bowlby, executive secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, was another speaker.

REV. J. H. O'ROURKE, MISSIONER, DEAD

FORMER HEAD OF COLLEGE

F. P. Garvans Recently Gave $200,000 to Woodstock for Library in Admiration for Priest.

The Rev. John H. O'Rourke, widely known Jesuit preacher, retreat master and missioner, died yesterday of cancer in St. Vincent's Hospital, where he had been a patient for more than a year. His illness began several years ago. As early as the Spring of 1918 he had to cancel his preaching engagements and spend several weeks at the hospital. He was 73 years old. The funeral mass will take place in the Church of St. Francis Xavier, West Sixteenth Street, at 9:30 A. M. tomorrow.

Father O'Rourke was born in Newark, N. J., on Sept. 14, 1856. After several years at St. John's College, Fordham, he entered the Society of Jesus at Sault-au-Recollet, near Montreal, Canada, when he was not quite 18 years old. On the completion of a long course of study in theology at Woodstock, Md., he was ordained a priest in August, 1888. The next Summer he was appointed to assist the master of novices at Frederick, Md., and a year later succeeded the master. During his tenure of this position for fourteen years the novitiate was transferred to St. Andrew-on-Hudson, between Hyde Park and Poughkeepsie.

After a period of service with the band of preachers who give missions to the people and conduct retreats for the clergy and nuns, usually within the limits of the Jesuit province to which they belong, Father O'Rourke began his important association with the League of the Sacred Heart, making his headquarters in Kohlmann Hall, 301 West 181st Street. As national director of the league he raised the circulation of The Messenger, its official organ, from 27,000 to nearly 400,000.

While at Kohlmann Hall Father O'Rourke began his career as an occasional preacher and conductor of the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius for all classes of people throughout the United States. His work with the league was interrupted for three years while he served as rector of Brooklyn College. He then returned to Kohlmann Hall.

Last February a fund of $200,000 was presented to Woodstock College by Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan to provide a new library building. The gift was made as an expression of the admiration of the donors for Father O'Rourke.

EX-JUDGE STEELE DIES IN 88TH YEAR

Senior Member of New York Life's Board of Directors Since 1892.

ONCE PROSECUTOR IN KINGS

Captain in Union Army at Age of 19—Served as Attorney General of Louisiana After War.

Ex-Judge Hiram R. Steele, former soldier and since 1892 senior member of the New York Life Insurance Company's board of directors, died yesterday morning at his home, 33 Monroe Place, Brooklyn, of diabetes and heart disease, in his eighty-eighth year. Funeral services will be held at the house tomorrow at 11 A. M. Burial, which will be private, will take place in Plainfield, N. J.

Judge Steele, who served for a time as District Attorney of Kings County by appointment of Governor Theodore Roosevelt, came of old Vermont ancestry, and was born at Stanstead, Canada, near the Vermont line. He taught school for a while and later studied law in the office of his brother, Judge Benjamin H. Steele of the Supreme Court of Vermont. When the Civil War began he enlisted in the Tenth Vermont Volunteers, becoming a Captain at the age of 19. He served in the Army of the Potomac until he was wounded at the battle of Spotsylvania Court House, whereupon he was appointed a commissary by President Lincoln and ordered to New Orleans. At the close of the war he was chief commissary of the Southern District of Mississippi, and was breveted Major for faithful service.

He remained in the South for several years, at first engaging in cotton planting. In 1868 he began the practice of law at St. Joseph, La. Subsequently he held the offices of District Attorney, Assistant Attorney General, Judge of the Parish Court and Judge of the Superior Court at New Orleans and filled an unexpired term as Attorney General of Louisiana.

Judge Steele came to New York in 1880, and resumed his practice as senior partner in the firm of Steele, De Friese & Dickson, now Steele, De Friese & Steele, at 32 Liberty Street, Manhattan. He became prominent in Republican politics in Brooklyn, and in 1898 Governor Roosevelt appointed him District Attorney of Kings County. In the next year he was defeated for re-election in a close contest.

He was a director of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, as well as of the New York Life Insurance Company, and was a trustee and the counsel for the South Brooklyn Savings Institution. He was a member of the New York Commandery, Order of the Loyal Legion; the New England Society of Brooklyn, the Vermont Society of New York, the Republican Club and the Hamilton Club. Three sons, Porter, Roswell H. and Charles M. Steele, survive.

AMERICAN HEBREW PLANS HONOR MEDAL

Person Who Does Most to Bring Understanding Between Jews and Christians to Get Award.

HOOVER SENDS MESSAGE

Five of Original Nine Who Founded Publication Fifty Years Ago Are Guests at Dinner.

Dr. Isaac Landman, editor of The American Hebrew, a leading Jewish publication, announced at a dinner at the Plaza last night on the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation that a medal is to be awarded annually to the man or woman who achieves the most in bringing about a better understanding between Christians and Jews in America.

Five of the six living members of the original group of nine who founded The American Hebrew in 1879 were the guests of honor at the dinner, which was attended by many persons prominent in various fields of endeavor.

Telegrams of congratulation were received from President Hoover, Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, Sir Herbert Samuel, former British High Commissioner in Palestine; Wilhelm Miklas, President of the Republic of Austria; Tytus Filipowics, Polish Minister to the United States, Dr. I. Levi, Grand Rabbi of France; Adolph S. Ochs, Mayor James J. Walker, Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Julius Rosenwald.

John Dewey Among Speakers.

The speakers included Professor John Dewey of Columbia University; Henry Morgenthau, former United States Ambassador to Turkey; Mr. Sulzberger; Mrs. Rebekah Kohut, president of the World Congress of Jewish Women; Dr. Landman; Paul Felix Warburg, who read a letter of congratulation from his father, Felix M. Warburg, and Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of the Central Synagogue. Bernard Edelhertz, who succeeded Mr. Sulzberger as publisher of The American Hebrew in 1916, was toastmaster.

In commending the activities of the publication, Professor Dewey said:

"Prejudice comes from an irrational part of our human make-up. That is the reason that it is so obdurate. I regard it as a great honor to have the privilege of paying a tribute to the pioneer group that for fifty years worked for the destruction of prejudice and for the promotion of understanding, not merely in the United States but throughout the world."

Sulzberger Tells of Its Work.

Mr. Sulzberger reviewed the career of the publication during the time he was publisher, from 1905 to 1916. He said that the editorial policy had been based on a desire to bring unity to Israel, citing a campaign to eliminate prejudice against the Polish Jew.

"Religion came battle-scarred from the late war, but the torch of Judaism is still burning," he said. "If the Jews in America now are of the same type that we knew in the early days of the American Hebrew, the ideals of Judaism will never suffer."

Mr. Morgenthau said that he had "always felt that we should not rest until the alternate description of the United States of America should be the United People of America."

The medal announced by Dr. Landman, which is to be known as "The American Hebrew Medal for achievement in better understanding between Christian and Jew in America," will be presented annually on Nov. 21, the birthday of the publication.

ELEVATED COMMITTEE CONTRADICTS HEDLEY

The Manhattan Elevated Stockholders' Protective Committee, in a statement issued yesterday by its chairman, Nathan L. Amster, took issue with Frank Hedley, president and general manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, as to the rights of the Manhattan stockholders to sue for rental payments. Citing a statement by Mr. Hedley to the effect that Manhattan Modified Guaranteed stockholders had no need for recourse to litigation to get their dividends, and that under a reorganization agreement of 1922 they had no standing to bring suit to obtain unpaid rental, the statement said:

"Since when, or under what law, has a property owner been barred from suing for rent? However, the extraordinary claim of Mr. Hedley that the Manhattan Modified Guaranteed stockholders have no right to sue for rental owed them by the Interborough rests, according to President Hedley, upon the reorganization and modification agreement in 1922. If such an agreement actually prohibited suit for the recovery of rent justly due it would be a most extraordinary document. However, this reorganization agreement of 1922 itself is the best evidence on this point, and Article X of that agreement says: 'Neither the committee nor any stockholders by executing this agreement, or by becoming parties thereto, release, surrender or waive any right or claim whatsoever.' This would seem to cover the point raised by Mr. Hedley in his attack on the Manhattan Stockholders' Protection Committee and the suit against the Interborough instituted by its chairman, Mr. Amster. Moreover, if the complaint of the stockholders in that suit is to be so easily disposed of, why has the Interborough not yet filed its answer, although the suit was begun and the complaint filed over four months ago?"

THOMAS SAYS MAYOR SHOULD ACT ON RENTS

Declares Tragic Effects of Voiding of Law in Some Districts Call for Relief From Albany.

Criticizing Mayor Walker for failure to mention housing and the emergency rent law in outlining a program of public improvements to the Merchants' Association, Norman Thomas said yesterday that "any Mayor who had the city's welfare at heart would ask the Governor to call a special legislative session, in view of the invalidation of the city emergency rent law by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court." He strongly suspected, he said, that the effect of the decision would be tragic in some districts, especially Harlem.

Mr. Thomas spoke to several hundred students at the College of the City of New York at a meeting of the Politics Club. About two hundred students were turned away because the lecture hall was already crowded.

Because its victory in the election was so complete, Mr. Thomas said, Tammany is not in a mood to give social service. He declared Mayor Walker seemed to regard his large majority as giving him a right to ignore the just interests of dress goods workers, subway construction workers and rent payers. If citizens expect to accomplish anything, he said, they should "not give a man a large majority, but one so small he will be grateful and afraid."

Civic organizations become "pathetically grateful" in the City Administration gives them "one decent thing." Mr. Thomas said, and the midtown Merchants' Association "licks Mayor Walker's boots" because he promised a midtown tunnel.

To offset the "cohesion of patronage, plunder and fear" which made a Tammany victory possible, Mr. Thomas offered the "cohesive power of a vision" supported by a party and a program and an attempt to make the average citizen realize that the City Government means, in his life "almost more than anything he can do himself."

66 FOUND GUILTY AS POULTRY TRUST

SENTENCES SET FOR DEC. 3

Maximum Is Year in Prison and $5,000 Fine—Judge Says All Will Be Punished.

TRIAL LASTED SIX WEEKS

Defendants Leave 'Bleachers' for Excited Arguments When Verdict Is Announced.

The government won a victory yesterday in its fight against the live poultry trust which operated in this city. Of ninety defendants, indicted on Jan. 17 on charges of conspiracy to violate the Sherman Anti-Trust law, sixty-six were convicted and two were acquitted. During the trial twenty-two were sifted out. The indictment against fifteen of these was dismissed, four were severed and three pleaded guilty. Sentences will be imposed Dec. 3.

Israel B. Oseas and Walter L. Rice, special assistants to the Attorney General, began an inquiry into the operation of the trust many months before the filing of an information which was succeeded by the indictment. It was charged that the defendants wrung from consumers several million dollars a year and that the trust levied a tribute of one cent a pound on the $70,000,000 worth of poultry sold annually in this city.

Fifteen Freed During Trial.

The fifteen who were discharged during the trial because of lack of incriminating evidence against them were Barney Azwolinsky, Al Berman, Morris Brown, John J. Conlin, Jacob Damsky, Hyman Frankfater, Abraham Franzel, Morris Frisman, Max Glantz, Mendel Gordon, Abraham Harrison, Goodman Levy, Charles Schonseitt, Harris Schonzeit and Joseph Weiner.

Those who pleaded guilty were Benjamin Simon, who is not the defendant of the same name who is supervisor of the Live Poultry Chamber of Commerce, which is also a defendant; William Simon and David Wernick.

The severance of four of the defendants became necessary because of illness or inability by the government to force their attendance. They are Philip Doc, Louis Cohen, A. Hornstein and Herman Matofsky.

The two who were acquitted were Joe Goldman and Emanuel Herbert, one of four brothers named in the bill. Herbert was one of only two who testified in their own defense.

The sixty-six convicted, including the three organizations indicted, are:

Says All Will Be Punished.

When the verdict was announced, the defendants, who have been perched on bleachers in the court room for about five hours every court day for nearly six weeks, left their seats and clustered about the tables facing the bench. Several were greatly excited and sought to argue the matter with each other and with the counsel. Much of the excitement was due to the fact that Judge Knox made it clear that he would punish each of the defendants and that there would be no suspended sentences.

To the end that exact justice may be meted out, he asked counsel for the defense to give him a brief account of each defendant, showing his financial status, how many were dependent upon him and such other information as would reflect his actual condition. The offense charged against the defendants is a misdemeanor. The maximum punishment is one year in prison and $5,000 fine.

What motions defense counsel decide to make will be deferred until Dec. 3, the day of sentence. It was suggested that the motions would be largely in the direction of seeking mercy for the convicted men.

One of those who was convicted, Julius Rosenstein, cleared the way for mercy for himself by naming his 2-weeks-old baby for Judge Knox, so this infant will be known as John Clarke Irwin Rosenberg. The honor was due largely to the kindness of the jurist in excusing Mr. Rosenberg from the trial long enough to see his new son.

Eight Ringleaders Named.

By far the greater number of those convicted are dealers in live poultry or employes of dealers. These were described by counsel as victims of economic pressure.

Eight men were accused by the government as the ringleaders in the conspiracy. They are Benjamin Simon, supervisor in charge of the Live Poultry Chamber of Commerce; Arthur Tootsie Herbert, a powerful influence in the Chauffeurs Union; Charles Herbert, delegate of the Slaughterers Union; Samuel Sahn, president of the Poultry Chamber of Commerce, and David Hirshon, Morris Gordon, Louis Spatz and Louis Weidberg, directors of the chamber. During the trial Mr. Oseas put into the record a little black book which, it was alleged, contained the amount of collections made by the defendants from market men and others. The book, it was charged, was the property of Weidberg.

The eight leaders were accused in the bill of particulars of having obstructed deliveries of poultry, twenty-eight were charged with exacting unlawful levies from market men and others, twenty-two with following and spying upon those engaged in the chicken industry and seventeen with having paid various sums to market men and others to induce them to discontinue business. Charges against the others were of a more general character.

There were particulars showing the basis for charges against "unknown defendants" of placing bombs containing explosives, incendiary matter and poisonous and suffocating gases in the places of business and in the vehicles of poultry dealers, butchers and market men. During the trial 3,000 pages of testimony were taken.

Tuttle Praises Verdict.

Counsel for the defendants were Isaac N. Jacobson, Arthur N. Sager, Samuel H. Kaufman, Joseph Shalleck, Alfred L. Becker, Julius Hallheimer and Abraham I. Menin.

United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle made the following comment upon the verdict:

"This very satisfactory result brings to book one of the biggest rackets in this town and terminates a conspiracy which had greatly increased artificially the prices of a staple article of food. The verdict will particularly tend to benefit those members of the public whose religious beliefs require the observance of certain dietetic laws. It will tend to restore to honest merchants power to maintain an independent business free from extortionate exactions, and it demonstrates the power of the law to reach and break up the so-called rackets which prey upon honest business and the public generally."

Roosevelt as Spanish Speaker Says He Is 'Mother of Four'

By The Associated Press.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico.—Governor Theodore Roosevelt admits that demands for impromptu speeches in Spanish have brought him unforeseen difficulties and even moments of embarrassment. His prepared speeches are translated for him and even then he reads them over several times before attempting to deliver them.

The mistakes he makes in his extempore speeches are frequently corrected afterward by reporters who accompany him on his trips through the island. He said that after a recent trip his reporter-instructors told him he had announced to a mountain town audiences that he was the mother of four children and had introduced the unmarried Brig. Gen. F. La J. Parker, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, not as a bachelor, but as a tapeworm.

CAYUGA INDIANS PLEAD FOR RETURN TO STATE

Chief and Party in Backskin Win Governor's Promise to See if They Can Come Back From Canada.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—A group of Cayuga Indians, clothed in buckskin and headed by their chief, Clinton Rickard, came here from their present home in Canada today and expressed to Governor Roosevelt the desire of the tribe to return to New York State, their original "hunting ground," and to spend the rest of their lives here.

Explaining that the tribe, now numbering about 1,500, had gone to Canada following the treaty of 1795 between the United States and the Five Nations, Chief Rickard said that at one time the State paid $2,300 annually to the Cayugas, whose headquarters were on the shores of Cayuga Lake, but that payments had long since ceased. They claimed much land in Central New York.

The chief told the Governor that reservation in Ontario. His colleagues agreed with him, nodding their heads.

"The Cayugas are willing to go anywhere in this State if a suitable place can be found for them," Chief Rickard said.

"I will be very glad to take the matter up, be fair and friendly," the Governor informed the Indians.

"That is all the Cayugas ask of the State—to be fair and friendly," Chief Rickard replied.

"We are proud that we have a county and a lake named after the Cayugas," the Governor said, and then he promised to refer the case to the Attorney General and to his personal counsel. After the conference he stated that if the treaty of 1795 provided that this tribe should be regarded perpetually as American Indians, there could be no bar to their return.

Some of the land claimed by the Cayugas includes thriving communities like Geneva, Ithaca, Waterloo and Seneca Falls. However, Chief Rickard assured the Governor that the tribe would be content to settle down on a reservation. The visitors received an autographed picture of the Governor just before their departure.

Mrs. Alice Dunne, widow of Desmond Dunne, Brooklyn Democratic political leader and former Commissioner of Public Works, left an estate appraised yesterday at $40,599 gross and $35,980 net. The estate included forty-four shares of stock of the Desmond Dunne Company, a holding corporation, out of the total of 1,926 shares, which were appraised at $16,085. Mrs. Dunne left fourteen shares of the stock to Fred Warmers, secretary of the company, and gave thirty shares to her daughter, Kathleen Dunne Dunning. The residuary estate, $19,894, was left to her daughter, Alice Dunne of 616 Park Avenue.

Mrs. Dunne had a fourth interest in the estate of her husband for life, which goes to her daughters and is not included in the appraisal. The assets of the estate included $19,336 commissions as executrix under her husband's will, and $5,177 in cash. The stock of the Desmond Dunne Company, now valued at $365 a share, was appraised at $170 a share in 1922 in the estate of Mr. Dunne.

Will Free Five Thanksgiving Day.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Five military prisoners will be released by the War Department on Thanksgiving Day in accordance with its practice of pardoning at that time a limited number whose conduct has been excellent and who have served material portions of their sentences. Three of the five to be freed are at Alcatraz, Cal., and two at Governors Island, N. Y.

HALTS STOCK SALES IN A BIBLE INSTITUTE

LINKED TO MINING GROUP

Dr. Ishkander, 'Master of Languages,' Plans to Circle Globe in Aid of Peace by Reincarnations.

Assistant State Attorney General Watson Washburn, in charge of the State Bureau of Securities, announced yesterday that Supreme Court Justice Edward Riegelmann of Brooklyn had signed an order restraining stock promotions by Dr. Yervant H. Ishkender, founder of the Citizens of the World, president of the Society of World Citizenship, head of the World Citizenship Bible Institute, described by himself as "master" of English, French, Latin, Greek, Armenian, Turkish, Persian and Arabian, and an ordained minister.

The order also notifies him to appear in Kings County Supreme Court next Wednesday for examination. The complaint, as made public by Mr. Washburn, who signed it, asserts that Dr. Ishkender, who is a Turk by birth and an American by naturalization, inserted in The Denver Mining Recorder and The Northern Miner, a Canadian publication, an advertisement reading:

"In our Bible institute there are always a number of people looking for profitable investment. Send particulars to the World Citizenship Bible Institute, New Dorp, N. Y."

Lives on Staten Island.

Dr. Ishkender lived formerly near New Dorp, where he had a postoffice box, but when he appeared Wednesday at the Attorney General's office for examination he gave his address as 31 Fort Hill Circle, St. George, S. I. The complaint was based largely on letters sent by the doctor to the Paragon-Hitchcock Mines, Ltd., of Collingwood, Ont. It asserted that a J. P. Welsh had been sent there representing the concern, and that Ishkender had persuaded him to form a corporation under the laws of Delaware on the theory that Americans would invest more readily in an American concern.

Mr. Washburn displayed a letter addressed some time later to Donald Mackay, head of the company, in which Dr. Ishkender urged that the company grant Mr. Welsh a larger expense account because his Bible students were "night birds" and it took money to keep up with them.

"You can't expect to raise $300,000 by giving the impression you are broke," said the letter. "If you will send him a few hundred dollars, I feel confident he will bring home the bacon."

According to Mr. Washburn, Ishkender told him that he expected a 10 per cent commission on any deal that went through, but that none had gone through.

Booklet Lists "Backers."

Further information on Dr. Ishkender is revealed in an imposing booklet. Opposite a full page picture of a large man with a small mustache appeared the caption "Who is Dr. Ishkender?" It is explained in the booklet that he is the son of the late H. H. Ishkender Effendi, "general manager of the Bosphorus Steamship Navigation Company, whose main shareholder was Sultan Abdul Hamid." He described his education, saying that he had "mastered" eight languages "after three years of study." The next page was devoted to a long list of "A Few Supporters and Sympathizers of Note." In the list were Woodrow Wilson, the Kings of Italy, Spain and Belgium, a scattering of South American presidents, H. G. Wells and Annie Besant.

Mr. Washburn asked Ishkender where he got the money to form so many organizations, to which, according to a transcript, he replied, "I belong to one of the richest families in Constantinople." He said the Citizens of the World had been organized in 1914 in Great Britain, where he was ordained a minister, and that his great objective in life was to promote peace and prosperity for all mankind. To do this, he said, he would have to complete the circuit of the world begun when he came from Constantinople to the United States. This presented a problem, but Dr. Ishkender has solved it. According to his pamphlet, "either in this or some future reincarnation he will be a citizen of China, then India, and thus eventually get back to Turkey."

$35,000 GRANT TO AID DRIVE ON ILLITERACY

Rosenwald Fund Makes Gift to Foster Educational Work, Especially in South.

A grant of $35,000 from the Julius Rosenwald fund to the National Illiteracy Crusade for its work in eliminating illiteracy in the United States, particularly in the South, was announced yesterday following a meeting of the executive committee of the crusade in the office of Dr. John H. Finley in The New York Times Annex, 229 West Forty-third Street.

Dr. Finley, who is president of the crusade, in explaining the grant said:

"The 1920 census revealed 5,000,000 persons over 20 years of age in the United States who were illiterates and every effort is to be made during the five months remaining before the 1930 census is taken to make the record of the new census as good as possible."

Among those who attended the meeting, at which plans were made for the new year, were:

Mrs. CORA WILSON STEWART, director of the organization.
Dr. A. O. THOMAS, president of the World Federation of Education Associations.
Dr. THOMAS JESSE JONES of the Phelps Stokes Fund.
HERBERT S. HUSTON of New York.
Dr. A. E. WINSHIP of Boston.
Miss SALLY LUCAS JEAN of New York.
Professor W. GARSON EVAN of Swarthmore college, secretary of the crusade.

The National Illiteracy Crusade was organized in 1926. Mrs. Stewart will continue as director and will have the assistance of a technical staff for research and field work. Headquarters are maintained in Washington.

Freezing Weather Today Forecast for City; Snow in Parts of the East, Blizzards in West

From indications yesterday, and the prophecies of the Weather Bureau last night, it appeared that both Summer and Indian Summer are definitely past for the year. For high up on the Whitehall Building the local bureau found its thermometer trembling at the lowest point this Fall; in other sections of the country it was the same. Today is scheduled to be colder—and more completely Winter.

New York City's prelude to the first cold snap of the season was more by way of prophecy than reality. To be sure, the thermometer did drop to 37 degrees—at 6 o'clock yesterday morning—but the bureau insisted that before another day is out it will fall to 28 degrees. That should put a bit of ice on the ponds. The colder weather is scheduled to stay until Saturday night.

Along with the freezing temperature, New York will have fair skies, although there will be a little wind. Yesterday there was considerable wind. It drove away the rain of early morning and brought the bureau's Fall record, to date, of 37. Then the wind died down and the temperature seized the opportunity to climb to 44 degrees.

New York, however, apparently had the better of the season's early cold snap. At least, it got rain instead of the snow that swirled through the West and covered sections of New England with a light fall. Four inches of snow fell in the vicinity of Hazleton, Pa., and in Hawley, Wayne County, Pa. Those four inches, moreover, fell at a temperature of 27 degrees.

Besides reporting the plight of Hazleton and Hawley, Wayne County, The Associated Press announced snow at Boston, heavy enough to make motoring unpleasant but not bad enough to injure shipping. Springfield, Mass., reported two inches of snow, but at New Haven, Conn., it melted as fast as it fell.

With a mid-Winter blizzard raging and a drop in temperature scheduled, there had been much anxiety for the many deer hunters living in camps near Sault Ste. Marie. Already a foot of snow has fallen, and the camps are not built to withstand storms. Two years ago many hunters had to abandon their cars for the Winter because snow had blocked the trails.

There were blizzards in the West. Montana, Kansas, Oklahoma and Northern Texas all felt snow; Montana, Wyoming, parts of Colorado, the Dakotas and to the shores of Lake Superior had sub-zero temperatures. The thermometer reached 13 below zero in the Fox Park section of Wyoming, 10 below at Billings and Great Falls, Mont., and Devils Lake, N. D. Twelve to 15 below was forecast for last night at Kansas City and vicinity.

$1,280,000 IN STOCK SOUGHT IN FAILURE

GRAND JURY HEARS HOPKINS

Controller of Bankrupt Bankers' Capital and Affiliated Concerns Is Examined.

Forty thousand shares of stock valued at $1,280,000 have "disappeared," it was disclosed yesterday by Assistant United States Attorney Emanuel G. Kleid, after he had examined W. C. Hopkins, controller of the bankrupt Bankers' Capital Corporation and of nearly a score of affiliated concerns, before the Federal grand jury.

Mr. Kleid said he was convinced that, as controller, Mr. Hopkins was only a figurehead and that his "only boss" was H. H. Gunder, chairman of the boards of directors of all the concerns. He added that through Hopkins he had traced a sum of money as far as its conversion into 40,000 shares of the stock of the Bankers' Financial Trust. The shares were valued at $32 each.

But at this point "all trace of the money is lost," he said, because it "went into one of three companies owned outright by Mr. Gunder." He said that efforts to obtain the books of these companies had been unsuccessful, but that "appropriate action will be taken, if necessary."

Mr. Gunder, his brother, Phillip Gunder; E. L. Sturges, former Banking Commissioner of Connecticut as well as former head of the Bankers' Capital Company of Connecticut, and Roland J. Randall, president of Bankers' Capital, called yesterday at the Federal Building and listened to Mr. Kleid's argument that the books be produced. They declined then to make any promises, but later in the day Assistant United States Attorney George J. Mintzer announced that the books of the three corporations were in New York and would be in the United States Attorney's office tomorrow, when they are to be examined by accountants.

Mr. Hopkins was the only witness yesterday before the grand jury, but Mr. Kleid said that he had learned from Rollo S. Bassett, who was made assistant vice president of the Bankers' Capital Corporation after he had invested a considerable sum of money, that Gunder had boasted of a personal fortune of more than $15,000,000.

At Mr. Bassett's request, according to Mr. Kleid, Mr. Gunder caused the publication of a pamphlet outlining his career. According to this account he is a member of the Indiana bar, and has held four governmental positions in New York, Chicago and Boston, the last one being listed as New England Superintendent for the United States Shipping Board.

He was said to have resigned in order to give more time to his private affairs. He was said to be a member of the law firm of Pile & Gunder, in South Bend, Ind. The pamphlet listed his fortune at more than $1,000,000, the claim of $15,000,000 having been made orally to Mr. Bassett, according to Mr. Kleid. Mr. Gunder, he said, maintained residences at 1,272 Woodward Avenue, South Bend, 184 East Seventy-second Street, here, and at Moosehead Lakes, Me.

Wins $20,000 From Mrs. Hergesheimer

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Nov. 21 (AP).—A verdict of $20,000 damages against Mrs. Joseph Hergesheimer, wife of the novelist, was awarded Mr. and Mrs. William M. Grimes of Williamstown, Pa., by a jury in the Chester County common pleas court today. The suit arose from an automobile accident on Aug. 17, 1928, when a car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Grimes figured in a collision with Mrs. Hergesheimer's car, driven by her chauffeur.

FATHER ASKS MERCY ON SON'S KIDNAPPER

Larney Tells the Court He and Wife Think Woman Has "Suffered Enough."

HIS FATHER SUPPLIES BOND

Thirty hours of anxiety and frantic search for their 3-months-old baby, Donald, turned yesterday morning into complete forgiveness by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Larney of 1,315 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn, for Mrs. Irene Roever, 37 years old, of 815 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, confessed kidnapper of the infant.

Former Alderman Patrick Larney, the baby's grandfather, furnished $1,000 bail for the release of the penitent woman after the child's father refused to make a complaint against Mrs. Roever at her arraignment at Gates Avenue court, Brooklyn.

Low Bail Is Fixed.

In the court sequel to the city-wide search by 100 specially assigned detectives for the missing baby, Magistrate Frederick Hughes shared the mercy of the Larneys for Mrs. Roever and in holding her for examination set the lowest bail possible on a felony charge.

Mrs. Roever, mother of two girls, 7 and 13 years old, who is said to have confessed to the police Wednesday night that she craved a baby boy, will appear in court Monday for examination on a charge of kidnaping the child from its carriage in front of a Brooklyn department store Tuesday afternoon.

"We don't want to make any complaint against this woman," Mr. Larney told Magistrate Hughes. "I think she is a good woman and has suffered enough."

Mrs. Roever, supported by two court attendants and a detective, stood sobbing before the bar.

"My wife feels the same way about it," Mr. Larney went on. "This woman has two beautiful children. I was deprived of my child, which was bad enough, but why should she be deprived of her children? Something should be done to help this woman—not to hurt her."

"I am inclined to think your way, too," Magistrate Hughes said, "but you are not the complainant. Your wife is the complainant."

Magistrate Hughes asked Mrs. Roever if a $1,000 bond would be too much for her. The woman said she would not be able to raise the bail.

Wants Case Put Off.

Mr. Larney then asked the magistrate if he would adjourn the case until today, when his wife could appear. When informed the woman would then have to be held in bail, Mr. Larney, not wanting her to spend another night in jail, offered to get his wife in court in half an hour.

At this point Assistant District Attorney Sigismund Trapani objected.

"This crime was not committed against Mr. and Mrs. Larney," he said. "It is a crime against the community and the State of New York. This is a serious charge."

Magistrate Hughes agreed and told Mr. Larney he would hold Mrs. Roever until he could get his wife.

When Mr. Larney hurried from the court room he met his father, former Alderman Larney, who then offered to supply Mrs. Roever's bail. The prisoner was released on his bond and taken in a taxicab to her Hancock Street home by the Larneys.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Larney, who collapsed Wednesday night, two hours before her child was surrendered, was still in a weak condition yesterday, but was rapidly recovering with her baby, Donald, again with her. The Larneys have another child, Kenneth, 5 years old.

AMSTER UPHOLDS UNIFICATION PLAN

Tells Utility Investigators That I. R. T. Should Join in City's Transit Program.

REVEALS HIS HOLDINGS

Hotchner Charges Lighting Company Induced Consumers to Quit Rate Fight.

Taking the witness stand to support the transit unification plans of the city and Transit Commission, Nathan L. Amster, chairman of the stockholders' protective committee of the Manhattan Railway Company, disclosed yesterday to the legislative commission inquiring into the public service law both his transit holdings and his ideas on the fiscal arrangements in unification.

He owns between 15,000 and 20,000 shares of Manhattan Railway stock, he testified, and about 5,000 shares of Interborough Rapid Transit stock in addition to "some of the bonds" of both companies. A protestant against the policy of the Interborough, he said frankly that the exchange of city bonds for privately-owned transit lines offered a lucrative escape from the contract binding the lines to a 5-cent fare. He added that the size of the growing transportation system within the city made it inadvisable any longer to operate and finance it on private capital.

At the hearing, which was held in the Aldermanic chamber of City Hall, two other witnesses were Louis Goldberg of the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission, who continued from the previous day a discussion of regulation in his State, and Maurice Hotchner, counsel for many consumer organizations. The latter's charge that the Long Island Lighting Company had induced petitioners for lower rates to withdraw their names caused Frank P. Walsh, one of Governor Roosevelt's appointees on the commission, to promise a full inquiry into the accusation.

Mr. Amster, who said that his work was in railroad rehabilitation, told the commission of his fight to control the Manhattan Railway which leases its elevated lines to the Interborough. Starting late, his minority committee was within 4,000 shares of controlling the management by the time of the stockholders' meeting last week and it actually represented between 1,800 and 2,000 people, he said.

Favors Going With City.

His conclusion as to the proper I. R. T. policy, he said, was based on the five-cent fare contract which made it impossible for stockholders to get a return.

"But the value of the property is so great to the city," he said, "that it is in the interest of the stockholders to go with the city in its program. If the city is going to carry out its program, and I am sure any one giving thought to the needs and requirements of the city would say that it should carry out the unification program, it is my suggestion that the city should get its money as cheap as it can: that is, buy the properties as cheap as it can.

"Now, the needs of the city of New York are so great and vast for transportation, and are going to be greater, that it has ceased in my opinion to be an undertaking that should be operated or financed by private capital. Only the credit of city and State could ever take care of the transit needs. Anybody that obstructs this program of unification, I feel, is doing no good to the security holders and certainly is not helping the city in the progress that it is going to make."

Tells of Consumers' Fight.

How the consumer petitions for Long Island Lighting Company rate reductions were made invalid by the withdrawals of names after they had been filed with the Public Service Company was described by Mr. Hotchner, who represented the Association of Long Island Commuters in the case. He read a letter from a woman resident of Bellmore, now dead, explaining that two men had called upon her and persuaded her to withdraw her name. Despite the seriousness of the allegations in the petitions the Public Service Commission initiated no rate inquiry because of the "technicality" of name withdrawals, he testified.

"A year later there were some inconsequential reductions of rates, which we were told were voluntary, that did not meet the situation at all," Mr. Hotchner said.

Mr. Goldberg took issue with the idea of minimum regulation of utilities as advocated before the commission recently by President Emeritus Arthur T. Hadley of Yale. "To give the utility a free hand and make the regulatory body an adjunct of the department of education would be to put greed and gluttony in the saddle riding at full speed," he said. He added that any concerted effort by the Massachusetts utilities to break down the theory of regulation in force there would lead to public ownership.

DIAMOND WORKSHOPS IN BELGIUM MAY CLOSE

Jewelers and Merchants There Urge Measure to Stabilize Market, Hit by Stock Crash.

ANTWERP, Belgium, Nov. 21 (AP).—Antwerp jewelers and diamond merchants are suggesting that all the diamond workshops in Belgium be shut down temporarily to reduce to a minimum the difficulties caused in the diamond industry by a recent slump in the American and British markets.

By closing the shops for a period of three to six months, they hope to stabilize the market, avoid over-production and maintain the present prices of diamonds.

Belgian diamond merchants would like the Amsterdam cutters and dealers to adopt similar drastic measures to protect the industry, which is an important one in Belgium, with 15,000 skilled workers, drawing high salaries, engaged in it. Belgian diamond exports last year amounted to more than $50,000,000, one-third of which was paid by American jewelers.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Nov. 21 (AP).—Ever since the securities market in the United States took its slump the demand for big diamonds, which were being cut here, has fallen off.

Experts in Cape Town say that the falling off of prices in the security market in New York has been felt keenly by the diamond cutters here and it is expected that the government may be asked to help organize assistance.

Will Rogers Also 'Confers' On Confidence Plans

To the Editor of The New York Times:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 21.—While Mr. Hoover had all the prominent male financiers of the East "restoring confidence," I rode herd on all the female industrial giantesses of the West and restored the following "confidence."

Texas Guinan (the General Motors of night clubs), said: "I will put branches of my industry in every town that Sears, Roebuck are."

Clara Bow: "I will be glad to help out President Coolidge and Secretary McAdoo in this financial jam that the talkies have got us into."

Elinor Glyn: "The trouble with this country its got confidence, but it hasn't got 'it' and confidence without 'it' and some money, is lost."

Amee McPherson: "Have just fired two lawyers, and one of my deacons for buying on margins. If the worst comes to the worst with Wall Street I will take up a collection."

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

SOCIALIST LEADERS DRAFT CITY POLICY

Committee Agrees That Party Should Cooperate With Non-Partisan Groups.

OPPOSES NEW NAME NOW

Report Voices Readiness, However, for Merger With Progressives and Workers in Future.

Cooperation with non-partisan or independent groups for particular purposes or campaigns without compromising the Socialist platform and principles is recommended in the report of the agenda committee of the Socialist city convention, which begins tomorrow. The section of the report dealing with future political policy, made public yesterday, also emphasizes the importance of building up the Socialist organization, welcomes a possible coalition with labor and progressives in a new party, even without the full Socialist program, but finds no reason for changing the party name now.

The recommendations on political policy occupied little of the committee's time, as there was no disagreement on any important question, according to the announcement from Socialist headquarters. The group, composed of nine party leaders, including Norman Thomas and Meyer L. Hillquit, also will present to the convention recommendations affecting membership, dues, organization and other matters.

Welcomes Non-Partisan Aid.

"In the city of New York," the recommended program says, "we shall continue to cooperate for particular purposes with non-partisan groups which cannot or will not unite with us as a party, but which are interested in the discovery of facts and in an aggressive fight against misgovernment, provided that such cooperation is on conditions that do not compromise our own municipal program or our deep-seated opposition to both old parties.

"It was in this spirit that we welcomed the support of the non-partisan group in the last municipal election and will welcome cooperation from similar groups not only in the next election but in the educational work that must be continuously done."

The statement of policy begins by declaring that while Socialists are united in acceptance of a "consistent political program for city, State, nation, and international relations," the party permits the widest latitude of individual opinion and action, is not dogmatic or sectarian and throws its doors open "to all men and women who accept its fundamental principles without distinction of class, race or creed."

"The Socialist party does not claim and does not desire a monopoly of progressive or labor politics," the statement continues. "If any new body should in the future give promise of uniting the workers and the progressive citizens into one effective political body, the Socialist party will meet the situation in a friendly and generous spirit and will be ready to join it, as it did in 1924, without insisting on the acceptance of its name or of every article of its political faith and program.

Urges Building Up of Party.

"But since the Socialist party is at this time the only important political party in the United States definitely and consistently committed to the cause of labor and social progress, it holds that it will best serve the cause by building up its own organization throughout the country. The Socialist party appeals to all persons who accept our program to cooperate with it for the accomplishment of this task by entering the active ranks of the party."

The Socialist party is not wedded to the name and would not hesitate to change it if there should be a good reason to do so, the statement says, but "no such reason seems to exist at this time."

"We are Socialists, are proud of it, and shall continue the name Socialist unless or until new conditions should make a change of name advisable," the statement concludes.

The statement is recommended for adoption by Mr. Hillquit, Mr. Thomas, James Oneal, Julius Gerber, Louis Waldman, Algernon Lee, Charles Solomon, Maury Lewis, August Claessens, C. August Gerber, Sol Levitas, Frank Crosswaith and Jessie Wallace Hughan. The convention will meet at 2 P. M. tomorrow at the Rand School, 7 East Fifteenth Street.

Taxi Drivers Plan to Form Union.

An effort to organize a union of taxicab drivers and independent owners of taxicabs will be made at a meeting Monday night in the Hunts Point Palace, 953 Southern Boulevard, the Bronx. The meeting was called yesterday by The Taxi Sun, a weekly paper. Assemblyman Julius J. Berg, Samuel C. Martin, Joseph Cannon and Jack Bregman, editor of the publication, will speak at the meeting.

STORE BLAST KILLS 5, HURTS 50, IN CAPITAL

Furnace Boiler Blows Out Fronts of Two Buildings in Main Shopping District.

SHATTERS NEARBY WINDOWS

Disaster Occurs at a Time When Stores and Street Are Crowded With People.

DEBRIS GIVES UP DEAD

Naval Doctors Aid Emergency Hospital Staff in Caring for the Scores Injured.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Five are dead, including two women and a baby, three other women and one man are dying, and more than fifty people were injured, many of them seriously, in a furnace boiler explosion which wrecked the basement and front of McCrory's 5 and 10 cent store on Seventh Street this afternoon.

Among the victims are:

Dead.

Mrs. ANNA MAY COCKERELL, aged 32, of 4,005 Arkansas Avenue.
MARY ANN COCKERELL, aged 2, child of Mrs. Cockerell.
Miss KATHERINE CULLINANE of 4,005 Arkansas Avenue.
Mrs. ELIZABETH DAWSON, aged 38, of 338 Maryland Avenue Northeast.
CHARLES JACOBSON, aged 45, of 2,824 Twelfth Street.

Seriously Injured.

Mrs. G. S. DECKER, aged 34, of 328 Rittenboro Place, of the Salvation Army.
CHARLES DECKER, aged 4, her son.
Mrs. EDNA KENT, aged 50, of 502 Eighth Street Southwest.
MARGARET COCKERELL, aged 10, 4,005 Arkansas Avenue.
LULU CARTER, graduate nurse, 609 Delafield Place.
WARREN THAYER of 722 Thirty-second Street Northeast.
OLGA SHIPLEY, 18 years old, of 3,535 Alton Place.
Mrs. FLORENCE DARLINGTON, aged 50, of 63 W Street, Northwest.

Tears 40-foot Hole in Sidewalk.

The explosion tore a 40-foot hole in the sidewalk in front of the store from which clouds of steam and smoke rose to the height of the building, while blocks of concrete and the debris of collapsing walls and plate glass windows shot through the air, striking and severely injuring passers-by on the opposite side of the street, as well as those nearer.

The fronts of McCrory's and the Traveler Shoe Store adjoining were blown entirely out, all windows in every store on both sides of the street for a block were shattered and buildings five and six blocks away were rocked by the blast.

Men, women and children in the store and on the street were caught without warning in the disaster, which occurred at the most crowded hour of the afternoon in the busy shopping district of Seventh Street, two blocks north of the intersection with Pennsylvania Avenue. Several persons fell into the excavation which opened at their feet, others were thrown to the ground or hurled several feet.

The force of the explosion was so great that the clothes of several victims were torn from their bodies. One man fell with both legs crushed, another had a shoe torn off.

Naval Officers Aid Injured.

Firemen, police and relief workers arrived quickly and took over the care of the injured and the removal of the dead.

The building did not catch fire, the slight smoldering in the basement being quickly quenched. All the injured were removed within a few minutes.

Doctors and nurses rushed to the scene. The Red Cross sent two ambulances. Admiral Arthur L. Willard, commandant of the navy yard, accompanied by his aide, Commander William D. Kilduff, and Captain Willis McDowell, brought an ambulance, several medical aides, medicine and other supplies.

Hospital Staff Meets Emergency.

The entire block was closed to traffic for several hours, but within less than half an hour firemen were clearing away the wreckage.

The injured were taken to Emergency Hospital at a time of day when an unusually large number of resident and visiting doctors were at work there. The staff was quickly organized under the direction of Dr. Walter Atkinson, and all the injured received prompt attention. Most of the victims were suffering from burns and shock.

GOULD ESTATE UP AGAIN.

Heirs Fight Inheritance Taxes in New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Litigation over the $16,000,000 estate of George J. Gould, who died in 1923, was renewed today, when argument was heard by Vice Chancellor Backes, sitting at the State House, in a proceeding attacking certain inheritance taxes levied by the State Controller. Three contentions were raised by heirs of the estate. It was held that the Controller had erred in taxing a gift of $1,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds made by Gould to his wife shortly before his death, and that a deduction of $8,442,992.56 allowed from the taxable estate should have been increased by $1,825,900. It was further contended that 5,428 shares of Consolidated Coal Company stock, valued at $70 a share by the State, should have been valued at $90.

The State argued that the gift of Liberty bonds was made in contemplation of death and that the tax should stand. The deductions allowed, and stock valuations likewise were defended as proper. Counsel was directed by the court to file briefs. William A. Moore, special investigator for the State Inheritance Tax Department, appeared for the Controller, and the Gould heirs were represented by George McCarter.

Gets Year for Robbing Tom Mix.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 21 (AP).—Russell Everett, negro, of Peru, Ind., was sentenced from one to two years at hard labor in State prison today by Judge Oscar L. Young after he had pleaded guilty to larceny of $200,000 from Tom Mix. Everett was employed by the screen actor as a valet and the theft occurred while Mix was appearing in this State with a circus. Much of the loot, the greater part of which was in currency, was recovered.

'MME. BUTTERFLY' BACK AT THE OPERA

Mme. Rethberg Sings Cio-Cio-San With Lovely Tone in First Performance of Season.

GIGLI IS LIEUT. PINKERTON

Big Audience Hails a Fine Performance Conducted by Bellezza —Scotti Again Consul.

MADAMA BUTTERFLY, opera in three acts. Book in Italian by Illica and Giacosa, from the Belasco-Long play. Music by Giacomo Puccini. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Cio-Cio-San.....Elisabeth Rethberg
Suzuki.....Ina Bourskaya
Kate Pinkerton.....Phradie Wells
B. F. Pinkerton.....Beniamino Gigli
U. S. Consul Sharpless.....Antonio Scotti
Goro.....Giordano Paltrinieri
Yamadori.....Pompilio Malatesta
The Uncle-Priest.....Paolo Ananian
Yakusida.....Paolo Quintina
The Imperial Commissary.....Alfredo Gandolfi
Conductor, Vincenzo Bellezza.

Some water has flowed under New York bridges and Nagasaki villas since Puccini's "Madama Butterfly" was taken to the hearts of Italian opera's wisest producers and world-wide public twenty-three years ago. The opera he made of the Belasco-Long one-act play was sung last night for the first time this season, and the American Consul was the same Antonio Scotti who had been in the Metropolitan's early production with Farrar, Homer and Caruso.

Mme. Rethberg, Mr. Gigli and others last evening comprised a cast of more recent years. The soprano, who sang with lovely tone, looked her best in black and silver kimono, and her off-stage entrance air was in perfect tune. The tenor, too, sang well, even better than he looked the type of Lieutenant in our navy. The Susuki of the women's exquisite "flower dust" was the versatile artist, Ina Bourskaya.

It was, vocally, a very good evening for those chiefly concerned. In the large ensemble directed by Mr. Bellezza with polished skill were the veterans Ananian, Paltrinieri, Malatesta, as priests and gentlemen of Japan; Miss Wells as Kate Pinkerton, Paolo Quintina and the new Mr. Gandolfi in other roles. The child whom Cio-Cio-San named "Trouble" was again the diminutive Olga Seroff, though the program didn't mention her.

There was renewed charm in Joseph Urban's scenes of the Nagasaki house of paper screens and cherry-blossom vistas. The poignant little story was again told as simply as may well be in a vast stage under blaze of light. And the singers perhaps strained for effect in the wedding duet that Puccini's Italian collaborators took from Loti's "Chrysantheme" as prelude to the tragic short-story of John Luther Long. An applauding audience included more than 400 standees.

MARTHA BAIRD IN RECITAL.

Pianist Gives Charming Performance of "Six Visions Fugitives."

Martha Baird, pianist, appeared yesterday afternoon in a recital at Town Hall. In her rendering of Busoni's great arrangement of Bach's C major Toccata, and Beethoven's "Waldstein" sonata, Op. 53, Miss Baird betrayed leanings toward somewhat formal phrasing, and a tendency to obscure the melodic outline by underpedaling. Chopin's B minor sonata, Op. 58, which followed, seemed eminently more suited to her gifts.

The audience warmly applauded the soloist in Prokofieff's version of Slavic hypochondria, "Six Visions Fugitives," and rightly so, for the performance was charming and finished and marked by understanding. The printed program closed with Liszt's D flat Etude and the same composer's formidable embellishment of the theme in Paganini's 24th violin caprice. The technical mastery as a whole was adequate, though some of the passages containing octave figuration seemed to occasion the pianist discomfort, as is usually the case with violinists in its original form. There were flowers and the soloist was recalled.

AN "ARTISTIC MORNING."

De Luca and Misses Doninelli and Shotwell Heard at the Plaza.

Giuseppe De Luca, baritone; Aida Doninelli, soprano, and Margaret Shotwell, pianist, were the artists who appeared yesterday at the Plaza ballroom "artistic morning." Miss Shotwall corrected the printed announcement and played Debussy's "Claire de Lune," an arrangement of "The Blue Danube Waltz," and solos by Franz Liszt. Mr. De Luca and Miss Doninelli, accompanied at the piano by Pietro Cimara and Henry Levine, respectively, presented airs from Puccini, Verdi and Mozart, and modern Italian, French and Spanish songs by Penella, Cimara, Busni-Pecia and others. A good-sized audience cordially recalled the performers.

At the next "artistic morning," on Dec. 5, the Aguilar Lute Quartet, Violet Kamble-Cooper, Victor Wittgenstein and Rafaelo Diaz will appear.

Carolina Playmakers Are Here.

The Carolina Playmakers of the University of North Carolina, on tour in their repertory plays, will present "Job's Kinfolks," by Loretto Carroll Bailey, at 2:30 P. M. today in the McMillin Academic Theatre, Columbia University. The setting of the play is in Central North Carolina, not far from Gastonia. At the evening performance, which will be for members of the Institute of Arts and Sciences only, three one-act plays will be presented: "The Fly Count Boy," by Paul Green; "Black Water," by Loretto Carroll Bailey, and "Magnolia's Man," by Gertrude Wilson Coffin.

Fulton's Puppets to Open on Nov. 26

Bobby Fulton's Puppets will begin a series of Saturday morning performances at the Charles Hopkins Theatre on Nov. 30. "Cinderella" and "The Three Wishes" will be the opening bill. Mr. Fulton plans to give extra performances of his marionettes during the Christmas holidays.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

Koussevitsky Scores Triumph.

Serge Koussevitsky and the Boston Orchestra made their first New York appearance of the season last night in Carnegie Hall. The orchestra is more than ever a sheer delight and intoxication to the ear. The tone is of velvet or of gold, as the case may be. The orchestra is completely responsive to Mr. Koussevitsky's slightest wish.

On the program last night he placed the Beethoven "Egmont" overture, Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel," and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. The performance of the Ravel suite was the special triumph of the first part of the program. This is music of an artificial kind, but here the artifice is art. As we know, the suite when it was first composed was played four hands by two children. The orchestral version is more fascinating than the version for piano, since Ravel, a veritable wizard of instrumentation, can here employ all the most delicate tone colors and with a mastery which never fails to impress the listeners anew.

The score is full of the most delicate conceits. These are marvels of fastidious coloring. One wonders whether there has been another modern master with such a knowledge and instinct for the tone-tints of the orchestra. Debussy had this instinct, and a greater and more original talent than Ravel, but Ravel is the more precise of the two in his management of pigments. His children are Parisian children. They are not the apple-cheeked pair of Humperdinck. Nor do they belong to a hockey team or a folk-dance society. They inhabit drawing room and never go out to walk unglooved. Just the same, this is a delightful work of a highly finished and sophisticated sort. There is the flavor of the "contes bleues," even a suggestion of the medieval hinterland of the imagination from which they came. And all this was admirably conveyed by Mr. Koussevitsky and his orchestra.

As for Strauss, we have not heard "Till Eulenspiegel" played with more prevailing justness of pace and a finer molding of phrase and adjustment of detail. The scoring is very clean and clear, save in those places where Strauss is deliberately noisy and intentionally coarse. The performance made it the clearer. What was missing was the demoniac energy and defiance, the mad waggery, or the sudden haunting tenderness of the music with which Strauss himself, when he visited this country for the first time some twenty-five years ago, informed it. Perhaps distance lends enchantment to that visit, but it seemed music was never more highly charged and explosive, despite the poetry and the golden thread of folk-tale running through it.

Comparison of a conductor's interpretation with that of a composer does not, of course, necessarily establish standards, and comparison of Mr. Koussevitsky's conducting with that of Richard Strauss would be today highly disadvantageous to the latter gentleman. But the Till who fled Puck-like through the orchestra last night would not have alarmed and dismayed the bourgeois, would not have been summoned before the town council, denounced for his courageous misdeeds and indignantly strung up on the gallows. This Till was a harmless sprite. Boston would have harbored him with pleasure, and even Harvard. But Mr. O'Neill might have felt bored in his company.

There was a finely balanced and proportioned reading of the Beethoven overture, with the sombre chords that tower over the music of revolt, supplication, suspense—music which gives way at last to frantic rejoicing. Here, too, there could have been a more savage bite of the strings in the opening of the movement proper, a sharper thrust, a more passionate accent. The symphony is a work that Mr. Koussevitsky has shown, ere this, he can read in a nobly dramatic yet not slavishly conventional manner.

PADEREWSKI'S TOUR OFF.

Pianist's Condition Causes Postponement for a Year.

Ignace J. Paderewski has postponed till next year his American tour, once announced for November and again recently for January next. The Polish pianist has recuperated more slowly than he hoped from his operation for appendicitis, undergone last September. Severe after-effects, which then disabled him, have now recurred.

His tour manager, George Engles, gave out the pianist's cable message, received yesterday, for the information of thousands who had sought to subscribe for the concerts now canceled here and elsewhere.

The message said: "After second phlebitis, though feeling much better, am still in bed. Traveling December practically impossible. Practicing at present unthinkable. Considering circumstances, tour should be postponed until next season. Inexpressibly sorry to have caused so much trouble and disappointment. Affectionate greetings. PADEREWSKI."

MME. ALSEN GIVES RECITAL.

German Soprano Is Guest Artist of Haarlem Philharmonic.

Mme. Elsa Alsen, a distinguished German soprano, who came to this country with the first Wagner opera company heard after the war and has since appeared with leading symphony orchestras throughout the country in Wagner programs, sang as guest at the first of the Haarlem Philharmonic Society's morning musicales this season at the Hotel Astor yesterday. An audience of a thousand filled the large ballroom for the concert, in which Mme. Alsen's songs were alternated with chamber music by this year's newly arrived Roth Quartet.

Traveling from California for yesterday's engagement, Mme. Alsen was warmly welcomed in a program of intimate songs. She is also to appear while in the East as a guest star in the "Ring" cycle performances of the Philadelphia Civic Opera.

MUSIC NOTES.

Tom Weatherly announced last night that, because of a slight indisposition, Pavlowa, the dancer, will not be able to appear at the Music Box on Sunday night.

Ina Bourskaya, Nadia Reisenberg, Anna Mattschke, Mischa Rudinoff and Naum Blinder are to appear at the Metropolitan's third concert at Washington Irving High School on Saturday night, Nov. 30.

Frances Alda and Scipione Guidi are among the artists who will appear at the concert to be given by the Italian Welfare League on Sunday evening, Dec. 1, at the Hotel Plaza.

TAYLOR'S NEW OPERA ON 'PETER IBBETSON'

Composer Shelves Rice's Realistic "Street Scene" for Du Maurier's Fantastic Tragedy.

GATTI ACCEPTS SUBJECT

Work, Based on Constance Collier's Version of Play, Is to Be Completed by Spring.

Deems Taylor's new opera, which the Metropolitan commissioned the composer of "The King's Henchman" to write for a future season, already once delayed, is to be composed not on Elmer Rice's "Street Scene," it became known yesterday, but on Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson."

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan, saw the composer yesterday afternoon and accepted the new subject for the work, which must be in the opera company's hands by Spring for casting and rehearsal. Production is planned for 1930-31.

Mr. Taylor at his home in Stamford last night said he had "shelved," but not abandoned Rice's realistic play. It had simply become increasingly difficult to prepare for the lyric stage as he progressed on the music.

"It meant a lot more work," he said, "and time was getting short. I'd always had 'Peter Ibbetson' in the back of my head for an opera subject. At a party at Katharine Cornell's I met again Constance Collier, who adapted and acted it with the Barrymores here in 1917."

Miss Collier, he added, had been an enthusiastic as he himself about the suitability of "Ibbetson" for a perfectly "grand" opera. And he had set to work once more, getting well into two acts of the music before he saw Gatti-Casazza.

Du Maurier's fine novel, his first in a series including "The Martians" and the famous "Trilby," had been published as a serial in Harper's in 1890. John N. Raphael, writer of a Paris letter for The London Referee, made a dramatization, which failed to attract the English managers.

When Miss Collier saw the script, she brought about a matinee performance at His Majesty's Theatre on July 23, 1915, for the benefit of the Allied Forces Base Hospital, the four leading actors being Owen Nares, Henry Ainley, Miss Collier and Lillian Braithwaite.

The play came to New York at the Republic Theatre, April 18, 1917, John Barrymore had the title rôle, Lionel Barrymore that of Colonel Ibbetson, Miss Collier again the Duchess of Towers, with Laura Hope Crews as Mrs. Deane and Wallis Clarke as Major Duquenne.

Something of the dream fantasy of the drama's tragedy and later prison scenes left a deep impression on many who saw the performance, in which Miss Collier herself continued during three following years throughout America.

In obtaining the rights for his opera, Mr. Taylor received Miss Collier's permission to adapt freely her stage version of Du Maurier. Taylor's first choice, "Gaudle Follows His Nose," he had also shelved last year for the now postponed "Street Scene."

FIRST RUSSIAN TALKIE APPROVED ON TEST

It Has Public Showing With Films From Hollywood—Critics Praise Volume of Tone.

MOSCOW, Nov. 21 (AP).—Russia's first talking movie received a showing to the public today on a program with American talking films.

After a number of the American pictures had been run through, the Russian film was put on for comparison. The critics and scientists present said that it was as good as the American films, especially in clarity and volume of tone.

The Soviet Cinema Trust is preparing to open twenty talking movie theatres, one of which will specialize in talkies produced on the government's five-year industrialization program.

ASTAIRES SIGN TO PLAY IN NEW ZIEGFELD SHOW

They Will Be Starred With Marilyn Miller in 'Tom, Dick and Harry' by Coward and Youmans.

Florenz Ziegfeld announced yesterday that he had engaged Fred and Adele Astaire and that, at the suggestion of Marilyn Miller, they would be co-starred with Miss Miller in a new musical show, "Tom, Dick and Harry."

The book of the production, Mr. Ziegfeld said, will be by Noel Coward, whose operetta, "Bitter Sweet," is now at Mr. Ziegfeld's Theatre, and the music will be the work of Vincent Youmans. Rehearsals will start soon, the New York opening being scheduled for early in the new year.

It has been reported for some time that the Astaires would be seen under the Ziegfeld management. They last appeared here in "Funny Face," which was produced by Aarons and Freedley.

MOROSCO WEDS AT DINNER.

Producer Marries Helen McRuer in Presence of 100 Guests.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21 (AP).—Oliver Morosco, theatrical producer, and Helen McRuer, leading woman in several of his recent plays, were married here early this morning with scores of performers acting as unexpected witnesses. The marriage took place at a midnight dinner.

The couple recently obtained the marriage license but had announced that the wedding would not take place for several weeks. Morosco then invited more than a hundred friends to the dinner, which supposedly was given in honor of the bride-to-be. Much to the surprise of the guests, a minister arrived after the dinner and performed the ceremony.

Morosco announced his engagement to the former Phoenix, Ariz., actress here in February. His former wife, Thelma Paley Mitchell, divorced him in October, 1928, in Los Angeles, charging cruelty.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Shoestring Revue" will open tonight at the Lyric Theatre, Hoboken.

"Claire Adams," which opened on Tuesday night at the Biltmore Theatre, will be withdrawn tomorrow night.

The complete cast for S. N. Behrman's play, "Meteor," which the Theatre Guild will present here on Dec. 18, will include, in addition to Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, Douglas Montgomery, Lawrence Leslie, Edward Emery, Shirley O'Hara, Martin Berkeley and Leonard Loan. The play will first be produced in Boston on Dec. 2.

King Calder has replaced Harold Vermilyea in "The Humbug," opening next Wednesday at the Ambassador Theatre.

"Follow Thru" will give a benefit for the Actors' Fund at Chanin's Forty-sixth Street Theatre this afternoon.

The English rights to "Heads Up!" current at the Alvin Theatre, have been sold to Lee Ephraim.

The Paris-American Theatre Company will open tonight at the Theatre Femina, Paris, with a production of "The Road to Rome."

"Jingo," a play by Harold Igo, will be seen tonight in Hempstead. Jack Roseleigh and Mary Newton are featured in the cast.

Mary Murray has been engaged for "The Sap From Syracuse," now in rehearsal.

William O'Neal is expected to return to the cast of "The New Moon," now at the Casino Theatre, tonight. Mr. O'Neal was called to New Orleans by the illness of his mother. During his absence his rôle was filled by Ernest McChesney.

Mary Boland's starring vehicle, "Mrs. Cook's Tour," will close its preliminary tour tomorrow night in Newark. The play is expected to reopen out of town Christmas week after revisions have been made.

The title of the Elmer Harris play, opening on Thanksgiving night at the Morosco Theatre, has again been changed. It is now "Young Sinners."

THANKSGIVING WEEK TO SEE 13 NEW PLAYS

GILLETTE'S RETURN NOV. 25

"How's Your Health?" by Booth Tarkington and H. L. Wilson, One of Tuesday's Openings.

Next week, Thanksgiving Week, will be one of the busiest of the theatrical season, according to present schedules. Thirteen productions will come to Broadway, eight of them on Monday and Tuesday nights.

On Monday William Gillette and his revival of "Sherlock Holmes" will begin a three weeks' engagement at the New Amsterdam; the Theatre Guild's second production, "The Game of Love and Death," will be shown at the Guild Theatre; "The Patriarch" will open at the Forty-ninth Street, and "Mendel, Inc.," will come to the Sam H. Harris.

On Tuesday night Frank Craven will appear in "Salt Water" at the John Golden Theatre, and the Jack Donahue-Lily Damita musical show, "Sons o' Guns," will come to the Imperial. Other openings that night will be "How's Your Health?" the Booth Tarkington-Harry Leon Wilson comedy, at the Vanderbilt, and "Top o' the Hill," at the Eltinge.

On Wednesday "Fifty Million Frenchmen," a musical comedy, will be seen at the Lyric. "The Silver Swan," an operetta, will have a postponed premiere at the Martin Beck, and "The Humbug" will be presented at the Ambassador. On Thanksgiving night "When You're Eighteen" will open at the Morosco, and "Charm," a revival of "The Book of Charm," will be offered at Wallack's.

"Let Us Be Gay" to Close Dec. 14.

Rachel Crothers' successful comedy, "Let Us Be Gay," which, with Francine Larrimore as the star, has been running at the Little Theatre since Feb. 21, will end its Broadway engagement on Dec. 14. After a week's lay-off it will begin a tour of the subway circuit Christmas week. Another play by Miss Crothers, "Let Us Be Good," will be placed in rehearsal in a fortnight under the management of John Golden, who sponsored "Let Us Be Gay."

Milne Comedy Given at U. of N. H.

DURHAM, N. H., Nov. 21.—Playing before a capacity audience last night in Murkland Auditorium the University of New Hampshire players of Mask and Dagger presented A. A. Milne's comedy, "The Truth About Blayds." Professor W. G. Hennessy of the English Department was the coach. The play was given tonight and will be repeated tomorrow night.

Comedy by Settlement Players.

The Guild Players of the University Settlement will present Goldoni's comedy, "The Servant of Two Masters," at four evening performances beginning tonight in their theatre at 184 Eldridge Street. The players, who are a Little Theatre group, have been directed by Mrs. J. Glenwood Jones.

CANTOR-BRADY DEBATE ON THEATRE PUT OFF

"Whoopee" Star Can't Appear Next Sunday—Producer Eager for Discussion.

The debate between Eddie Cantor and William A. Brady on the subject of current theatrical conditions will not take place next Sunday, but may be staged a week from Sunday.

Mr. Brady said last night he had suggested to a representative of Mr. Cantor, who called upon him yesterday, that the debate be postponed a week or so to allow sufficient time for preparation. He added that he was eager to enter such a discussion.

"I implored Mr. Cantor not to call it off," he stated. "I think he unconsciously did a great service to the American theatre in his speech at the Equity meeting on Monday. It is time that the truth about current theatrical conditions be told by some people with a knowledge of the inside facts. I am not afraid to call a spade a spade, and I cred!' Mr. Cantor with the same courage. It would be a distinct misfortune to the theatre to let the matter drop."

Mr. Brady added that he was willing to increase the number of debaters and ask Frank Gillmore, president of Equity; Edward Childs Carpenter, president of the Dramatists' Guild, or a representative of the stage hands' union to participate in the discussion.

Mr. Cantor said last night that Florenz Ziegfeld had pleaded with him not to undertake the debate next Sunday night, on the ground that it might overtax his strength. Mr. Cantor will open in Boston on Monday in "Whoopee," and has promised, he said, to appear in two Sunday night benefit performances before going there.

SCREEN NOTES.

The new audible film at the Roxy is "Nix on Dames," with Robert Ames, William Harrigan and Mae Clarke.

"The Kiss," with Greta Garbo, is continuing at the Capitol.

Rudy Vallee's microphone film, "The Vagabond Lover," will be presented at the Globe Theatre on Tuesday evening. Sally Blane and Marie Dressler will also be seen in this film.

"The Saturday Night Kid," the talking picture with Clara Bow, is holding forth at the Paramount.

"Wall Street," an audible film with Aileen Pringle and Ralph Ince, will be the next offering at the Hippodrome.

Lily Damita will be seen at the Casino in "The Dancer of Barcelona," a European film made in Spain.

"The Sacred Flame," a Vitaphone picturization of the play by W. Somerset Maugham, with Pauline Frederick, is at the Mark Strand and the Brooklyn Strand.

"Shanghai Lady," the talking picture with Mary Nolan, continues for a third week at the Colony.

"Welcome Danger," with Harold Lloyd, continues at the Rivoli.

At the Fifth Avenue Playhouse the attractions are "Strauss, the Waltz King," and "Chang."

"Shiraz," with Himansu Rai, will be on view at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse.

At the Brooklyn Paramount the pictorial offering will be "Welcome Danger," with Harold Lloyd.

"Seven Faces," with Paul Muni, will be at the William Fox Theatre in Brooklyn.

The Roerich Art Cinema will offer "The Case of Lena Smith" and "Killing the Killer" today, tomorrow and Sunday.

"Blackmail," the British film, will be at the Brooklyn Mozart.

Occasional Blemishes
Almost everyone has them—that ugly blemish or bit of rash! Apply a little Resinol Ointment and see how quickly the soreness is relieved and the blemish disappears. To keep the skin soft and lovely, nothing can excel the daily use of Resinol Soap.
Try it today, you'll be sure to like its clean tonic odor, also the way it cleanses and livens the skin. At all druggists.
FREE SAMPLE OFFER
Trial size package of Resinol Soap and Ointment, free. Write Resinol, Dept. 3L, Baltimore, Md.

"Technicolor.....gorgeous girls in glorious dance formation and the fact that no less than seventy-seven celebs appear in the 'Show of Shows' is enough to gild the Winter Garden's box office for months to come. This is an all-star bill for certain."—Daily News.

"It must be the Revue to End All Revues, for surely none can top it in presenting to the public a miraculous melange of entertainment."—American.

".....A photoplay extravaganza that is lively, entertaining and well staged. The production is chiefly in color, and most of it is excellently handled, with taste and a bit of distinction."—Herald Tribune.

"Spectacular and colorful....Scores of stars and expertly trained dancing choruses."—Telegram.

"The most elaborate, highly technicolored spectacle that has come in since the first talkie began."—Sun.

"'Show of Shows' is entertainment of the sort that ought to prove to be another box office winner for the Warner Bros."—Journal.

"Gorgeous color, tuneful melodies, rhythmic dances, persuasive humor—in fact, every screen ingredient which will exert an appeal upon an audience."—Evening World.

RAY LYMAN WILBUR, Secretary of the Interior.
OWEN D. YOUNG, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, New York.

Construction of the building which will house the Institute of Human Relations, the research centre of the Human Welfare Group, has been begun. Here will be located the department of psychiatry and mental hygiene, research divisions in sociology and psychology, and the child development study unit.

Although the building will not be ready for occupancy until next Autumn, a number of cooperative research projects, dealing with such problems as delinquency, unemployment and business failures, are already under way.

NEWS BY SHORT WAVE TO REACH ANTIPODES

WGY Plans Morning Hour for Australia Daily—Stock Reports Go to Canal Zone.

In response to requests received from Far Eastern radio listeners, an early morning broadcast will be started for them tomorrow morning over WGY's associated short-wave transmitter, according to a representative of the Schenectady station. The entertainment is to be put on daily except Sunday, between 6 and 7 A. M., Eastern Standard Time, in the WGY studio. Such broadcasts will be heard in Eastern Australia at 9 P. M. the evening of the same day. Station W2XAF, which operates on the wave of 31.48 meters (9,530 kilocycles) will carry the program.

The presentations are to include news items, talks and music. In New Zealand and Australia the transmissions of the General Electric stations are said to be intercepted regularly, and rebroadcast frequently takes place over large networks, just as European programs often are carried to listeners here by the transoceanic short-wave lengths. The hour adopted is said to be one most suitable for widespread reception in Australia and New Zealand.

Stock market quotations sent out via the short-wave transmitters of WGY on Saturday nights are said to be filling a long-felt want for people of the Canal Zone and Caribbean Islands. They are, in many cases, the only stock news received by the residents, as local newspapers do not publish such material, according to the WGY representative.

An Intercollegiate Little Theatre.

An intercollegiate Little Theatre, to be known as The Playshop, is announced to open late in January under the direction of A. Montague Ash and Mona Lewis, both formerly associated with the Neighborhood Playhouse. Universities and colleges in New York will be represented in the production of plays and the formation of classes in pantomime, diction and the history of the theatre.

Today on the Radio

Nov. 22, 1929. Eastern Standard Time. Wave length in meters on left of station. All time is P. M. unless otherwise indicated. Station broadcasts are arranged in accordance with their location on the dial.

Stevens Announces Booth Will Start in Yale-Harvard Game

BOOTH WILL START AGAINST HARVARD

Coach Stevens Says McLennan, Ellis and Austen Also Will Be in Yale Back Field.

HOUR OF SCRIMMAGE HELD

Snead, Miller and Dunn Are Backs Used in Last Hard Work—Team to Drill at Cambridge Today.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—Mal Stevens, head coach of the Yale eleven, said tonight that he plans to start against Harvard on Saturday a surprise back-field quartet made up of Albie Booth, Don McLennan, Ned Austen and Harlan Ellis.

His decision superseded the combination of McLennan, quarterback; Snead, left halfback; Miller, right halfback, and Dunn, fullback; shifted McLennan from quarterback to halfback and reversed his statement of last night that he might not use Albie Booth during the game in the Cambridge Stadium.

Although today's practice, the final workout of the year here, was behind closely guarded gates inside the Bowl, it was given out that during the supervised scrimmage, which lasted nearly an hour, the Snead-Miller-Dunn combination was used.

Stevens's announcement was tonight generally interpreted to mean that Yale will play a defensive game during the first period. Ellis and Austen are good forward-pass interceptors and are defensive stars, while Booth's punting ability perhaps exceeds that of any Crimson kicker.

Booth Not Ready for Hard Play.

While Booth's muscle injury has not materially improved, and the coaches insist that they do not believe him physically fit for heavy scrimmaging or broken field running, he is perfectly capable of punting, drop kicking and living up to his great reputation as a tosser of forward passes. When Yale attempts its high-powered line attack campaign, no doubt is felt that the heavyweight trio, Snead, Miller and Dunn, will head the drive.

The Booth-McLennan-Austen-Ellis combination was used in signal rehearsal half an hour today behind the first-string line. Booth called the signals, but was replaced after fifteen minutes by Bob Hall and later by Bob Wilson. This quarterback trio is relied upon to work with the McLennan-Austen-Ellis trio, leaving Harold Cruickshank or McLennan to run the eleven when the Snead-Miller-Dunn combination is called upon.

In addition, Tommy Taylor and Al Beane are listed for specialty performances, Taylor as a line rammer and Beane as a forward pass handler, both defensively and offensively. Stevens said that no line change was planned.

How Teams Lined Up.

The line-ups were as follows:

A squad of thirty-eight players will go to Boston, the playing assignments of the third string team being determined by conditions arising during the game.

Stevens surprised the players by ordering one of the longest sessions of supervised scrimmage during the past month. Nearly two hours were spent in the Bowl. The varsity combination was used offensively and defensively. The scrub team in Crimson jerseys launched both forward and lateral passes in preparation for Harvard's expected attack. The varsity showed a decided improvement in checking both styles of play.

Booth Kicks Several Goals.

Booth and Cruickshank spent twenty minutes in drop kicking. Booth lifted the ball over the crossbar from the 25-yard line at difficult angles on several occasions.

Following breakfast tomorrow morning at the Y Club, the squad will assemble in front of Durfee Hall and upon its departure at 9:30 o'clock will be given an ovation from a volunteer cheering section. The players will go to Boston at 10:05 A. M. and will reach the stadium in Cambridge about 2 o'clock for an hour's light practice. The players then will be taken to the University Club to dine and spend the night.

The players will hold their dinner, breaking training, at 6:30 o'clock Saturday night in the private dining room of the University Club. A party of players and coaches will attend the performance at the Shubert Theatre Saturday night.

The Yale coaches admitted tonight that Saturday's game should prove one of the hardest which has been fought in the long gridiron series which started in 1875. None of them would make a prediction of the outcome. Trainer Connors said that the physical condition of the squad had improved materially during the week.

While the three quarterbacks, Booth, Hall and Wilson, are still not in first-class condition, as the result of injuries, all are now relied upon for duty during a part of the game.

YALE GAMES IN MOVIES.

Reels of 4 Contests to Be Available for Home Showing.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21 (AP).—A Yale announcement tonight was that moving pictures of the four final games in the Yale football schedule will be available to alumni associations and also for home movies. The sets are out of the full-game reels made for the athletic association and used mainly for study of players in action by coaches and the players themselves.

50 YALE STUDENTS WILL FLY TO GAME

Ships From Roosevelt Field and a Ford Plane Will Be Used by Undergraduates.

SPECIAL TRAINS WILL RUN

New Haven to Have Extras From Here Starting Today—Air Service Also Augmented.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—About fifty Yale undergraduates will make the trip to the Harvard game on Saturday by airplane. The planes are coming from Roosevelt Field.

Returning, the airplane parties will leave Boston Sunday morning and reach Yale in time for morning church services.

In addition to the Roosevelt Field ships a Ford tri-motored plane has been chartered through the Air Bureau by a group of fourteen Yale students. Many of the students flew to the Yale-Georgia game in Athens, Ga., two months ago.

Extra Trains Provided Here.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21 (AP).—Arrangements for transporting fans to Saturday's Yale-Harvard football game in Cambridge have been completed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Twelve extra trains, including special sections of the Knickerbocker Limited and the Merchants Limited, tomorrow will begin bringing fans to Boston from New York. On Saturday there will be four trains from New York to Boston, including two for the exclusive use of the New York Harvard and Yale Clubs.

A special train for the Yale squad will leave here at 10:05 A. M. tomorrow, arriving at Boston at 1:45 P. M.

Special Service by Plane.

Two special sections, and probably three, the largest number ever run by Colonial Air Transport will be operated between New York and Boston tomorrow for the Harvard-Yale game. The Colonial company will send a full plane for Boston this morning and again this afternoon. Two full planes had been booked last night for tomorrow morning and reservations were being received on the third one.

Buses for the football specials tomorrow will leave at 9:30 A. M. from the Hotel Pennsylvania. The planes will arrive in Boston at 1 o'clock. On the return trip the planes will leave the Boston airport at 7 o'clock, passengers arriving by bus at the Hotel Pennsylvania at 9:45.

ARMY IN HARD DRILL POLISHES OFFENSIVE

Cagle Throws Passes and Runs Ends as Murrel Hits Line in Final Heavy Workout.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Army polished its offensive today in a lengthy workout on the Plains field. It was the final heavy work for the Cadets prior to their meeting here with Ohio Wesleyan on Saturday. Tomorrow the Soldiers will have a light signal drill.

Chris Cagle threw passes and ran the ends. John Murrel hit the line; in fact, the varsity line-up intact bore the brunt of the work, although following their retirement the entire second team went through its paces in an offensive tryout.

The team lined up as it is expected to face Ohio Wesleyan, with Carlmark and Messinger ends, Perry and Price tackles, Humber and Hillsinger guards, Lazar centre, Bowman quarterback, O'Keefe and Cagle halfbacks and Murrel fullback. Cagle, O'Keefe, Murrel, Hutchinson and Golden were in a kicking drill.

YALE MEN DISCIPLINED.

Two Disregarded Personal Use Rule for Yale-Harvard Tickets.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21 (AP).—H. F. Woodcock, general manager of the Yale Athletic Association, today announced that discipline has been applied by the association to two Yale juniors who disregarded the warning on personal use of Yale-Harvard football game tickets. The names of the students were not revealed.

Woodcock said that a student whose two tickets were found in the hands of a speculator and another who sold his for $20 had been blacklisted. Deprivation of ticket privileges, he said, will be permanent.

Judge Sentences California Football Star To Score on Stanford for Auto Violation

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 21 (AP).—If Ralston (Rusty) Gill, sophomore star of the University of California varsity football team, doesn't score a touchdown or otherwise distinguish himself in Saturday's game with Stanford, he had better steer clear of Police Judge Oliver Youngs's court.

Arrested for driving an automobile with illegal lights, Gill pleaded for probation yesterday, explaining that the pressure of his studies, combined with the strain of the coming game, kept his mind occupied with other things besides headlights. Would the judge please overlook the violation?

The judge would, but he warned the star fullback he would stand no trifling.

"You are sentenced to make as many points against Stanford as you can next Saturday," quoth Judge Youngs, a California rooter and a football fan. "I will be there, and if you don't distinguish yourself there will be another session in this court after the game."

COLD SNAP HAMPERS BIG TEN WORKOUTS

Minnesota Will Face Wisconsin Without Having Practiced Outdoors All Week.

IOWA IS SET FOR MICHIGAN

Northwestern Forced to Finish Its Practice for Notre Dame With Brief Session.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP).—Minnesota will face Wisconsin Saturday, the closing date for Western Conference football, without having practiced outdoors all week. Near-zero weather and snow kept the Gophers in the field house again today and drove squads on the other fronts off practice fields early.

Minnesota worked against Wisconsin's forward-passing attack as exemplified by the freshmen, while the Badgers spent a short time out of doors, then returned to the gymnasium for a session on Minnesota formations.

Coach Burt Ingwerson sent the Iowa squad through a short signal drill, after which the squad entrained for Ann Arbor, where Michigan will be met Saturday. Roberts, star Hawkeye guard, who was bruised up in practice yesterday, was back in the regular line-up and will start Saturday.

Michigan Men in Condition.

Coach Harry Kipke kept the Michigan squad out as long as the men could stand the biting wind in a final workout against Iowa plays. Trainer Chuck Hoyt pronounced every member of the squad in condition to play Saturday.

Indiana had a short drill on fundamentals and defense against what Purdue is expected to shoot Saturday. Purdue whisked through another fast signal drill and will depart for Bloomington tomorrow.

In spite of the cold Coach Bob Zuppke sent the Illinois squad through an extended session. A final rehearsal of plays was held, after which the Illini worked against Ohio State formations. The squad left immediately for Columbus, thirty-one men making the journey.

Weather Proves Too Much.

Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern had hoped for one more long practice in preparation for Notre Dame, but the weather was too much for the members of the squad, and the coach called it off after an hour. A short talk finished the session.

The University of Chicago squad remained on the field less than an hour, but had time to go over its full list of plays to be used against the University of Washington eleven Saturday. The Washington squad took another short workout on Soldier Field, drilling against forward passes.

PENN VARSITY GETS THREE TOUCHDOWNS

Ford Receives 2 Long Passes and Runs 60 and 35 Yards for 2 Scores Over Cubs.

GRAUPNER ALSO REGISTERS

Takes Forward and Races 40 Yards for Other Count—Scrubs Point for Columbia Jayvees.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—In the first scrimmage since the Columbia game, Pennsylvania today scored three touchdowns against the freshman team as a tune up for the clash with Cornell on Thanksgiving Day.

A year ago when the Red and Blue humbled the Ithacans, 49 to 0, most of the touchdowns were made by the aid of forward passes. On all three scoring plays today the backs took passes and scampered to the goal line.

Jerry Ford of Monaca, Pa., one of the utility halfbacks, took two long passes and ran sixty and thirty-five yards for touchdowns, while Bill Graupner, second string quarterback, sprinted forty yards for the other score.

At the start of the scrimmage Mort Wilner, Walt Masters, Dick Gentle and Charley Greene were in the varsity back field, but Head Coach Lu Young took Wilner and Masters out after a few minutes. Wilner has been troubled with a bad hip. Graupner relieved Wilner and Ford took Masters's place.

In rushing plays the Red and Blue varsity was not very effective. It was the failure of the freshman backs to cover the receivers that helped the regulars put over their scores.

Captain Perina's freshmen were not permitted to handle the ball on offense. Their young linemen stood up exceptionally well against the varsity.

SOUTHERN COLLEGES PLAN NEW CONFERENCE

Furman and Oglethorpe to Withdraw From S. I. A. A. in Move to Form Smaller Group.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 21 (AP).—A new athletic conference may sprint into being in the South before the start of another football season. Both Furman and Oglethorpe Universities have decided to withdraw from the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and there is much talk that several other universities will follow suit.

It is believed that these withdrawals are the first move in a plan to form a smaller and more compact conference of Georgia, North and South Carolina and Virginia colleges. As now constituted the S. I. A. A. is a large, unwieldy group of more than thirty small colleges, scattered over the South.

J. D. Poteat, faculty director of athletics, speaking for Furman, and Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, Oglethorpe president, say they ultimately hope to become members of a more centrally located conference.

Georgia is now represented in the S. I. A. A. by Mercer and Oglethorpe. South Carolina has Furman, Newberry, Erskine, Citadel and Presbyterian.

No schools in North Carolina or Virginia belong to the present group, but North Carolina has both Davidson and Wake Forest, now unattached, and a half dozen Virginia schools would be available for a new conference, including the University of Richmond, Lynchburg College, Roanoke College and William and Mary.

ROCKNE IS WORSE; INFECTION SPREADS

Both Legs Are Now Affected, but Coach's Condition Is Not Alarming, Doctor Says.

ABSOLUTE REST ORDERED

Notre Dame Mentor Is Likely Not to See His Team Finish Its Schedule.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 21 (AP).—The leg infection which has kept Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football coach, in a wheel chair for eight weeks has spread to both limbs, but his condition is not regarded as alarming, Dr. Robert L. Senyennich, the attending physician, said tonight.

Rockne is suffering from a thrombosis-phlebitis; the plugging of a vein by blood clots.

Because of this development the Ramblers' coach may not see his team in action again this season, for his physician has forbidden Rockne to go to Evanston, where Notre Dame meets Northwestern Saturday, and may withhold permission for him to make the trip to New York a week later to see his team meet the Army eleven. The Army game ends the Notre Dame schedule.

Dr. Senyennich said Rockne's condition was not "particularly alarming," but his patient must have absolute rest. Only a few personal friends and the assistant coaches of his team will be permitted to visit him. The physician said the trip to Chicago last Saturday, where Rockne directed his team against Southern California, had fatigued the coach considerably.

Pending the arrest of the infection, Rockne dwill not be permitted to move either leg.

Squad Also in Dummy Scrimmage for Meeting Tomorrow With New Hampshire Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 21.—A two-hour dummy scrimmage and signal drill occupied the Brown varsity today in its final preparation for the New Hampshire game Saturday. Only a light workout is scheduled for tomorrow. Coach McLaughry devoted considerable time to the point after touchdown in today's practice, mixing up drop kicks, passes and rushes.

Jack Horton worked at centre on the varsity as Schneider, regular centre, is still bothered with a hip injury, although he may play part of the game. Otherwise the varsity squad is in good shape and will be used Saturday until a safe margin is piled up by the regulars.

Preparation for the Colgate game Thanksgiving Day will start Monday with afternoon practice and a blackboard session Monday night.

COLGATE'S VARSITY TESTS FORMATIONS

Huntington and Doyle Expected to Be in Line-Up for Contest With Brown.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The training program of Colgate's varsity was limited today to an hour of formation drill.

The first ranking team practiced without two of its veteran linemen, Huntington, tackle, and Doyle, guard, both of whom were kept out by minor injuries which are expected to heal before the team lines up against Brown in the final game of the season.

Coach Kerr gave the second team more than its share of attention, grooming it in defensive measures against a picked team of scrubs schooled in Brown formations.

Both the A and B teams remained intact during most of the day. Lockwood, veteran guard, who has been with the second team during most of the season, was advanced to the first team to fill Doyle's place.

SNOW-FALL TINGES SCENE AT HARVARD

Squad Practices in Baseball Cage as Canvas Is Placed Over Playing Field.

FIELD GOAL WORK GOOD

Team Fit for Yale Game Tomorrow —Ticket Supply Long Exhausted for Fray.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—With a setting more in keeping with Christmas Eve than a day or two before the Yale-Harvard football game, the players of Harvard emerged from the baseball cage into the early Winter darkness on their way to the locker room this afternoon after the last workout they will have alone this year.

All over the big stretch of playing fields, and festooning the high, extra steel stands at the end of the Stadium was a blanket of white snow with the evening air cool enough to threaten keeping it there for a day or so.

But the playing surface itself, the section of the gridiron between the two goal posts, presented a black oblong of canvas, swept clear by a small army of shovelers who spent the afternoon after the morning storm carting away the snow and piling it up at the ends of the field. The canvas covering, lifted up here and there, showed the field still to be in good condition and it will remain a protective covering with an assurance that the players of Yale and Harvard will have good footing for their play unless rain or more snow arrives to mar things on Saturday.

Weather Main Theme.

The weather today provided more conversation than even the approaching game, though Cambridge and Boston are both apparently taking on the first touches of a big weekend. From before dawn until afternoon a steady, wet snow fell and left a layer of at least an inch on the ground.

The storm precluded all thought of a final outdoor workout for the Harvard team, and Arnold Horween, rounding out his fourth year as head coach here, took his men into the spacious baseball cage for an hour or two of work.

Practice started with field goal kicking by most of the backs under the eyes of Vic Kennard, whose drop kick of 1908 won for Harvard over Yale. A set of wobbly posts had been erected at one end of the baseball cage and the men took turns shooting at it.

Field Goal Drill Stressed.

The field goal has been an important factor in Harvard-Yale games almost from their inception. There have been at least a half dozen of these games decided by field goals. In some games there were two or more drop kicks. The Harvard backs, particularly Wood and Devens, had a good deal of success this afternoon.

Then the backs, with a centre, ran through running plays, with the lateral pass coming in for some attention, while the linemen, Duke Dunn kneeling in the dirt of the cage with his charges, worked for fifteen minutes or more on fundamentals.

There was a bit of punting and some signal work and then the afternoon was ended.

Tomorrow, Harvard will share things with Yale, for the Yale squad is due in town at about 2 o'clock and will go to Cambridge for a final workout there with all newspapermen and photographers barred, on a special order coming from New Haven. Apparently the mystery of Albie Booth is to remain unsolved until game time.

Harvard Men Are Fit.

Harvard announced today that, with the exception of Potter, who is on crutches, all of the men are in shape for the game. Wally Harper, the very good defensive back, is ready for action. The coaches could have used him last week, but decided not to take another chance with him. Harper is an important member of Harvard's team who was missed through the bulk of the season because of injuries.

There was one solemn little ceremony during the afternoon when eleven men donned sweaters and went out of the cage to the better light of outdoors so that Boston photographers could photograph the starting team. These eleven, with one exception, will start, according to present plans.

The exception was Dick O'Connell, the left end, who stayed away from practice because he was not feeling well. He will be in shape and ready, however, for the game. His place in the official starting picture was taken by Vic Harding, the end who caught the famous last-minute tying pass in the Army game and who is bound to play a good deal of the game against Yale.

Other End Is Douglas.

With O'Connell will be Douglas as a starting end. The tackles are Captain Red Barrett and Bill Tickner; the guards, Trainer and Talbot, who won his place in the Michigan game, and the centre, Ben Tickner. The starting back field is named as Wood, quarterback, with Putnam and Harper as halves and Devens at fullback.

The men looked well today. There was no sign of staleness and all of them were apparently ready for good, hard football. There was plenty of spirit in evidence in the squad and they ran through their work on their toes.

There is more interest apparent in this Harvard-Yale game than in any of recent years. The ticket supply was exhausted weeks ago and the new stands, seating an additional 20,000, make it certain that the largest crowd ever to see Yale and Harvard meet on this field will be on hand Saturday.

Hotels Are Swamped.

The hotel situation is worse than any Boston has seen in years. The manager of one leading hotel said today that he had turned down nearly 500 applications for reservations and most of the hotels have been booked solid for two weeks and more. Harvard and Yale followers are spending one of the greatest games these two have turned in in their history, and they are not missing the chance of seeing it.

The weather this afternoon, while still wintry and cold, had cleared overhead, and there was the promise of fair skies for Saturday. It seems certain, however, that both teams will meet under colder conditions than either has encountered this season.

Fordham Holds Hard Drill for Bucknell Game—N. Y. U. Has a Scrimmage

INTENSIVE DRILL HELD BY FORDHAM

BARTOS CALLS SIGNALS

Also Shows to Advantage in Punting—Boosters Use Surprise Kick in Workout.

Coach Frank Cavanaugh of the unbeaten Fordham eleven sent his charges through an extra long practice session at Fordham field yesterday, in preparation for the Maroon's final contest of the year against the Bucknell team at the Polo Grounds tomorrow. The Maroon mentor did not permit his men to leave the field until after darkness had fallen.

That Cavanaugh is taking every possible angle of the game into consideration was evidenced by the workout, in which Frank Bartos was put at quarterback on the varsity eleven and employed in throwing passes to Murphy, Kloppenburg and Elcewicz. Fisher, the regular Fordham signal caller, might not be able to stand up under the battering that is expected in the Bucknell struggle because of his slender build and light weight, and in that event Cavanaugh wants to have Bartos ready to send into the game.

Bartos threw the ball with speed and accuracy in the drill, besides showing to advantage in the punting session, together with Walter Tracey and Fisher. The Maroon coach continued to have his booters practice the surprise kick and it will in all likelihood be used against the Bucknell eleven.

Howard Beloin, line coach, spent a half-hour in drilling the members of the Maroon forward wall in the best methods of charging in on an opposing kicker. The Bisons boast a competent placement kicker in Eller, a 225-pound guard, and Cavanaugh does not want to take any chances of losing the final game on a placement kick.

Foley and Cannella, the giant Fordham tackles, were the outstanding linemen in breaking up enemy kicking formations as put on by the freshmen. In the dummy scrimmage against the Bucknell passing formations, Captain Siano again was the chief factor in detecting the formations and breaking them up.

The Bucknell squad is scheduled to arrive here this afternoon, and will make its headquarters at the Hotel Astor. The visiting eleven will then hold a workout at the Polo Grounds.

BUCKNELL FINISHES DRILL FOR FORDHAM

Trick Plays and Air Attack Take Up Major Part of the Practice Session.

Special to The New York Times.

LEWISBURG, Pa., Nov. 21.—Preparation for Bucknell's invasion of New York was completed today with a long signal drill and a short dummy scrimmage. Only a limbering up program is scheduled for the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

Bucknell deviated from its usual policy of straight football and spent much of the session in polishing up trick plays. Considerable time also was devoted to a passing attack.

The dummy scrimmage was devoted to covering supposed Fordham passes, with Slate, Fry and Eller intercepting many of them.

Only two teams, W. and J. and Penn State, have crossed Bucknell's goal line and State did it on a pass against a combination of second and third stringers. It is on that second string, however, that Coaches Snavely and Reed are depending on Saturday.

PINKNEY AT HALFBACK IN LEHIGH PRACTICE

Line Plunging Impresses as Team Prepares for Lafayette Game —Davidowitz Calls Signals.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 21.—Having concluded the heavy work, complete relaxation is now prescribed for the Lehigh football team by Coach Tate, as the final preparation for the historic classic against Lafayette here on Saturday. A signal drill lasted only thirty minutes.

Only one change was made in the varsity. Ollie Pinkney replaced Allan Ware at halfback in the closing minutes. The coaches are impressed by Pinkney's line plunging ability, and if Lehigh should decide to resort to this style of game at the start, Pinkney will be the choice for the back field.

Art Davidowitz, who will be playing the last college game of his career, called signals from the quarterback post with Tom Nora at halfback and Jimmy Fritts at fullback. The line had Phil Elkin and Bob Many, ends; Miller and Myers, tackles; Belcher and Blackmar, guards, and Joe McLernon, centre.

SHERWOOD IN FINAL GAME.

Lafayette Captain to Play Last Contest Against Lehigh.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—Captain William Sherwood, Konrad Bobinski and Rudolph Rothenberg, who will be in the starting line-up when Lafayette meets Lehigh in the sixty-third annual contest, will play their last game for the Maroon Saturday. They are seniors and will be graduated in June.

The varsity and second team spent the afternoon perfecting a defense against an aerial attack. The third team, equipped with Lehigh plays, hurled forward passes which the other two teams attempted to bat down or intercept.

PENN STATE IN SCRIMMAGE

Varsity Backs Oppose First-String Line in Drill for Pitt.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 21.—Long runs by Diedrich and Frederick featured the scrimmage of Penn State's football team today as the Lions prepared for the Pitt game on Thanksgiving Day.

The session began with the varsity back field opposing the first-string line. The Nittany backs, although they did not score, were able to gain consistently.

Ambassador Morrow Greets Mississippi, Mexico Elevens

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21 (AP).—Farewell functions to the Mississippi College football team were concluded this afternoon when Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow gave a reception for the visitors and their foes of yesterday, the University of Mexico team. The reception was held at the embassy. Early this morning the Mississippi players went to see the pyramids near Mexico City. The American team will leave for Jackson, Miss., tomorrow.

COLUMBIA OCCUPIED BY DEFENSIVE PLAYS

Jayvees Put on Syracuse Attack in Dummy Scrimmage With First-String Team.

EDLING AND HALL ACTIVE

Emphasis Placed on Fundamentals in Attempt to Improve Tackling, Blocking and Ball Carrying.

The Columbia football squad began shaping its offense and defense yesterday at Baker Field in preparation for its annual game with Syracuse here Thanksgiving Day. It was the first heavy workout for the Blue and White since its contest with Pennsylvania, and from all indications Coach Crowley will keep his players stepping fast for the remainder of the training period.

Dummy scrimmage between the junior varsity eleven and the varsity occupied the players. The jayvees put on Syracuse plays, which they have been practicing all week, but because of the injuries which are still prevalent among the varsity men Crowley ordered no contact playing. Mike Sesit's team walked through the formations and there were frequent time-outs, while the coaches drilled the varsity in assignments on defense.

The scrimmage was supplemented by a blackboard lecture, in which the coaches plotted and diagrammed the Syracuse attack, both running and passing. It is probable that Crowley will continue to smooth his defense again today.

Edling and Hall, sophomore end and fullback, respectively, worked out again yesterday in an attempt to regain their stride after being kept on the side lines because of injuries. There is a possibility that by next week Hall and Edling may be in condition to participate in the heavy workouts and ready to play against the up-staters.

Continued emphasis was placed on fundamentals, as Crowley and his assistants are anxious to improve the tackling, blocking, interference and ball-carrying. Crowley is determined that his team shall show a mastery of the rudiments of football in the Thanksgiving Day game and already considerable improvement in this respect is evident.

CORNELL SQUAD DRIVES FOR GAME WITH PENN

Ithacans Work on Passing and Kicking—Scrimmage Completes Long Session.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The length and intensity of the daily workouts for the Cornell football squad were increased today, as only four more practices will be held before the squad entrains for Philadelphia and the annual Thanksgiving Day game with Pennsylvania on Franklin Field. Hope here is high that Cornell may be able to crash through with its first victory in several years over Penn, but the football squad is tending strictly to business.

After a drill on fundamentals, in which charging for the linemen played a big part, the backs and ends went through a kicking and passing drill. Stevens and Hoffman got off punts, while the ends went down to get the backs who received the kicks. In the passing drill Stevens and Johnson alternated in passing to the backs and ends in a dummy drill against the scrubs.

The session, most of it under floodlights, terminated with a scrimmage. Used on the first team today were Lueder, left end; Martinen, left tackle; Tullar and Hankstaff, left guards; Wallace and Riekert, centres; Hunt, right guard; Wakeman, right tackle; Alexander and Clagett, right ends; Howard I. Johnson, quarterback; Stevens, Hoffman, Kanich and Handleman, halfbacks, and Scott, fullback.

FLORIDA IS PUZZLED BY S. CAROLINA SHIFTS

ATLANTA, Nov. 21 (AP).—The puzzling "crazy quilt" formation which made Billy Laval, coach of the South Carolina eleven, famous is causing trouble at Gainesville, where the Florida Alligators are trying to get ready for their clash with South Carolina at Columbia on Saturday.

Coach Bachman and his 'Gators will entrain for the north tonight with little progress made against the baffling Laval shifts. The South Carolina-Florida clash is the only conference game on the week-end program, most of the elevens being in the midst of preparations for Thanksgiving Day battles.

From Blacksburg, Va., where Virginia Poly is getting ready for its annual battle with Virginia Military, come news of distressing nature for Gobbler supporters. Dexter Hubbard, around whom the Virginia Poly forward wall is built, fractured a rib in the Maryland game last week and will not be available for duty against the Lexington cadets.

Coach Mehre of Georgia has been giving his Bulldogs rehearsals in passing all week and is trying to work out a defense for Tony Holm and his Alabama running-mates. Both Tennessee and Kentucky, which meet at Lexington in one of the holiday feature clashes, are reported in good shape, while Coach Bierman thinks he will be able to send his full Tulane strength against Louisiana State at New Orleans.

DARTMOUTH TRIES NEW PASSING PLAYS

Squad Goes Through Long, Hard Practice on Slippery, Snow-Covered Field.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 21.—The Dartmouth eleven practiced today on a slippery, snow-covered field. A long, hard session of practice was completed and for the second day forward passing held the attention of the squad.

Mid-semester examinations caused heavy losses in the squad, especially in the number of quarterbacks. Bill McCall was shifted temporarily to quarterback of the second team. In this position he threw many of the passes, but as both the field and the ball were slippery from snow, the ends ran down the field in vain many times.

Morton was back piloting the first team and Jeremiah, who saved the game for Dartmouth last week, was put in McCall's place. Much of the afternoon was spent on new passing plays to be used against the Navy.

Coach Cannell announced that the men would receive a holiday Saturday and next week would be devoted almost entirely to defense work.

SYRACUSE ELEVEN AGAIN SCRIMMAGES

Coaches Striving to Get Their Strongest Back Field for Game With Columbia.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 21.—For the second time this week the Syracuse University football squad was sent through a scrimmage today. The Orange coaches are making a determined effort to find its strongest back field combination for its annual game with Columbia in New York on Thanksgiving Day.

To date Syracuse's chief fault has been in the weakness of its backs against forward passes.

Syracuse's line is definitely decided upon. It will include three sophomores, Stoneberg and Ellert at ends, and Newton tackle. The other positions will be filled by Oakes, Vanneas, Berner and Kanys.

The back field is the only problem. Two New Jersey boys, Barton and Bibo of South Orange, and Garfield seem to have their posts clinched. Henry Franks is competing with Titmes and Manning for quarterback honors, while Stevens, Constantine, Henward and Granner also are fighting for recognition. The squad will leave Syracuse on Tuesday and will be quartered in a hotel at Bronxville.

KANSAS AGGIES BAR TO NEBRASKA TITLE

Huskers Must Eliminate Them Tomorrow to Win Second Straight Big Six Crown.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 21 (AP).—A Big Six football title may be decided here Saturday when Nebraska plays the Kansas Aggies, but because the Aggies were a dark horse championship candidate the title game will have to battle for popularity with another game a hundred miles away.

The Huskers, with one victory and two defeats, are on the verge of their second consecutive championship, the Aggies, with a record of three victories and one upset, being the drawback to their aspirations. Nebraska, however, must eliminate the Aggies to gain undisputed title.

Scheduling of the traditional Kansas-Missouri game at Lawrence on the same day will curtail the Aggie-Nebraska attendance, and authorities do not expect to fill the Manhattan Stadium, which will seat 16,500. More than 20,000 are expected at Lawrence.

Little expectation of a title game here when fans were purchasing tickets early in the season caused many to buy Kansas-Missouri tickets in preference to those of the Aggie-Nebraska tilt.

Robertson Rates Seven Teams Equal for Cross-Country Title

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21 (AP).—Lawson Robertson, coach of the Penn runners, thinks six teams besides his own have an even chance of winning the Eastern intercollegiate cross-country championship at New York Monday. They are Penn State, Syracuse, Maine, Michigan State, N. Y. U. and Cornell. Penn State hopes to make it four in a row.

Robertson named Paul Rekers, Penn State; Walter Dean, Syracuse; Harry Richardson, Maine; Nat Lerner, N. Y. U.; Joe Hagen, Columbia; Sam Levering, Cornell, and Dan Dean, Pennsylvania, as individual favorites.

NAVY SPENDS TIME ON COVERING PUNTS

Linemen Drilled Hard to Improve This Department of Their Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 21.—A large part of the practice period at the Naval Academy this afternoon was devoted to covering punts, a department of the game in which the Navy team has been below par this season.

Bowstrom, Bagberg and Spring did the punting to the Squad 2 backs, while the ends and other linemen were sent down the field under the ball. Beans, Byng and Morse were the older ends who were used, and much attention was also given to Steffanides and Lawrence Smith, who developed considerably this season and who will be available again next year.

Neither Bowstrom, left tackle, or Spring, the Navy's hardest working back this season, with the possible exception of Joe Clifton, will start against West Virginia Wesleyan on Saturday, though they may be used part of the game.

Ingram believes that a comparative rest will do them good and make them more effective against Dartmouth a week later.

TEMPLE AND DRAKE TO MEET NEXT YEAR

Arrangements for Renewal Completed on Eve of First Game Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 21.—On the eve of Temple's first intersectional football game with Drake University, another meeting between teams of the two institutions to be played here next Fall on the Saturday following Thanksgiving Day has been arranged. Temple is also considering a game with Drake at Des Moines, Iowa, in 1931.

Temple's varsity players, after being the guests of honor at a celebration at the Penn A. C. today, wound up their work for the game here Saturday. Major Harry A. Mackey, former Lafayette and Pennsylvania star lineman, congratulated members of the team on their 13-0 victory over Lafayette last week.

The Drake team, headed by Coach Ossie Solem, will arrive here tomorrow morning and take up headquarters at the Manufacturers' Country Club, near Oreland, Pa. Twenty-five players are on their way East.

MARGOLIES WILL PLAY.

Will Be in St. John's Back Field in St. Thomas Game.

Abe Margolies will play at left halfback and four substitutes will play in places of regulars tomorrow when St. John's meets St. Thomas at Dexter Park, Brooklyn. Head Coach Ray Lynch of St. John's announced yesterday after the squad had gone through a lively dummy scrimmage at Dexter Park.

Manning, who started the season, will be at left end and Joe Carpineto will get his first chance at left tackle. Ray Halleran has replaced the veteran Tom Neary at centre and Bob Sheppard has replaced the regular Harry Meyers at quarterback position.

EAST-WEST RIVALS STILL TO BE NAMED

University of California Favored as One, Pending Stanford Game Tomorrow.

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 21 (AP).—While those who have the say-so mark time awaiting the outcome of Saturday's important gridiron battles, the unofficial selection of the Eastern and Western candidates for the annual Tournament of Roses classic here New Year's Day goes on apace.

Prevailing opinion marks the Golden Bears of the University of California as the most probable choice among Western elevens, but only the outcome of the "big game" with Stanford this week-end can definitely answer the question of whether Coach Nibs Price's aggregation will be in a receptive mood for such an invitation.

The Eastern selection depends much on the naming of the Western candidate, since the Pacific Coast institution chosen to defend the football laurels of the West will pick its own Eastern opponent.

Notre Dame and Pitt Ahead.

By the process of elimination, the possibilities in the Eastern section should also be well defined soon. Notre Dame and Pittsburgh have been the most prominently mentioned Eastern elevens thus far.

Only a beating at the hands of Coach Pop Warner's Cardinals, according to those close to the situation, could eliminate the Bears, who have yet to be defeated. St. Mary's College, with its goal line uncrossed this year, patiently awaits such a chance, ready to jump at an offer to appear here Jan. 1.

Of the Eastern aggregations, it is believed that California favors Coach Knute Rockne's Hoosiers, but there are two good-sized hurdles in the path of the Ramblers in Northwestern and the Army. The question also crops out as to whether the South Bend (Ind.) mentor will be in the proper physical condition to stand the additional month of stress a Western jaunt would place upon him.

Others Are Named.

Only Penn State stands between Pittsburgh and a clean slate, which would place the Yellow Jackets in a position to receive overtures from the Western selection. Tulane, Purdue and Southern Methodist also have been mentioned, although it is understood that Tulane and Southern Methodist are interested in a possible December appearance against St. Mary's.

C. Hal Reynolds, president of the Tournament of Roses committee, stated definitely that no official invitation had been extended thus far, but that the situation should be cleared up before the middle of next week.

COACH McEWAN TO QUIT.

EUGENE, Ore., Nov. 21 (AP).—John J. McEwan, football coach at the University of Oregon, announced today that at the expiration of his contract his services at the university will be completed. His contract expires at the end of the 1930 season.

The announcement was made in written form and handed to Eugene newspapers.

Rival Captains Hold Jobs In Same Mine on Vacation

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Universities of Washington and Chicago football teams have not met before, and the rival captains, Paul Jessup of the Huskies and Pat Kelly of Chicago, come from different parts of the country, but Saturday's game at Stagg Field will not be their first meeting. Jessup, who lives in Bellingham, Wash., and Kelly, a Chicago youth, conditioned themselves for football last Summer "muscling" in the same lead-silver mine at Mullen, Idaho.

RUTGERS'S PASSES GAIN MUCH GROUND

Aerials Thrown by Grossman Put Scrubs to Rout as Drive for N. Y. U. Eases Off.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 21.—Stager, Jerry Cronin and Horton are fighting hard for the halfback berths on the Rutgers varsity eleven. Although no one seems to hold an advantage, Stager has shown great improvement in the past two weeks.

Milt Anderson played a good game at guard today and may displace his younger brother, Claremont, at that post by the time the Scarlet faces N. Y. U. Saturday at the Yankee Stadium. Harris and Karakas alternated at left guard.

The drive for the game eased off today as Coach Rockafeller desires to place a fresh team on the field against the Violet. Today's offensive and defensive drills took on the form of dummy scrimmage and were shorter in length than the previous sessions.

With the second team on the defensive the varsity romped across the goal line several times. Grossman passed to practically all the eligible men with decided success, most of the receivers making long gains. Grossman also practiced punting, with the remainder of the team going down under the ball. Most of the time Captain Bernie Crowl, centre, led the team down the field.

The Jayvees were unable to make any headway against the varsity. They used N. Y. U. plays. Greenberg called signals again for the varsity, indicating that he will fill that post Saturday.

All the players are confident of victory and the spirit on the campus is one of great optimism, as the team, potentially strong all season, seems to have hit its winning stride.

N. Y. U. SCRIMMAGES FOR RUTGERS GAME

Frequent Substitutions Give No Indication of Line-Up for Tomorrow's Fray.

HORMEL HAS ACTIVE DAY.

Midget Back Performs Well With Long Runs—Myers May Return to Line.

Coach Chick Meehan sent the New York University varsity football team through a thorough two hours' drill yesterday at the Yankee Stadium, where final preparations were made for tomorrow's game with Rutgers. The workout was the Violet eleven's last vigorous one of the season, which terminates on Thanksgiving Day when N. Y. U. meets Carnegie Tech. Only a light practice session is scheduled for today.

Yesterday's workout was featured by a dummy scrimmage in which Meehan stressed the Violet's running attack. A rehearsal of formations which N. Y. U. will use against the Scarlet team and a kicking, passing and signal drill completed the practice.

Uses Four Teams in Drill.

Four teams were used in the signal drill, which went off smoothly. Captain Len Grant, Al Gaudet and Beryl Follet again practiced punting and later took a hand in throwing passes to Nemecek, La Mark and Chalmers.

Dudley Hormel, midget Violet back, who has been used sparingly by Coach Meehan since the early season games, came into his own in the scrimmage against the reserves. Meehan used him as the key man on the varsity attack, and Hormel seemed to have little trouble in eluding the scrubs, breaking away several times for long runs which were terminated only after he had successfully swept into the clear on wide end runs beyond the reach of the reserves.

No indication as to the line-up he will use against Rutgers Saturday was afforded yesterday by Coach Meehan, who substituted freely during the workout. Dave Myers, injured back field star, reported and took part in scrimmage for the first time in more than two weeks.

Myers Eased for Line.

Although he was in the back field most of the time yesterday, it is thought that Meehan will use him in the line again rather than break up the Ta Mark-Roland Follet-Gaudet combination, which has Bella and Hormel as reserves.

The line which received the major share of the Violet coaches' attention consisted of Memecek and Chalmers, ends; Captain Grant and Concannon, tackles; R. Grant and Sargisson, guards, and Schneider, centre. If Myers is used in the line he will replace R. Grant, Hormel would supplant Roland, and if available for back field duty will be used for Gaudet at quarterback. Hormel would supplant Roland.

Port Richmond Star Sprints in Last 100 Yards to Overhaul Nicholson —Lee Finishes Next.

Aaron Patterson of Port Richmond High School won the first annual Richmond Borough interscholastic cross-country championship yesterday afternoon at Silver Lake Park, Staten Island, before 1,000 spectators.

Curtis High School gained the team trophy, scoring twenty points, by taking second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth places. The victorious team was the same one that last Saturday won the P. S. A. L. championship at Van Cortlandt Park.

The winner of the race was not decided until the last thirty yards, when Patterson, by a great burst of speed, passed John Nicholson, captain of the Curtis harriers, and a favorite in the run.

Andrews Runs Fourth.

Albert Lee finished third, a few yards before Adrian Andrews, who was closely followed by James Walsh. In sixth place was Rudolph Pilling.

At the start, Patterson sprinted and soon enjoyed a lead of ten yards. He held this advantage for the first half mile. Then Lee drew even with the Port Richmond boy and the pair set a fast pace until the Forest Avenue turn was reached.

After rounding the turn Nicholson drew up within a yard of the leaders and for the remainder of the first circuit they remained in this position. In going over the hill on the start of the second lap, Lee went into the lead, and a short time thereafter Nicholson spurted past Patterson, and Walsh and Anderson crept up close to the Port Richmond star.

Gains Ten-Yard Lead.

Nicholson went into the lead and was ten yards to the good as he headed for the farthest turn of the course. Patterson began to come again and was soon abreast of Lee, who at this point was ten yards behind his captain.

After making the last turn it seemed as though Nicholson had captured first place, but Patterson uncorked a terrific sprint in the last hundred yards and thirty yards from the tape passed the Curtis youth to hit the tape two seconds before Nicholson.

The order of finish:

EVANDER CHILDS TIED, 2-2.

Held Even by Roosevelt in Final Manhattan-Bronx Soccer Game.

The Evander Childs High School and Theodore Roosevelt High soccer teams battled to a 2-to-2 tie at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday in the final Public Schools Athletic League game of the season in the Manhattan-Bronx division. Evander led at half time, 1 to 0.

Sholom made both of Evander's goals and Max Axelrod tallied twice for Roosevelt. The latter team had previously lost seven games and yesterday's deadlock gave Roosevelt one point in the final standing.

The final Manhattan-Bronx standing:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	Pts.
James Monroe	7	0	2	16
Morris	6	1	2	14
Stuyvesant	5	1	2	12

George Washington	3	5	0	6
Evander Childs	1	4	3	5
Townsend Harris	1	4	3	5
Theodore Roosevelt	1	7	1	1

MONROE FIVE WINS, 24-22.

Trails Evander Childs, 14-4, at the Half, but Rallies to Triumph.

The James Monroe High School basketball team defeated Evander Childs, 24 to 22, in a P. S. A. L. game on the Monroe court yesterday. Evander Childs led at half time, 14 to 4, but the victors went on a scoring spree in the second half with Ganelen starring.

TENNESSEE SEEKS GAMES.

Wants to Engage Eastern Elevens—Writes to Fifteen Colleges.

Special to The New York Times.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 21.—Professor W. W. Dougherty of the University of Tennessee athletic counsel, has written to about fifteen Eastern universities asking for intersectional games with Tennessee.

The universities with whom games are sought include Yale, Harvard, Princeton and "all the rest of them," Dougherty said. No game with Princeton can be arranged for two years, it was learned.

START OF RICHMOND INTERSCHOLASTIC TITLE RUN AT SILVER LAKE PARK YESTERDAY.

HORACE MANN TEAM ENDS SEASON TODAY

To Meet McBurney Eleven in Feature Game on Met. Schoolboy Program.

FINAL TEST FOR RYE ALSO

East Chester to Furnish Opposition —Bellevue to Face Orange in New Jersey—Other Notes.

Several scholastic football teams will close their seasons with the playing of the few games that are on today's card. Less than ten important clashes are slated for this afternoon. Many more elevens will finish tomorrow and still others will wait until Thanksgiving Day, on which several traditional battles are to be contested.

The feature local attraction on today's program is the McBurney-Horace Mann game to be played at Horace Mann field, starting at 2:30 o'clock. It will be the final contest for Horace Mann, which last week surprised by holding the strong Peekskill Military Academy team to a scoreless tie. Peekskill had previously handed Curtis High of Staten Island its only setback.

Another game in the near vicinity will bring together Storm King and Riverdale on the latter's field. The contest was originally booked for last Wednesday and scheduled to be played at Storm King, but the plans were changed.

Rye High School will wind up its campaign against East Chester High on the latter's field at Tuckahoe. Bronxville will play at Scarsdale and in another up-State contest, the Morristown School eleven of Morristown, N. J., is slated to meet Heckley School at Tarrytown.

One of the feature New Jersey schoolboy games is the Belleville-Orange clash, which will take place at Orange. In another important contest, Carteret High School, which upset both Cranford and Perth Amboy in the last two weeks, will tackle North Plainfield High at Carteret. Medwick, Carteret quarterback, is one of the high scorers in the New Jersey scholastic ranks and is expected to increase his total.

Madison Is Undefeated.

Both the principals in the James Madison-New Rochelle game scheduled for Ebbets Field a week from tomorrow, will engage in championship battles tomorrow. Madison will meet Manual at Ebbets Field and a victory will give the undefeated and untied Madison eleven the Brooklyn championship. New Rochelle will oppose its traditional enemy, Mount Vernon, in a game for the Westchester Interscholastic A. A. title.

Seton Hall Prep of South Orange, coached by Heinie Benkert, former Rutgers University back-field star, is looking for a victory over St. Benedict's when the two meet in their annual game at Newark on Thanksgiving. The series started in 1924 and Seton Hall has won only once. However, the South Orange school has a powerful eleven this season and is regarded as a hardy opponent by St Benedict's.

Although St. John's High and Brooklyn Prep first met in 1914, St. John's has never conquered its chief Brooklyn rival. One of the nine games played resulted in a tie. St. John's has been defeated by only James Madison this season and expects to vanquish Brooklyn Prep in their battle for the Brooklyn Catholic High School championship at Ebbets Field, Thanksgiving morning.

Soccer Semi-Final Tomorrow.

James Monroe High School's soccer team, which defeated Morris High in the play-off for the P. S. A. L. championship in the Manhattan-Bronx division, will continue its quest for the city title, meeting Thomas Jefferson of Brooklyn at Starlight Park tomorrow morning. The winner will meet Alexander Hamilton High of Brooklyn next week for the championship. Hamilton drew a bye for the semi-finals.

John E. Quinn, who ran at Fordham University and who was track coach at Fordham Prep two years ago, has resumed his coaching duties at Fordham Prep and is also a member of the faculty.

La Salle Academy has only two veterans from last year's basketball team available, but expects a well-balanced quintet. Captain Richard Corrigan and James Spillane, both guards, are the veterans. The most promising candidates include John Flaherty, John Donohue, James McNally, John Wukowitz, W. Donahue and M. Harrington.

Has Two Basketball Veterans.

Like La Salle, Manhattan Prep also has two veterans on hand. Captain Maurice O'Brien, centre and forward, and William Madigan, forward. Reserves from last year include W. Reilly, forward; A. Corbett, guard, and J. Bolog, guard and forward. The quintet has been practicing for a month and has aspirations for the C. H. S. A. L. title.

Ernest J. Autch is coaching the St. Nicholas of Tolentine High School basketball team, which will make its début this season. The school has been in existence for two years. Captain Henry Spielman and Fred Eichler, forwards; Tom Dwyer, centre, and Al Breuel and Dick Boland, guards, comprise the varsity quintet.

The athletic director, the Rev. B. J. Zeiser, has scheduled games with Our Lady of Solace, St. Cecelia's, St. Michael's, Fordham Prep, Oratory and Augustinian Academy.

CUB BOATINGS CHOSEN FOR PRINCETON RACES

Four Crews Selected for Final Contests Today—Winners Will Receive Medals.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Four boatings were chosen today to take part in the final freshman crew races to be held tomorrow over Lake Carnegie at Princeton University. Medals will be given to the winners by the University Intracollegiate Athletic Association.

The regatta will be run on a handicap basis. Coach Logg has been working with the yearling men and has developed three strong cub crews this fall. He will close activities for the 1933 sweep swingers with the running-off of tomorrow's regatta.

The qualifying boatings:

First—Bow, Watts; 2, P. Smith; 3, Rote; 4, Brower; 5, Marston; 6, Tentcher; 7, Van Lenep; stroke, Sieminski; coxswain, T. Brush.

Second—Bow, Dayton; 2, Williams; 3, D. Smith; 4, Campbell; 5, Spear; 6, Pell; 7, Pflaumer; stroke, Straus; coxswain, Kennedy.

Fourth—Bow, Johnson; 2, Ballantine; 3, Metcalf; 4, Kapes; 5, Richardson; 6, Gray; 7, Wainwright; stroke, Lafean; coxswain, A. Smith.

BASKETBALL SQUAD AT C. C. N. Y. REDUCED

15 Players Survive Final Cut Before Opener With St. Francis on Nov. 30.

Making the final cut in the squad before the opening game with St. Francis College on Nov. 30, Nat Holman, coach of the City College basketball team, yesterday reduced the squad to fifteen players.

On the first team, Coach Holman has Captain Louis Spindell and Philip Weissman at the guard positions; Frank De Phillips at centre, and Milton Trupin and Arthur Musicant at the forward posts.

On this first string combination all are veteran regulars with the exception of Weissman, who was a substitute last year. He played in enough games with the varsity, though, to win his letter.

The second team is made up of five former substitutes. They are Tom Clancey and Harold Gold, forwards; Ben Puleo, centre, and Monty Pask and Charlie Hoffman, guards. Puleo, a football letter man, started work yesterday with the court squad and was immediately assigned to a second team post.

The third team includes Morris Liebman and Dave Halperin, two former freshmen players, and Morty Goldman, Sidney Gurtzman and Joe Zausner, all newcomers.

NEW LOTS HIGH FIVE WINS.

SCHULER WINS TWICE IN 3-CUSHION TOURNEY

Beats De Oro, 50-49, in 72 Innings and Seaback, 50-47, in 71 Frames—Riley Loses.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Harry Schuler of Brooklyn triumphed twice today to make it four straight in the Eastern sectional three-cushion billiard tourney, disposing of Alfredo De Oro of New York, 50 to 49 in seventy-three innings, and Charles Seaback of New York, 50 to 47, in seventy-one innings.

Schuler's double victory enabled him to take the lead in the tournament, the winner of which will compete in the world's title matches later. Schuler's contest with De Oro required 2 hours and 35 minutes. Each had a high run of five.

Walter Riley of Philadelphia was beaten, 50 to 24, in sixty-three innings by Earl Dahl of Buffalo. Riley will meet Schuler in a match to decide the Eastern qualifier tomorrow night. He also is carded for another contest in the afternoon.

Riley, in his setback, was far from the form shown in other matches and his best cluster of points was two. Dahl had only three for his high runs but managed to score more frequently and more than doubled the count on the Philadelphian.

Dahl completed his play in the tournament with a record of three victories and two defeats when he defeated another Buffalo player, Pete Daly, 50 to 27, in eighty-two innings. Daly failed to count in fifteen straight innings. Each had a high run of 5, while Dahl twice hit this total.

Seaback finally broke into the winning column in the evening when he defeated Pete Daly of Buffalo, 50-49, in seventy-seven innings. Daly had a high run of five.

The match between Schuler and Riley tomorrow night will decide the championship.

HUN SCHOOL GAME DELAYED

Annual Contest With Massanutten Postponed Because of Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Hun Prep School's annual football tussle with Massanutten Academy, four-year champions of Virginia, scheduled at Princeton for Saturday, has been postponed until next Tuesday because of the fire which razed the Hun School athletic headquarters on Wednesday. All of Hun's football equipment was lost and the postponement is to permit arrival of new supplies.

Both Hun and Massanutten have been undefeated so far this season and much interest centres in this intersectional tilt.

Matsuyama Triumphs Twice.

Kinrey Matsuyama turned in a double victory in exhibition matches at 18.2 balkline billiards at Lawler Brothers' Manhattan Academy yesterday. Matsuyama defeated Cyril Sloane, 250 to 63, in ten innings, and Nelson B. Mayo, 250 to 107, in thirteen innings.

Johnson Wins Cue Tourney.

Samuel C. Johnson won the handicap three-cushion tournament at the Amateur Billiard Club last night. Elvin F. Edwards was second and Gordon L. Edwards third.

Conn. Aggies in Soccer Tie.

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 21 (AP).—The Massachusetts Aggies and the Connecticut Aggies played a 2 to 2 soccer tie today. Two over-time periods failed to break the deadlock.

20 P. S. A. L. FIVES SEE ACTION TODAY

Textile to Play Haaren, Seward to Face Washington and Morris Will Meet Clinton.

MANY GAMES IN BROOKLYN

Manual-Hamilton, Boys High-New Utrecht and Lane-Erasmus Hall Among Contests on the Card.

Ten P. S. A. L. basketball games will be played today within the four divisions of the city's high school teams. One contest, the Commerce-Stuyvesant meeting, will take place tomorrow morning in the Stuyvesant gymnasium, and another, the Evander Childs-James Monroe game, also originally scheduled for today, was played yesterday and resulted in a 24-to-22 victory for James Monroe. The Theodore Roosevelt team in the Bronx and the James Madison quintet in Brooklyn drew byes for today.

Four Manhattan teams will see action today, Textile, which leads in the division standing with three victories and no defeats, playing a home game with Haaren, which has lost every one of its three contests, and Seward Park meeting George Washington on the latter's court. In the lone Bronx game, Morris High will play at De Witt Clinton. Both are now tied for second place in the standing.

Five games are scheduled in the Brooklyn section. Manual Training, which leads with two triumphs and no defeats, will play at Alexander Hamilton; Boys High at New Utrecht, Thomas Jefferson at Eastern District, Franklin K. Lane at Erasmus Hall and Bushwick at Brooklyn Tech. In Queens Jamaica will meet Newtown at Newtown and Bryant will oppose Far Rockaway on the latter's court.

In non-P. S. A. L. games Dwight is scheduled to play at the Columbia Grammar School, the La Salle Alumni at La Salle Academy, Borough Hall Academy at Brooklyn Cathedral Prep, New Lots Evening High at New York Evening High, Bushwick Evening High at Holy Trinity High, Lindenhurst High at Northport High, Eastport High at East Islip High and St. James will meet St. Agnes.

EAST ORANGE HIGH WINS SOCCER TITLE

Conquers Montclair Eleven by 1-0 for New Jersey Interscholastic Crown.

OWEN'S GOAL IS DECISIVE

Centre Tallies Near End of First Half—Victors Undefeated in League Competition.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 21.—The East Orange High School soccer team captured the New Jersey Interscholastic A. A. championship by defeating the Montclair High School eleven in a hard-fought game today by 1 to 0.

A goal by Owen, centre, two minutes before the end of the first half, gave East Orange the victory. Both teams fought desperately in the second half and both goalies saw plenty of action.

East Orange did not lose a league game, winning two each from Barringer and Dickinson and tying Montclair in its other tilt. Today's setback snapped Montclair's six-game winning streak.

The line-up:

East Orange (1).		Montclair (0).
Chalmers	G.	Ricndale
Loprete	R.F.	Grasso
Crawford	L.F.	Lehnhardt
Brown	R.H.	Kavenv
Gussow	C.H.	Bell

Owen	C.	Bonelli
Wilson	I.L.	Gregg
Israel	O.L.	Van Antwerp

Goal—Owen.

Substitution—East Orange: Donolon for Israel. Time of halves—30 minutes.

Dempsey to Stage Bouts.

Jack Dempsey will stage a heavyweight card for the benefit of a Christmas fund in the Chicago Coliseum on Tuesday night. Les Marriner will clash with George Hoffman in the feature bout, which will be supported by six other contests.

HOST, PAYING $13.90 WINS OLD VIRGINIA

Iollan, Odds-On Favorite, Places 3d, Trailing Boom by Three Lengths at Bowie.

FARMER ALSO IS VICTOR

Closes Fast to Beat Annapolis by Nose in Towson Purse—Coin Collector Fourth.

By BRYAN FIELD.

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 21.—The cow that jumped over the moon was no harder to catch than some of the horses which came rolling home at Bowie today. Four figures were the rule in the pay-off. In the feature race, the Old Virginia Handicap, four horses went to the post, with Iollan the 2-to-5 odds-on choice. But A. W. Wentzel's Host maintained the sequence of long-priced winners when he came home on the chin strap, paying $13.90 for $2.

Some of the ultra-conservative players who believe in playing even an odds-on favorite back a step, that is to say, in second place, did so today because the mutuels will give a place price even on an odds-on favorite. But those who bet on Iollan to be second were eligible for the bridge jumpers' brigade, as Iollan was the third, and could beat only one horse. A length and a half back of Host finished Boom, and then three lengths more and Iollan staggered home. He beat Islam by three lengths.

Iollan's Race Disappointing.

It was a disappointing race for the five-year-old gelding which raced so efficiently last Spring and Summer after being converted from a jumper. Iollan gained a reputation as a horse of staying qualities and great gameness, and today's mile-and-an eighth feature seemed made to order for him.

He was asked to carry 126 pounds, which was conceding weights to all the others, but Jockey Quattlebaum was riding Iollan hard at the end of six furlongs when the others were still galloping. Certainly Iollan did not look the horse of Belmont Park when he charged through the stretch to run past many another horse.

When he got to the stretch today he was laboring, and that from a pace that was so slow that Host was timed in 1:56 4-5, almost four seconds behind the track record, and the track was fast and better than any since the meeting opened on Onday.

Wentzel scored a consecutive double, and the climax was capped when Farmer came home first in the Towson Purse and beat the Sagamore Stable's Coin Collector, also an odds-on favorite.

Both of Wentzel's winners were ridden by Jockey Fisher and saddled by Bob Odom, who trains them, thus scoring a double for owner, jockey and trainer.

Farmer Pays $13.60.

After leading to the top of the stretch Coin Collector stopped, and Walter J. Salmon's Annapolis ran past him. But Farmer rolled along strongest of all and in the last few strides he got up to beat Annapolis a nose. Upset Lad was third and Coin Collector fourth. Farmer's price was $13.60.

Before the two odds-on choices came along in the four-horse fields of the Old Virginia and Towson, there were prices to satisfy even the most grasping if one caught them. The first race was won by E. B. McLean's Wave Top, paying $29.

In the second race, with one of the biggest fields of the day, a press of horses swept down to the finish together, but just at the last David Komie's Bramabiau pushed to the front to win and pay $81.30.

The third race saw another big field, with Top Kick and Chimney Sweep the two heavily backed horses, but they finished out of the money, and Sage Fire, paying $10.10, was the winner. The Old Virginia and the Towson followed in the order named.

Thirteen paraded in the sixth race and the players were so much up in the air that the group of horses coupled as the "field" was made favorite at one time, although Equation finally closed the public choice.

Equation could get only second, however, and the winner was the Seagram Stable's Lommern, paying $38.60 for the usual $2 investment.

In the last race the winner was Corpsorant, paying $6.90.

Baldwin and Yerger Also Miss Twice—New Traps to Be Dedicated Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

READING, Pa., Nov. 21.—Scoring nineteen out of twenty, Daniel M. Moore, the veteran Columbia gunner; Alexander C. Schwarz of Philadelphia, a former Pennsylvania champion, and Wayne M. Kern, promising Lancaster amateur, divided the high-gun honors in the Cedar Top introductory, a distance handicap featuring the wind-shooting events over the new traps of the Cedar Top Country Club today.

John W. Eshelman Jr., New York Athletic Club, who lost his first two fliers out of bounds, tied with George D. Baldwin, the Westchester star, and Clarke H. Yerger of Harrisburg on two down each for second honors.

The Cedar Top Club will dedicate its new shooting ground Saturday with the dedication handicap, a twenty-flier event, as the feature.

EHMKE STAYS IN BASEBALL.

Changes Decision to Retire After Meeting With Athletics' Pilot.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21 (AP.).—Howard Ehmke, towering right-handed pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, who had indicated that he might retire from baseball, announced tonight that he had reconsidered and again would be with the world's champions next year.

Ehmke, who surprised the baseball world by his remarkable performance against the Chicago Cubs in the first game of the recent world's series, made his announcement after a talk with Manager Connie Mack. He plans to devote considerable time to the coaching of young pitchers, but will be prepared to take a turn in the box whenever called upon.

FOX HUNTERS' GOLD CUP CAPTURED BY RED GOLD

Hilliard's Entry Finishes First in Two-Mile Steeplechase—Skylark Wins Two Races.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 21 (AP.).—Red Gold, ridden by his master, J. B. Hilliard of Louisville, finished first today in the two-mile steeplechase at the Harpeth Hill Hunt Club to win the gold cup offered by the National Fox Hunters' Association at its annual steeplechase races. Hilliard also was awarded first place in the first race of the day's program. He rode Shadowery Lady in winning the half-mile event.

Skylark, owned by Henry Dickinson of Nashville, finished first in the other two steeplechase races—the mile and the mile and a half. In the mile and a half steeplechase Skylark was ridden by Loury Watkins of Louisville and in the mile by Miss Ann Dickinson of Nashville.

Sukie, by Tim, out of Dusky, owned by William L. Sibert of Bowling Green, Ky., was high scorer to-day among the 145 hounds cast in the all-age stake of the National Fox Hunters' Association annual meeting. She had a total of 100 points, being credited with 60 in speed and driving, 20 in hunting and 20 in trailing.

Ninety points in speed and driving were credited to Lill, by Irish Lad, out of Jessie, owned by R. W. Tyler of Adairville, Ky. Min Lawson, by John Breathe, son of China Girl, owned by Dr. S. B. Ellis, Wakefield, Va., and Fan Jackson, by Jack Dawsy, out of Little Fan, owned by Dr. M. Casper, Louisville, were tied with 70 points each.

10,000 in Garden See Rangers Defeat Montreal Maroons by 2 to 1

RANGERS WIN, 2-1, IN GARDEN HOCKEY

TWO BOUTS IN PENALTY BOX

Closing Bell Signal for Fights Involving Johnson, Bun Cook, Stewart and Trottier.

By WILLIAM E. BRANDT.

The 2-to-1 victory of the New York Rangers over the Montreal Maroons in Madison Square Garden last night ended with five players tangled in an informal boxing contest in the penalty box. When the gong sounded the finish of the hockey game it also sounded the start of a punching match which was fortunately interrupted by officials and near-by spectators before any direct hits were scored.

About 10,000 spectators attended the renewal of Ranger-Maroon hostilities and kept the Garden galleries re-echoing with their outcries. On opening night, a week before, the Rangers defeated the Maroons in Montreal, and repeated the feat last night by exactly the same score, the lowest yet recorded under hockey's revised rules.

The scoring was finished for the evening when Leo Bourgault sank a long drive from the right-hand side-boards in 6:37 of the second period. But in the third period the massive Maroon phalanx conducted two sustained assaults upon the local net which a dozen times missed tying the score by margins so close as to evoke gasps as well as cheers from the spectators.

Roach Stars at Goal.

Brilliant saving by Roach, with the rest of the Rangers rallying around, held back the Maroon drives, but the play became fiercer as the seconds sped. The first-string Maroon forwards, after their furious onslaughts at the start of the period were checked, took a rest in the middle of the period and then came back to do or die.

They failed to catch up with the Rangers, but six penalties were ruled against the Rangers and three against Montreal in the course of the slambang last drive of Montreal's big three, Siebert, Hooley Smith and Stewart. When the final gong sounded only seven players were on the ice. Ching Johnson and the Cook brothers were in the penalty box with Stewart and Trottier of the Maroons.

As the gong rang Stewart and Johnson, who were ruled off on the same play, went at each other with fists flying. Trottier and Bun Cook, who entered the box less than a minute before the finish, went into a clinch on the front row of the box with Captain Bill Cook endeavoring to preserve peace.

Captain Cook prevented any damage at the rail, but it took the united efforts of half a dozen civilians to keep Johnson and Stewart away from each other. Johnson, incidentally, was off the ice five times during the game, collecting five of the nineteen penalties levied, including eleven on the Rangers and eight against Montreal.

Referees Lecture Players.

When the two fights ended the players of both teams gathered on the ice, with the referees admonishing them to avoid further disturbance. The crowd's hubbub followed the teams all the way to their dressing rooms, but there were no further outbreaks.

The Rangers were never behind in the score and after Paul Thompson scored the game's first goal in 7:05 of the first period they led throughout the game except for about a minute and three-quarters early in the second period.

Babe Siebert scored for the Maroons in 4:51 of the second period, taking a pass from Stewart and sliding the puck past Roach. The score remained tied until Bourgault slammed his long shot from the side shortly after.

Throughout the game the Maroons played aggressive and at times sensational hockey, the Rangers earning their victory by sturdy rallying of their forwards to the danger zone, Johnson's individual checking and the exceptional agility of Roach. Twice the local goalie lost his stick and narrowly escaped injury when the Maroons, en masse, stormed to the very threshold of the goal.

The line-up:

RETURN BOUT ARRANGED.

Stribling, Carnera Agree Loser on Foul Will Not Be Paid.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—An unusual "foul" clause, it was stated tonight, has been included in the agreement to which Primo Carnera, the Italian giant, and William L. Stribling, American heavyweight, have consented for their next bout, which will be staged in Paris about Dec. 10. The clause holds that if either man is disqualified on a foul he will not be entitled to his guaranteed share of the purse.

Stribling lost to Carnera on a foul at Albert Hall Monday. Stribling and Promoter Jeff Dickson are in Amsterdam, while Leon See, Carnera's manager, is awaiting the final settlement of terms for the return match, which will necessitate the postponement of Carnera's visit to America.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

THE scrubs in football are untrustworthy. That's the only verdict that can be found in the face of the evidence. At the end of each season the coaches rise up at the varsity football banquets and orate feelingly about the scrubs, the unsung heroes of the gridiron, the lads who gave everything and got nothing—except, perhaps, bumps, bandages and liniment, all free of charge. The prospective All-American halfback and captain denies that he was the mainspring of the attack and the keystone of the defense. He admits his varsity players did much, but, gentlemen, he wants to take this opportunity to testify publicly that the scrubs really built up the big team, and he would ask every varsity player to rise up and give three cheers for the men who really make football what it is, the scrubs!

That's very fine, and, for some years, the same sentiments were held to a mild degree in this corner. As year after year goes by, however, the returns become more and more disquieting. As stated above, the blooming scrubs are untrustworthy. Thus the Yale scrubs ran the Harvard formations against the Yale varsity several times this week, and Yale smothered those Harvard plays. Up at Cambridge the reverse was true. The Harvard scrubs were "Yale," and the Crimson ruined the Blue in those scrimmages.

If these returns mean anything, the Harvard-Yale game will be a scoreless tie tomorrow. Yale will smother Harvard's attack, and the Crimson will crush the Blue offense before it gets started. But you can't even trust the scrubs that far.

Charts and Diagrams.

The scouts go out and bring back all sorts of fancy charts and diagrams of enemy plays. The coaches take the scrubs in hand and teach them the enemy formations. Thus Navy scouts studied the Princeton team, taught the Navy scrubs all the Tiger plays, and had the scrubs run them against the Annapolis varsity. The result was delicious. The Navy varsity just ruined those Princeton plays. But the Navy varsity couldn't stop those same plays by two touchdowns a few days later at Palmer Stadium.

The Penn State scrubs used Bucknell plays last week and were ruined by the Penn State varsity. Bezdek's regulars knew every Bucknell move and the checkmate to it. But when Penn State played Bucknell, which used Bucknell plays, the result was astoundingly different. You can't trust those scrubs. Perhaps they held back or saved up a few plays for mysterious reasons of their own.

But if the scrubs never get credit, they certainly get a great football education. A varsity player at Yale, for instance, is taught Yale football all through the Autumn. But just figure what a scrub tackle learns. He was taught the Georgia formations and ran through them for a week. After that he spent a week as a "Brown" tackle using Brown plays and then switched to become an Army tackle helping along Army plays.

Dartmouth plays came next, then Princeton, and for the past week Yale scrubs were learning and putting into execution Harvard plays. If there is such a thing as overeducation in football, the scrubs have it all to themselves.

The Scrubs' Revenge.

There was one time, however, when a scrub team really did produce results that were out of the ordinary. It was on the gridiron of a college that was due to face Notre Dame. The scrubs, of course, were drilled in Rockne's plays and were ready to run them off on schedule.

Just as the scrimmage was about to start, however, the coach and his chief assistant were called away for a hurried conference with the faculty council on an important matter. The scrub quarterback watched them depart with a cool and calculating eye. He rubbed his hands together with a wicked smile and called his men into a huddle. Then the scrimmage began.

It's hard to believe, and it is contrary to the established rules of procedure, but that scrub "Notre Dame" team ripped and tore through the varsity for what would have been a scandalous number of touchdowns if the runners hadn't been halted by the emergency referee who happened to be the trainer.

This continued until the scrubs were lined up in the dusk, and an outraged bark came from near by: "Hey, what's the blinking idea? That's no Notre Dame formation. Snap out of it!" It was the varsity coach who had returned to take charge of things.

"Notre Dame!" said the quarterback. "Gosh, coach, I guess I've been making a little mistake. I've been running off Illinois plays all afternoon."

The coach immediately took him out with a pretty play that looked like a Minnesota shift.

Crossing the Wires.

Since the Yale varsity did so well against Harvard formation as used by the Yale scrubs, and since the Crimson varsity did equally well in smothering the Yale offensive as staged by the Cambridge scrubs, it might pay one team or the other to cross the wires by bobbing up with an entirely different plan of campaign.

Yale, for instance, might bob up with a Notre Dame attack. That must be comparatively simple. Rockne recently said that he used about ten plays a season. A scrub team of a college on the Notre Dame schedule has to learn those plays and run them off. Surely, a varsity troupe could pick them up as quickly as a random scrub team. Harvard could counter by using the Dobie off-tackle plays and short forwards behind the line. Harvard doesn't play Notre Dame, and Yale doesn't meet Cornell. It would be fair enough all around and a real surprise party for both sides.

But if they won't play it that way, Coaches are conservative. The Yale varsity will use the plays that the Harvard scrubs used as an imitation Yale team through the past week. The Harvard varsity will run off the same plays that were smothered when the Yale scrubs used them against the big Blue team in practice scrimmages of the past week.

There may be one or two plays on each side that have not yet been uncovered. There's that little element of surprise to be figured. But knowing the opposing formations and plays is only half the secret. The trick is to guess just which play is coming. After that, there's practically nothing to do except stop the play. Strange as it may seem, this isn't always as easy as halting the same play when used by your own scrubs. That's why they play the big games no matter what the results in scrub scrimmages.

CANADIENS TAKE OVERTIME GAME, 3-2

Leduc's Goal Routs Toronto in Montreal for First League Triumph of Victors.

OTTAWA RALLIES TO WIN

Finnegan Registers in Extra Period to Defeat Black Hawks by 6 to 5 Count.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Montreal Canadiens tonight succeeded in breaking into the victory column of the National Hockey League but it took them seven minutes of overtime before they captured a match from the Toronto Maple Leafs. The score was 3 to 2. Leduc, Canadien defense man, won the game in the overtime period.

EBBETS AND DEVOS TO BATTLE TONIGHT

Freeport Middleweight Hopes to Advance Title Claims in Ten-Rounder in Garden.

Harry Ebbets will make a strong bid for eminence in the middleweight division when he opposes Rene DeVos in the main bout of ten rounds at Madison Square Garden tonight. The Freeport battler has come along rapidly since his graduation from the welterweight ranks and is a serious contender for the titular honors now held by Mickey Walker.

The semi-final, in which Eugene Huat meets Black Bill, is attracting considerable interest. The bout is listed for ten rounds also, and the winner will advance a notch toward the championship of the division, now declared vacant by the State Athletic Commission. The contest is part of a tournament program designed to establish a flyweight champion.

In the opening ten-rounder, Joe Eanovic of Binghamton will box Joe Barlow, Boston heavyweight. A six-round bout between Howard (Red) Bush and Billy Bruns completes the card.

Eddie Benson and Tommy Dorr will collide in the main bout of twelve rounds at the 106th Infantry Armory, Brooklyn, tonight. Mickey Taylor and Paddy Quinlan will meet in the eight-round semi-final.

Joe Vosdick will meet Teddy Hines in the feature battle of eight rounds at the Flushing Armory tonight. Frankie Lapera and Willie Young are listed for the semi-final, which is also scheduled for eight rounds.

MANDELL STOPS AYZERILLA.

Lightweight Champion Wins in 2d Round at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 21 (AP).—Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., lightweight champion of the world, knocked out Joe Ayzerilla of Milwaukee in the second round of their eight-round non-title bout tonight.

YACHTSMEN REPORT ON VISIT TO LONDON

Stewart and Cormack Describe Lipton's New Shamrock at N. Y. Y. C. Meeting.

SAW BOAT IN CONSTRUCTION

Keel Already Laid and Framework Is Being Assembled for America's Cup Challenger.

By SHANNON CORMACK.

Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Shamrock, with which he will attempt to lift the America's Cup in a series of races off Newport next September, will be racing in English waters by next June. This information was brought to these shores by Fleet Captain W. A. W. Stewart and Secretary George Cormack of the New York Yacht Club, who represented the club at the meeting of the International Yacht Racing Union early this month in London.

Confirmation of the previous announcement of Captain Heard, a professional yachtsman, as skipper for the Shamrock in the races here was also reported. Captain Heard had a successful season this year as skipper of the late Sir Mortimer Singer's 24-meter yacht Astra.

At the New York Yacht Club yesterday, Messrs. Stewart and Cormack gave an account of the union meeting and also described their visit to the Gosport yards, where the Shamrock is being built. They said that George Nicholson, who designed Shamrock, showed them over the yard where the keel is already laid and where the framework is being assembled. Both said that there was no reticence on the part of those concerned with the building of the British challenger to let them see all they could. Incidentally both Mr. Stewart and Mr. Cormack are members of the America's Cup committee of the New York Yacht Club.

Attend as Observers.

Mr. Stewart explained that he and Mr. Cormack as well as the two representatives of the North American Yacht Racing Union, Commodore Clifford B. Mallory of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club and Samuel W. Dauchy of Chicago, attended the meeting of the International Union merely as observers.

However, in the two important matters that came before the meeting—revision of the racing and measurement rules—he said, the suggestions of the American yachtsmen were favorably received and the changes made in both rules were those brought up by the visitors.

In connection with the racing rules, the union adopted the right-of-way rule that is in force on this side of the Atlantic, and will now be identical throughout the world. What is known as the "proper-course" rule, which has been in force among British yacht clubs for the past ten or a dozen years, and which, it is said, has virtually been in distavor among the majority of British yachtsmen, was eliminated.

Adopts U. S. Measurements.

The union voted to discard the international measurement rule in respect to yachts above the 14½-meter rating and adopt the universal rule of the New York Yacht Club, the latter being the standard measurement rule of big boats on this side of the Atlantic.

According to the regulations of the union, three years' notice of the termination of the international measurement rule is necessary, but Mr. Stewart said that the delegates were so unanimously in favor of the adoption of the New York Yacht Club's rule that he believed it would be only a very short time before the old rule is abrogated entirely.

Most of the larger yachts built in Great Britain during the last year or two have been built under universal measurement rules, and with the general adoption of the rule it will mean that virtually all of the larger racing craft to be constructed in the future will be built under this rule, thus providing more big-class racing among boats of equal rating measurement.

Yanks Get Hargrave in Trade for Moore, Paschal, Grabowski

ST. PAUL, Nov. 21 (AP).—Eugene (Bubbles) Hargrave, manager of the St. Paul American Association baseball club, will go to the New York Yankees next season as a catcher in exchange for Pitcher Wiley Moore, Outfielder Ben Paschal and Catcher John Grabowski. The deal was announced today by R. J. Connery, president of the St. Paul club. Hargrave came to the Saints a year ago from the Cincinnati club of the National League. He led the association in hitting most of last season, but was rated second in the final averages with a mark of .369.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, and Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the club, are at French Lick Springs, Ind., and were not available to give any official information regarding the trade with the St. Paul club.

HAINES AND BARON TRIUMPH AT SQUASH

VICTORS AHEAD OF FIELD

Both Reach Round Before Semi-Finals—Kerbeck, Loughman and Brackenridge Gain 3d Round.

Two players reached the round before the semi-finals of the annual Fall scratch squash tennis tournament at the New York A. C. last night as all brackets except one were completed in the third round.

Rowland B. Haines of the Columbia University Club, the national champion, and Milton Baron of the Fraternity Club, who ranks fourth, are out a bracket ahead of the field. The former defeated Stanley R. Greene of the home club in a match that saw Greene play brilliant squash in the second game after being overwhelmed in the opener. The score was 13—4, 15—9.

Baron, who has not yet found his best form, was carried to 15—10, 15—9 by John C. Tredwell of the Crescent Athletic Club, both games finding the Brooklynite making a game fight to stay on close terms with his opponent. Jerome Kerbeck of Columbia, Frank Loughman of the home club and Gavin Brackenridge of the Princeton Club advanced to the third round.

Kerbeck, who follows Baron in the ranking, came within a point of losing the first game of his match with G. M. Edmondson of Fraternity. A game of three was set at 14-all and it was not until the score had gone to 2-all that Kerbeck came through with the deciding shot. Edmondson offered little resistance in the second chapter and Kerbeck won quickly at 17—16, 15—4. Brackenridge accounted for Arthur Goldburg of the Yale Club at 15—3, 18—17, and Loughman put out S. R. Jandorf of Fraternity, 15—9, 15—6.

THE SUMMARIES.

Second Round—Jerome Kerbeck, Columbia, defeated G. M. Edmondson, Fraternity, 17—16, 15—4; Frank Loughman, New York A. C., defeated S. R. Jandorf, Fraternity, 15—8, 15—6; Gavin Brackenridge, Princeton, defeated Arthur Goldburg, Yale, 15—3, 18—17.

Third Round—Rowland B. Haines, Columbia, defeated Stanley R. Greene, N. Y. A. C., 13—4, 15—9; Milton Baron, Fraternity, defeated John C. Tredwell, Crescent, 15—10, 15—9.

Collins Outpoints Ceccoli.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Recovery in Stocks Continues —Brokers' Loans Are Down $585,000,000.

The stock market pursued its recovery yesterday, and at a somewhat quickened pace; but the day's developments of greatest interest were not on the Stock Exchange. They comprised the lowering of the London bank rate from 6 per cent to 5½, and the further astonishingly large reduction for the week of $585,000,000 in brokers' loans. The scope of this liquidation of stock market credits is now measured in figures quite as bewildering as was the pace of inflation which preceded, and far more spectacular for rapidity. Since the highest mark was reached on Oct. 7, the reduction has been $3,217,000,000.

The present total, by the Reserve Bank's computation, is the lowest since Dec. 14, 1927. That is to say, the rolling ball of speculative credit has lost in the past seven weeks all of the volume accumulated in the twenty-two months preceding. It is more than a coincidence that the scope of credit liquidation, 47 per cent, is exactly the same as THE TIMES's "averages" have shown for the percentage fall in stock market prices between Sept. 19 and Nov. 13. But the Stock Exchange's more comprehensive report of brokers' borrowings, due next month, is likely to show even larger figures. Very rarely in economic history do the course of events and the testimony of statistics tell with such crushing force the truth about an episode, so long surrounded by distorted reasoning. Wall Street itself may at least assert this much of foreknowledge, that it repeatedly showed fright, even in 1928, at a particularly large expansion of the "brokers' loans."

The Bank of England's reduction of its official discount rate to 5½ per cent, as against the 6 per cent rate fixed at the end of October and the 6½ which had prevailed in the preceding five weeks, re-establishes the rate that had lasted from Feb. 7 until this Autumn. It was during the last-named period that $164,000,000 was drained from the Bank of England's gold and the banking reserve ratio fell from 58 per cent to 22%. Under ordinary circumstances, therefore, the Bank's recent 6 per cent rate would probably have been retained—especially since only $12,000,000 had been added to its gold reserve since the highest rate was established in September.

But circumstances are not ordinary. The mass of floating capital, which Wall Street had snatched away from London and whose remittance had driven the foreign exchanges to the New York gold-import point, has been rushing home again. Its return to London has not only ended the possibility of British gold exports to New York, but has driven down money rates on the open London market far below the bank rate. At the same time, although the Bank gained practically no gold during the past week, and although its gold reserve is still $112,000,000 less than what it held when free gold payments were resumed in 1925, something not far short of $50,000,000 gold is on the ocean, bound from the Southern and Far Eastern continents to London. The Bank of England is evidently reckoning on a very distinct change in its position after New Year's Day.

On transactions exceeding those of any previous day this week (though still small as Wall Street lately measured things), prices on the Stock Exchange continued to move upward. A few stocks rose in a range of 10 to 18 points, but in general, the day's gains were more moderate. Not all stocks closed at the day's highest prices, but most of the advances were well held. Money rates continued to decline, both on Wall Street and at London; sterling recovered fractionally, notwithstanding the lower London bank rate.

United Hospital Fund Reports Greater Support.

Several banking houses have increased their subscriptions to the United Hospital Fund, and indications are that Wall Street is contributing more generously than ever before to this fund, in spite of the recent stock market decline.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have increased their subscription from $12,000 to $20,000, while both Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co. have increased theirs from $6,000 to $7,500. Others who have increased their gifts are Charles H. Sabin, vice chairman of the Guaranty Trust Company and associate chairman of the Wall Street committee for the fund; August Zinsser, president of the Central Savings Bank; Charles A. Sackett, vice president of the Mutual Bank branch of the Chase National Bank, and Maurice L. Farrell, vice president of Chain Store Stocks, Inc. It is reported also that subscriptions have been received from a number of houses which have not given before.

Andrews Rejoins Guardian Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, was elected a trustee of the Guardian Investment Trust this afternoon at a meeting of the trustees in Hartford. He was also named a trustee of the Guardian Rail Shares Investment Trust and of the Guardian Public Utilities Investment Trust, both of which are affiliated with the Guardian Investment Trust. He resigned as president of the Guardian Investment Trust in May, 1928.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

After reacting moderately in early dealings the general trading list on the Stock Exchange advanced briskly yesterday on a spirited buying movement. Leading issues responded in impressive fashion in the last half-hour, the net gains ranging from 2 to more than 13 points. Wall Street regarded the burst of strength as a reflection of the confident feeling engendered by the business conferences being conducted by President Hoover in Washington. Sentiment, so far as the market was concerned, was helped by the prospect of another large decrease in brokers' loans and by fresh indications that the liquidating movement had run its course, for the time being at least. The stocks which stood out conspicuously in the day's advance were General Electric, American Can, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Consolidated Gas, United States Industrial Alcohol, Simmons, Standard Gas and American Telephone and Telegraph.

Good News.

There has not been a day in recent weeks that has brought such a shower of constructive news as did yesterday. Plans of industrial leaders, as announced after President Hoover's conference, increased wages for the Ford Motor Company's employes, the reduction of the Bank of England's rediscount rate, a contraction of $585,000,000 in brokers' loans and declarations of several extra corporate dividends were the features of outstanding importance.

Pace of the Recovery.

In some professional quarters of Wall Street the opinion is expressed that the pace of the recovery has been a little too rapid, and that the market itself would be in a more healthy condition if it went more slowly and consolidated its improved position as it advanced. The opinion is based mainly on the fact that investment buying, heretofore the market's backbone, is likely to cool if the gains are so wide. "The buyer for investment who missed Steel, for instance, at 160 or 165, may hesitate to pay 170 for the stock," said one broker who is interested in the market's recovery. "This case may be multiplied in a long list of stocks." Then, too, as many good judges of the market see it, little short selling is going on at the moment, most of the big bears having been frightened off of the short side by the action of the Stock Exchange in calling for the position of lendings by each member firm. To the extent that it lacks a large short interest and to the extent that the long position increases, the sooner the time will come, brokers assert, when a good sized reaction will be in order to straighten out the market's technical condition.

End of Short Days Near.

Governing authorities of the New York Stock Exchange will meet today to consider the question of continuing the three-hour trading schedule through next week. Sentiment among many of the large commission houses is said to be opposed to a continuance of the present schedule on the ground that it is no longer necessary. The authorities of the Exchange, however, wish to feel certain that the market has returned to normal before restoring the old five-hour day. It is expected that the views of leading brokers will be obtained before action is taken today. If the reduced schedule is continued, it will be for only one more week, according to the opinion of members.

Shifting of Pools.

There has been a great shifting of pool accounts since the market's break. Operators who formerly took an interest in the affairs of particular corporations no longer have anything to do with the market for the shares of those corporations. New pool operators are blooming in force. Heads of some good-sized corporations do not care for the manner in which their stocks were handled during the break. This was the cause of most of the removals. One large house, obliged to take more than 100,000 shares of a medium-sized industrial, is looking for an operator who can demonstrate his ability to sell these shares without disturbing the market. He can have them, too, at 4 or 5 points under the present quotation, or at just the price it cost the firm to rebuy them.

The Drop in Brokers' Loans.

The decline of $585,000,000 in the total of brokers' loans, announced yesterday afternoon, came as somewhat of a surprise to some observers despite the general expectation that a decrease would be shown. The fact that prices on the Stock Exchange advanced considerably from the levels of a week ago was expected to militate against a sweeping cut in loans. In explanation of the large reduction revealed, bankers remarked that much of the buying which lately had lifted the course of stock prices had been for cash, and that in addition there had been during the past week only a negligible amount of new financing. It was the tremendous volume of undigested securities on the market which accounted in large part for the way in which brokers' loans soared prior to the market break. Yesterday's total of $3,587,000,000 for loans was the lowest since Dec. 14, 1927. It brought the decline from the high point of the year to $3,217,000,000 or nearly 50 per cent.

October Railway Earnings.

If early returns are a criterion, reports by the Eastern railroads for October will show decreased earnings for that month, and the Western roads will provide most of the increases. The Pere Marquette, the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Nickel Plate have all reported lower surpluses for the month, but yesterday the Southern Pacific came forward with a slight increase. Car loadings had indicated such a trend.

Withdrawal of Securities.

The advances in the open market quotations for many stocks, the ease of call money and the liquidation which has taken place have combined to create a situation of complete ease in the lending accounts of stock brokers. The situation is exactly the opposite of what it was one and two weeks ago when the brokers were piling additional collateral behind loans almost daily.

MONEY.

Thursday, Nov. 21, 1929.

Ample supplies of money for all classes of accommodation—day loans, maturity and business paper—continued to make for fresh cuts in the prevailing charges. On the Stock Exchange 5 per cent was the renewal figure, but new money went at 4½ and street trades at 3. Time money was quoted 5 to 5½, but this was purely nominal, as little actually was done in the way of new business. Some acceptance dealers early cut yields, but the movement was not general and discounts were repriced later. Commercial paper now goes over a range of 5 to 5½, but here borrowing is extremely light in face of receding discounts.

LONDON BANK RATE CUT FROM 6 TO 5 1-2%

Second Reduction in Three Weeks Encourages British Financial and Business Circles.

FURTHER ACTION POSSIBLE

Loan Charges and Mortgage Interest Will Be Lowered, but Gold Position Is Unsatisfactory.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—For the second time in three weeks the Bank of England lowered its rediscount rate today, this time from 6 to 5½ per cent. Although the reduction had been taken for granted ever since the Wall Street collapse, it brought great encouragement to the British financial and business communities.

Most of the city's financiers were pleased, but there were just a few disappointed that the rate did not go even lower. There is widespread belief that the 5½ per cent rate is still too high, and it is possible that in a few weeks a further reduction, to 5 per cent, can be made. From April, 1927, to February of this year the rate stood at 4½ per cent.

Gilt-edged securities moved forward as soon as today's good news became known, and leading industrials followed with substantial gains. It was a sign that confidence at last was returning to the London Stock Exchange, which for weeks has been harassed, first by the Hatry collapse, then by the rise in the bank rate, and finally by the slump in Wall Street. Loan rates will henceforth be lower and interest rates on mortgages will be reduced. Most important of all will be the new bank rate's effect as a tonic for British trade.

The gold position is still far from satisfactory, although a better exchange position in recent weeks has enabled the Bank to buy some gold in the open market. The returning flow of gold from New York has not been as swift as was expected and the drain to France has continued, although on a smaller scale. The present gold holdings of the Bank of England are down to £132,936,258, compared with £133,272,894 when the bank rate rose to 6½ per cent, and £153,229,532 at the beginning of the year.

Differential Now 1 Per Cent.

The reduction of the rate of the Bank of England from 6 per cent to 5½ per cent brings the differential between the New York and London bank rates to 1 per cent. It indicates, in the opinion of bankers here, a step in the direction of more normal money market conditions throughout the world. The British bank rate was forced up twice this year by money market conditions in this country. Early in February the Bank of England lifted its rate from 4½ to 5½ per cent to arrest a flow of gold to this country which had sent $30,000,000 of the metal across the Atlantic. Again in September the rate was lifted to 6½ per cent to safeguard the gold reserves of the Bank of England.

When the Federal Reserve Bank of New York lowered its rate to 5 per cent from 6 per cent three weeks ago the Bank of England lowered its rate by one-half of 1 per cent. The move of the London institution came earlier in the day than the New York bank's action, but, according to general belief, with the advance knowledge that the rate here would come down. Last week the local Federal Reserve Bank reduced its rate again, this time from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent. The move came as somewhat of a surprise to the financial community and it was generally expected that the Bank of England would follow suit this week.

Reluctant to Raise Rate.

When the two rates were at their recent high point a differential of only one-half of 1 per cent existed. The Bank of England has been extremely reluctant to advance its rate, due to the adverse effect which the move would have upon British business. It was to be expected, therefore, that as soon as the opportunity to reduce the rate presented itself the Bank would take advantage of it.

The only factor which bankers here thought might stand in the way of a reduction in London was the continued outflow of gold from London to Paris. It appears impossible, however, to halt this movement by the mere manipulation of discount rates since the flow has taken place in the face of interest rates materially lower in Paris than in London. The consideration that British business could be aided by the reduction of the rate was regarded by bankers here as of more importance.

LONDON BANK GAINS LITTLE GOLD IN WEEK

Increase Only £60,000—Banking Reserve Rises Through Return of Notes From Circulation.

LONDON, Nov. 21 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds:

Gold coin and bullion	increased	£ 60,000
Reserve in banking dept., gold and notes	increased	3,081,000
Notes in circulation	decreased	3,021,000
Notes in reserve	increased	2,196,000
Loans on gov't securities	decreased	4,336,000
Loans on other securities	increased	1,467,000
Public deposits	decreased	444,000
Other deposits	increased	620,000

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is 39.57 per cent.

Last week the bank's ratio was 30.88 per cent; two weeks ago, 30.81. The percentage of June 12, 57.97, was the highest of the year to date and the highest reported in any week since Sept. 21, 1913. The percentage of Aug. 8, 22.41, was the lowest of this year.

The statement, compared with the corresponding week one and two years ago, is as follows:

The gold holdings of Oct. 3, £130,342,558, were the smallest since gold payments were resumed in 1925. The largest this year were £164,211,400, on June 12, and these of Sept. 12, 1928, £176,564,962, were the largest in the history of the bank. At the close of April, 1925, when free gold payments were resumed by the Bank of England, they stood at £135,742,066.

FRENCH BANK'S GOLD SHOWS FURTHER RISE

Week's Addition 241,000,000 Francs—Cut in Home Discounts and Sight Credits Abroad.

PARIS, Nov. 21 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes, in francs:

Gold	increased	241,000,000
Sight balances abroad	decreased	175,000,000
Bills dis'ted at home	decreased	975,000,000
Bills bought abroad	increased	2,000,000
Advances	decreased	40,000,000
Circulation	decreased	317,000,000

With the above changes for the week, yesterday's statement of the Bank of France, which covers the actual position of a week ago, compares with those of the preceding two weeks and the corresponding week of 1928. Items in the table are in millions of francs:

	Nov. 21, 1929.	Nov. 14 1929.	Nov. 7, 1929.	Nov. 22, 1928.
Gold	40,537	40,296	40,049	30,551
For. a. cdts.	7,137	7,312	7,220	13,589

The gold reserve reported this week is the highest in the history of the Bank. The largest holdings prior to revaluation of currency in 1928 were on Sept. 2, 1920, when they were 5,590,670,000 francs at the old valuation, or 27,953,300,000, according to the present franc values. The note circulation reported on Nov. 7 was the highest ever recorded. Prior to the stabilization decree, the highest point reached by the bank's note circulation, which was then at about the present franc valuation, was 60,384,546,000 francs on May 10, 1928. A year ago it was 61,410,066,000.

The French bank's official discount date remains at 3½ per cent, to which it was reduced on Jan. 10, 1928.

OUR EXPORTS TO ORIENT ROSE IN NINE MONTHS

Six Per Cent Increase Is Shown in Spite of Japanese Conditions —Imports Gained 10%.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Despite financial and economic conditions in Japan which have retarded American trade with that country, an increase of approximately 6 per cent was registered in shipments of American products to the Far East during the first nine months of 1929. Total exports to the Orient for that period aggregated $595,572,000, compared with $563,584,000 for the same period in 1928, the Department of Commerce reported today.

A 10 per cent increase in imports from the Far East also was reported and attributed to a growing demand for raw Oriental products in the United States, such as crude rubber, raw silk, cocoanut products, tin, goatskins, sugar and hemp. Total imports from the Orient for the nine months' period were valued at $998,932,000, compared with $908,684,000.

The combined foreign trade of the United States with the Far East totaled $1,594,529,000, a gain of $122,233,700, or 8.3 per cent, the report said.

The general popularity of American products in the Oriental countries is well evidenced by an increase of 46 per cent in shipments to the Dutch East Indies, 25.7 per cent to Malaya and 11.2 per cent to Australia.

The Far East afforded a market for 22.6 per cent of the total value of American automotive products shipped abroad; more than 40 per cent of the canned salmon, sardines and milk; 10 per cent of the gasoline, 60 per cent of the cotton cloth, 93 per cent of the leaf tobacco and 77 per cent of the cigarettes, besides large quantities of soft wood lumber from the Pacific Coast.

The markets of Australia, New Zealand and neighboring islands accounted for 57 per cent of the total number of automobiles and trucks sold to the Far Eastern countries, besides 50 per cent of the machinery and 13 per cent of the iron and steel.

TOURISTS GAVE FRANCE $353,000,000 IN 1928

Total Since War Is Set at $1,950,000,000 by French—230,000 American Visitors Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Foreign tourists, among whom were 230,000 Americans, spent $353,000,000 in France last year and have expended $1,950,000,000 there since the war, according to estimates from French sources, which have been reported to the Department of Commerce.

The average tourist's expenditures in France were distributed as follows: Hotel expenses, 20 per cent; transport, 20 per cent; amusements, 20 per cent; purchases in stores, 26 per cent; miscellaneous, such as cabs, postage, telegrams and other such charges, 14 per cent.

According to the estimates, Americans and British, who number 75,000 yearly, make up the bulk of the tourists.

With the general return to prosperity throughout the world, it was said, the numbers of Germans, Italians, Scandinavians and South Americans visiting France are increasing.

OUR MONEY MISSED ABROAD.

Banker, Returning, Says Short-Term Credit Is Overstressed.

Conditions in Central Europe and the Balkan States have been seriously influenced by the high money rates in New York during the last year and a half, said L. I. Estrin, assistant vice president of the Irving Trust Company, who has just returned to New York after a visit abroad of two months.

As a result a tendency had developed in Central Europe, Mr. Estrin said, to finance long-term requirements with short-term credit, with the result that liquidity of some financial institutions had decreased. Low prices on stock exchanges also had resulted and on several the market value of leading stocks was substantially below their conservative asset value.

Early Gains on the English Exchange Are Lost in Afternoon Reaction.

FRENCH STOCKS DECLINE

Domestic Selling Weakens the General Tone—German Bourse Is Dull and Lower.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The stock market leaped ahead this morning on the lowering of the bank rate, but reacted before closing. Among British Government securities the 5 per cent war loan touched £100, but slipped back to £99⅞, a net gain of 1-16. The funding loan rose ⅛ to £85⅞.

Canadian Pacific declined 1¼ points to $207⅛, while British railroads lost most of their earlier gains. Anglo-Americans were erratic. General Electric rose 6d to 48s. Hydroelectric advanced ¼ to $29 and International Holding improved ¼ to $6⅛.

Graphophones were weak toward the close, with His Master's Voice declining to £4⅞, and Columbia also falling to £4⅞. American Celanese and Courthaulds were strong at £6⅛ and £3 1-16, respectively. International Nickel declined ⅛ to $82¾, while Imperial Chemical also was slightly lower at 29s 7½d.

Oils opened strong, but at the close Royal Dutch was ¼ lower at £33¼, and Mexican Eagle was 7½d down at 16s 10½d. The price of rubber fell 5-32d a pound on the report of the rubber growers' cooperative selling committee and rubber shares fell accordingly. Rhodesian coppers were active, but the afternoon reaction pushed them below yesterday's levels.

Lowering of the bank rate had been anticipated in Lombard Street and consequently had little effect on the discount market. Three-month bills brought 4 15-16 per cent. There was a good demand for loans, with overnight money bringing 5¼ per cent. Sterling was higher at $4.87 9-16.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Despite numerous favorable conditions including the reduction in the Bank of England's discount rate, and the government's majority vote in Parliament, the Bourse today experienced a resumption of weakness. Opening somewhat firmer, offerings, this time chiefly from domestic sources, quickly affected the tone of the market and the closing came with losses general. Only rentes were well traded and even they were not in demand toward the close.

This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a continued increase of gold reserves. The proportion of gold to obligations reached 46.25 per cent., the obligations totaling 87,644,000,000 francs. Gold reserves advanced 241,000,000 to a total of 40,539,000,000 francs. Circulation declined 516,000,000 to 66,582,000,000 francs.

Final quotation on rentes were: The 3 per cents, 87; 1918 4s, 97.40; 1920 amortizable 5s, 128; 1928 5s, 101.85; 1920 6s, 106.65; 1927 amortizable 6s, 109.70.

Tone Irregular in Berlin.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The Boerse opened slightly firmer today, but owing to two bank insolvencies, one at Luebeck and the other at Frankfort-on-the-Main, and false rumors regarding President von Hindenburg's health, the tendency changed during the course of the session and the previous small gains were lost.

London's reduction in the discount rate to 5½ per cent failed to stimulate the market, which, on the whole, was dull. Chade and Svenskas profited by covering purchases, improving 10 and 8 marks, respectively. Gesfuerel was firm and Siemens, A. E. G. and Schuckert of the electrical group well maintained.

The mining section was uneven. Steel shares were weak, but Lignites were slightly improved. Reichsbank shares, Karstadt and Polyphon advanced 1 to 6 points. The Boerse closed quiet and weaker.

$4,788,805 GOLD SENT TO EUROPE IN OCTOBER

The report of the Department of Commerce on exports and imports of gold during October, classified by countries, shows that, out of the $4,788,805 gold sent out during the month by this country, $3,005,275 went to France and $1,014,503 to Great Britain. Imports of gold, which aggregated $21,320,516, were made up principally of $8,375,000 from Argentina, $3,016,478 from Canada, and $2,605,696 from Columbia. But Great Britain also sent us $1,014,503.

The following table gives exports and imports of gold during October compared with September, 1929, and with October, 1928. It comprises only countries which sent or took more than $100,000:

ASK FOREIGN VALUATION IN PAN-AMERICAN DUTIES

Customs Committee Recommendations Urge Value in Country of Origin "for Justice."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The customs committee of the Pan-American Commission on Customs Procedure and Port Formalities approved today assessment of customs duties on the basis of foreign and not domestic valuation for recommendation to the twenty-one American governments.

The committee declared that "from the point of view of expediting the customs service and from the standpoint of justice to the consumer, the value in the country of origin should be adopted, as has already been done by a majority of the countries here represented, with respect to merchandise subject to the payment of ad valorem duties."

"The basis for the application of ad valorem duties," it voted, "shall be the F. O. B. value of the merchandise in the port or point of export in the country of origin."

The committee recommended "that the basis of net weight be adopted in those countries in which duties are levied on the weight of the merchandise." When, for important reasons, this is not practical, it was recommended that "legal weight"—defined as the weight of the merchandise plus the weight of the immediate wrapper or container—be adopted.

"Gross weight," it was decided, should be used as a basis "only in those cases in which, because of the nature of the merchandise, the adoption of either of the other two systems is impracticable or inconvenient."

Simplification of legislation in the different countries to allow temporary import and export, re-import and re-export of merchandise under bond or otherwise, in accordance with the national legislation of each country, was also recommended.

Raises Capitalization to $5,000,000.

The capitalization of the Texas Corporation (China, Ltd.) has been increased from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, it was announced yesterday. At the offices of the Texas Corporation in New York it was said that the increase in the capitalization was made to bring the corporate organization more into conformity with the actual investment of the company in the Far East.

Auburn Automobile Co.'s Plan.

AUBURN, Ind., Nov. 21 (AP).—E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Company, announced today an expansion program calling for a 50 per cent increase in production in 1930. The program will require expenditure of several million dollars in plant and materials.

OUTFLOW OF GOLD $11,212,000 IN WEEK

$5,010,000 Exported to Poland, $5,002,000 to Switzerland, $1,000,000 to France.

IMPORTS TOTAL $427,000

The statement of gold movements at the Port of New York, made public yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, revealed that in the past week there was a substantial outflow of gold from this market to Europe. The statement showed total exports for the week ended on Nov. 20 of $11,212,000. Of this amount $5,010,000 went to Poland, $5,002,000 to Switzerland, $1,000,000 to France, $150,000 to Mexico and $50,000 to Germany. Imports of $427,000 were shown, of which $250,000 came from Uruguay and $177,000 chiefly from other Latin-American countries. A decrease of $8,010,000 in the amount of gold earmarked for foreign account was shown.

Recent weeks have seen a moderate movement of gold from this country to France. In the past four weeks a total of $11,505,000 in gold has been shipped to France, including $1,000,000 which went last week. The franc has been hovering in the neighborhood of the gold shipping point, and has on one or two occasions advanced above the level of 3.94 cents, so that shipments were not unexpected. In the case of the currencies of the other countries to which gold was shipped last week, however, bankers said the course of exchange had not made transfers profitable. The shipments evidently were made, it was said, at a slight loss out of a keen desire to obtain the metal.

Gold holdings of the Federal Reserve Banks now are in excess of $3,000,000,000. While the United States has been acquiring this huge quantity of gold, the central banks of Europe have found their reserves seriously diminished. The increase in this country's gold holdings, which amounts to approximately $400,000,000 for the past year, has been occasioned by the period of high money rates which has just come to a close in this market. The heavy transfer of funds from Europe to this country has had the effect of lowering the exchange values of most European countries relative to the dollar and gold transfers have resulted.

With the collapse of the money strain here, the situation was reversed. European bank rates had been lifted to levels above those in this country and European funds employed here began to flow back in volume. Just before the break in the stock market several European currencies were verging on the point where gold shipments would have been profitable. The decline of first-class American common stocks brought back to this market some European funds and halted the rise in the exchanges.

For the past few weeks the principal European currencies have been holding somewhat under the generally accepted gold shipping points, and it was commonly supposed that the movement of gold from this market to Europe would be delayed. Bankers here were puzzled yesterday to account for the sudden breaking of the dam last week. The only explanation offered for the export of gold at prices below the gold shipping points was the pressing needs of some of the central banks of Europe for the metal.

LOANS TO BROKERS OFF $585,000,000

LOWEST SINCE DEC. 14, 1927

For the fifth successive week the total of brokers' loans as announced yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York showed a heavy decrease. A decline of $585,000,000 was reported, bringing the total down to $3,587,000,000, the lowest point at which it has stood since Dec. 14, 1927, and $3,217,000,000 below the high figure for this year, reached on Oct. 2, which was $6,804,000,000.

The heavy decline, which took place in the face of a recovery in stock market prices, was accounted for by the fact that much of the buying of recent days has been for cash. In addition there has been almost no flotation of new issues. It was the flotation of new issues, in the opinion of bankers, which accounted largely for the rapid advance in the loan figures during the Summer and early Fall.

All classes of lenders reduced their loans. The heaviest cut was that made by local banks, which cut down their lending for their own account by $303,000,000. Loans for account of other than banking lenders showed the next largest drop, with a decline of $178,000,000. Out-of-town banks reduced their loans by $108,000,000.

Detailed Figures Shown.

Following are the detailed figures on stock and bond collateral loans made to brokers and dealers by reporting member banks in New York City:

(000,000 omitted.)

	Nov. 20, 1929.	Nov. 13, 1929.	Nov. 21, 1928.
For own account	955	1,156	1,126
For out-of-town banks	704	812	1,761
For others	2,031	2,204	2,280
Total	3,587	4,173	5,167

Of this week's total $3,145,000,000 consisted of demand loans, compared with $3,720,000,000 a week ago, and $442,000,000 of time loans, against $451,000,000 last week.

New York City banks were again able to reduce their borrowing at the Federal Reserve Bank, a decline of $7,000,000 during the week, bringing this item down to the negligible figure of $33,000,000. Total loans and investments as shown in the conditional statement of the New York City member banks fell $123,000,000 during the week to $8,215,000,000. Loans on securities showed a drop of $322,000,000, while all other loans advanced $133,000,000. One explanation advanced for the rise in all other loans during recent weeks, at a time when security loans have been falling rapidly, and there has been apparently no large pick-up in business demands for credit, is the fact that traders in the stock market called on for additional margin, have been borrowing money on their businesses and assets other than securities in order to strengthen their brokerage accounts.

Changes in the statement of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York followed closely the lines which have appeared since the decline in the stock market got under way. Discounts were again lower. A decline of $238,000 carried the total to $125,940,000. The bank's bill portfolio continued to run off, a drop of $3,638,000 during the week, carrying the figure to $73,754,000. The rapid series of cuts in open market bill rates, ten of which have been made in the past few weeks, has consistently left the bill-buying rate of the Federal Reserve out of line and, as a result, no bills have been offered to the bank. A small decline in holdings of government securities was shown, indicating that the local bank found conditions in the money market too easy to warrant any further expansion for the moment. The decline amounted to $802,000 and brought the total held by the bank down to $159,189,000.

The volume of Federal Reserve credit which the local Reserve bank has outstanding dropped $7,028,000, to $369,313,000. Gold holdings at the New York bank were somewhat lower, but a decline in Federal Reserve note circulation and in deposit liability lifted the ratio of reserves to liabilities to 80.3 per cent from 78.7 per cent last week.

The statement for the twelve banks of the Reserve System revealed a similar trend. Discounts were lower by $81,797,000, the total standing at $899,556,000. Open market purchases of bills were down $15,681,000 to $283,831,000. Holdings of government securities went up $13,972,000 to $326,528,000. The total outstanding volume of Federal Reserve credit dropped $70,039,000 to $1,530,285,000.

Total gold reserves for the system advanced $2,525,000 to $3,041,695,000, an increase which was particularly interesting in view of the export to various European countries in the past week of $11,212,000 in gold. Reserve note circulation and deposits fell off and as a result the reserve ratio advanced to 71.2 per cent from 69.5 per cent a week ago.

1,400,000 CHRYSLER CARS.

Company in Six Years Sold $1,200,000,000 Worth, Says Report.

A special report of the Chrysler Corporation, covering the six years since the first Chrysler-built car appeared, will be mailed to stockholders, dealers and employes today. The report points out that by the end of this year sales will reach 1,400,000 cars, valued at approximately $1,200,000,000.

Walter P. Chrysler, president and chairman of the board, said yesterday:

"Motor car production has been, with normal variations, consistently upward for the last thirty years. Adjustment of automobile production to temporary economic conditions from time to time simply accords with good industrial practice. The industry's long term outlook is healthier for these adjustments."

SEAT ON EXCHANGE $144,000 CHEAPER

LOWER ON THE CURB ALSO

One Changes Hands for $150,000, a Cut of $100,000 From Preceding Transfer.

Revealing for the first time the effect of the recent market reaction on the price of seats on the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Exchange, announcement was made yesterday that a membership in the former institution had been sold for $350,000, a decrease of $144,000 in price since the last previous sale, and one in the Curb, for $150,000, a decrease of $100,000.

These are the first transactions to be announced since the sweeping decline in the market. They show that the aggregate value of the 1,375 seats on the Stock Exchange has fallen from $679,250,000 before the break to $481,250,000, a shrinkage of $198,000,000. The aggregate value of the 550 regular memberships on the Curb Exchange fell from $137,500,000 to $82,500,000, a decrease of $55,000,000.

The names of the buyers and sellers in the latest deals were not disclosed, but it was said at the Curb that the transaction there was a "distress sale." By this it was meant that a member found himself obliged to sell his seat and had to offer it for what it would bring. Other seats are being offered at $225,000, it was said, but bids for seats at prices in the neighborhood of $200,000 are understood to have been withdrawn recently.

The highest price ever paid for a Curb seat was $254,000, in a transaction arranged on Sept. 24. The last transaction prior to that of yesterday, however, was at $250,000.

Demand for Seats Lags.

No explanation of the circumstances surrounding the Stock Exchange seat sale announced yesterday was obtainable. The transaction is subject to approval. The seat was sold "ex rights," that is, without the one-fourth interest in an additional seat that resulted from the increase early this year of the maximum membership from 1,100 to 1,375. The previous sale, ex rights, was made on Oct. 24, the price being $494,000. The highest price ever paid for a membership, ex rights, was $495,000. The last sale of a seat with right attached was at $625,000, in a transaction announced several months ago. There have been no transactions recently in seats with rights attached.

For some time, it is understood, there has been little demand for seats, except at prices which did not appeal to owners. Usually the price for seats fluctuates with the volume of business done on the exchanges, the peak prices on both the Stock Exchange and the Curb having been paid when volume was expanding rapidly during the big bull movement that preceded the recent break.

Until a few days ago the volume of trading was phenomenally heavy on both exchanges, but the lack of demand for seats was said to have been due to the fact that share prices were declining, suggesting to possible purchasers that the trading pace would not be maintained at the high levels which had been prevailing.

Brokers' Earnings Decline.

Floor brokers handled the heaviest commission business in the history of the exchanges during the recent declines, but in the last few days there has been a sharp contraction in business, with consequent reduction in the earnings of brokers.

It is understood that negotiations are under way for the transfer of other seats on both exchanges and that completion of the sales will be announced shortly. Two private transactions have been arranged recently involving Stock Exchange seats, one at a nominal price and the other for an undisclosed consideration.

The names of the buyers and sellers were announced yesterday in two other transactions. Donald C. Alford was revealed as the purchaser of the seat of Bart V. Smith, ex rights, and Albert P. Scott as the purchaser of the seat of William H. Eshbaugh, also ex rights, the consideration in both instances being nominal. Mr. Alford, if elected, will become a partner in the firm of Lage & Co., and Mr. Scott, if elected, will become a partner in W. H. Eshbaugh & Co. For some months Mr. Scott has been connected with Pynchon & Co.

The Stock Exchange announced also that the membership of Kenneth K. White had been transferred to Joseph A. Keenan Jr., and that of Casilear Cobb to Frank A. Miller.

FOX GETS THEATRE CHAIN.

Application for Listing of Stock Reveals Transaction.

Acquisition of the Libson & Heidings circuit of motion picture theatres, operating twelve houses in Cincinnati, Dayton and Columbus, by the Fox Film Corporation became known yesterday through an application to the New York Stock Exchange for listing the shares of the company to be used in the transaction. The application covers 51,360 additional shares of Class A common stock.

Other applications to list securities pending before the Exchange's committee on stock list, and which may be acted on at the next meeting, include:

BUDD WHEEL COMPANY—990,675 shares of common stock of no par value.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY—1,947,112 additional shares of new common stock without par value.

EDITH ROCKEFELLER McCORMICK TRUST—$11,000,000 collateral trust five-year 6 per cent gold notes, due July 1, 1934.

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY—21,250 additional shares of common stock of $20 par value.

COMMONWEALTH AND SOUTHERN CORPORATION—384,620 additional shares of common stock of no par value.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY—350,000 additional shares of ordinary capital stock of $100 par value.

MACK TRUCKS, INC.—7,699 additional shares of common stock without nominal or par value.

CHECK UP UNGER DEPOSITS.

State Investigators Find $9,100 Cash and $45,000 Credits.

Further examination yesterday of the affairs of Bertram A. Unger & Co., 37 Wall Street, accused by two complainants of failure to deliver securities purchased through the firm, disclosed that it had $9,100 on deposit in four banks, and customers' credit balances of $45,000, it was said yesterday at the Bureau of Securities of the State Attorney General's office.

The firm claims $40,000 owed by customers as part of its assets, but investigators for the Attorney General asserted that this money was not secured by collateral and a large part of it virtually was uncollectable. Despite this and the fact that the original complaints were understood to involve $140,000, Mr. Unger continued yesterday to be optimistic, and held that the house would "straighten everything out."

Whether the Attorney General's office is to take further action depends upon the outcome of the examination of the company's records by Deputy Attorney General A. M. Carroll. He is investigating the firm's explanation that the present situation arose from the action of banks in closing out loans because of fluctuating market prices, thus "forcing" the firm to wipe out customers.

AT THE END OF THE FIRST YEAR OF OPERATION

The officers and directors of Straus National Bank and Trust Company of New York wish to express their appreciation for the volume of business with which the bank has been favored during its first year. This business has included both commercial and thrift deposits, personal and corporate trusts and other banking services.

Several SECURITY SALESMEN

WHO are earnest workers, not afraid of getting back to the old days of making enough calls—will be added to the staff of an organization which represents one of the largest banking units in the world. If you are that kind of a salesman...if you are particular about the kind of security you want to sell, if you have a successful record and if you can sell a listed security that has in marked degree safety—yield and marketability write, giving a brief but complete outline of your past, references and your present connection—all of which will be held in confidence. Salary or Commission.

ENDURING FINANCIAL RECORDS

A limited number of copies of The New York Times each day are printed on imperishable rag paper which will last indefinitely in files. Banks and business houses that place their announcements in The New York Times will have the assurance that their advertisements appearing in the newspaper preferred for such announcements will also be a permanent record.

LISTED BONDS GAIN IN BROADER TRADING

Government Issues in Demand, With 5 at New High Records for Year to Date.

ADVANCES IN RAIL GROUP

But Santa Fe Convertible 4½s Loss 3½ Points—Better Tone in Foreign Loans.

The listed bond market showed further gains yesterday in considerably broader trading, with United States Government bonds again in brisk demand. Five of the active government issues reached new highs for the year, the First Liberty 4¼s at 100 31-32, the Fourth Liberty 4¼s at 101, the Fourth Liberty registered 4¼s at 100 28-32, the Treasury 4¼s at 112 23-32 and the Treasury 4s at 108 24-32. The Liberty 3½s, although not establishing a new high record, led the group from the standpoint of gains, with a net advance of 12-32. The only loss in the group yesterday was sustained by the Treasury 3¾s, due from 1943 to 1947, which dropped 3-32 to par.

Good gains were made by rail issues, particularly issues legal for investment by savings banks and trust funds in this State. One exception to the general rule was the decline of 3½ points in Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe convertible 4½s, which have been a market leader for some time. St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s of 1978 were bid up to a new high for the year at 91 in active trading, closing at 90¾, up 1¾ points. New Haven convertible 6s were marched up 2¾ points to 126, the day's high at the close.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey 4½s of 1948 jumped 10 points to 175 in light trading. Public utilities as a group were only moderately active. The usual heavy trading in the communication issues, however, resulted in a gain of 2 points for American Telephone and Telegraph convertible 4½s, while International Telephone convertible 4½s held unchanged at 129.

In the industrial list North American Cement 6½s touched a new low for 1929 at 40¼. Colon Oil 8s made a further recovery of 5¾ points, and the actively traded Texas Corporation convertible 5s held unchanged at 101¼.

Foreign bonds showed a better tone yesterday than on any previous day this week. Gains of several points were scored by issues which had recently been depressed to the lows of the year.

UTILITY EARNINGS.

Statements for Various Periods Issued by Public Service Corporations.

Tri-Utilities Corporation.

The consolidated income account of the Tri-Utilities Corporation for the twelve months ended on Sept. 30 shows total revenues of $36,204,010, compared with $32,226,567 for the preceding year. Gross income, after expenses, depreciation and taxes was $17,254,062 against $13,934,158. After interest and dividends on subsidiary companies' funded and unfunded debt, preferred stocks, class A stocks and earnings applicable to class A stocks and minority interest, the net income totaled $1,944,780. Net after bond interest was $1,539,750, and the balance to common was $913,750 after preferred dividend requirements, equal to $3.51 a share on the common shares outstanding.

The statement gives effect to the acquisition of all outstanding class B common stock of the Federal Water Service Corporation and the People's Light and Power Corporation, all common stock of the Power, Gas and Water Securities Corporation and a majority of the outstanding common stock of the American Natural Gas Corporation. It includes income from securities under contract of purchase and gives effect also to the annual fixed charges based upon securities to be outstanding upon completion of a proposed financing.

PENNSYLVANIA GAS STRUCK.

15,000,000 Cubic Feet Added to Possible Daily Output of Columbia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—Drilling by subsidiaries of the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation in Southwestern Pennsylvania has resulted in several rich gas strikes, the latest being an estimated production of 4,500,000 cubic feet on the Jesse McAfee farm, near this city.

Possible daily production of the corporation, which has been mentioned for various consolidations, has been increased 15,000,000 cubic feet daily by these strikes, which include the following: Cox heirs farm, near Waynesburg, 5,000,000 cubic feet; Nemacolin Country Club property, Beallsville, 2,000,000; Gibson Williams farm, Centreville, 1,500,000; J. G. Barr, Marianna, 500,000.

Associated Gas Adds Units.

As a step in the consolidation of the New York State properties of the Associated Gas and Electric System, the New York State Electric and Gas Corporation has merged into its system the Delaware and Otsego Light and Power Company, while the Eastern New York Electric and Gas Company, a subsidiary, has merged with the Berlin Electric Light, Heat and Power Company.

Gain in Cities Service Stockholders.

The Cities Service Company announced yesterday that the number of its common stockholders increased by 55,493 in the past month, bringing the total on Nov. 15 to 308,727. The gain was the largest for any month in the company's history. The number of holders of all securities of the organization is now over 800,000, the announcement said.

EXTENDS TIME FOR RIGHTS.

Transamerica Corporation Changes Date to March 5 Next.

The Transamerica Corporation, holding company for the banking interests of A. P. Giannini, has announced an extension of the time limit on rights issued to stockholders for the purchase of additional stock from Jan. 4 to March 5, 1930. The rights offered gave shareholders the privilege of subscribing to one new share for every twenty-five shares held at $55 a share.

The recent decline in security prices carried the quotation on Transamerica stock, which is traded on the New York Curb Exchange, as low as 20¾. The recovery has carried the price back to around 34¾ a share. The move taken by the Transamerica Corporation is similar to that of several other companies which found that the sudden decline in security prices had made rights which they issued to stockholders temporarily valueless.

$30,000,000 ONTARIO ISSUE.

Flotation Expected in a Few Months as Market Improves.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 21 (AP).—The long term bonds the Ontario government contemplates floating in a few months will be approximately $30,000,000, Dr. J. D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, estimated today.

"The New York market crash has improved conditions," he said. "We are keeping in touch with the market and believe it may show further improvement."

BOND FLOTATIONS.

Park-Plaza Company.

Offering will be made soon of a new issue of $3,900,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent bonds of the Park-Plaza, a twenty-eight-story apartment hotel in St. Louis, by the Greenbaum Sons' Investment Company. The estimated value of the building, which is under construction, is $6,057,000. The bonds will be a direct obligation of the Park-Plaza Company, whose common stock is all owned by the Koplar Company.

Clinton Trust Company.

The Clinton Trust Company will offer today a block of its short-term certificates, maturing on any specified date desired between Jan. 1, 1930, and June 30, 1930, at prices to yield 5 per cent.

$990,000 Sao Paulo Bonds Called.

Funds for the sinking fund requirements on Jan. 1 of the State of Sao Paulo (Brazil) fifteen-year 8 per cent sinking fund gold bonds, external loan of 1921, have been received by Speyer & Co., who announce that $990,000 of bonds have been drawn for redemption at 105 per cent on that date. The numbers of the bonds will be published on next Tuesday.

To Redeem $132,500 Siemens Bonds

Dillon, Read & Co., as sinking fund agents for Siemens & Halske and Siemens & Schuckertwerke, have issued a notice for the redemption of $132,500 ten-year 7 per cent sinking fund bonds, due on Jan. 1, 1935, for sinking fund purposes on Jan 1 next. The bonds have been designated by lot and will be redeemed at 103 and accrued interest.

Writes $2,467,000 Surety Bond.

The National Surety Company wrote a temporary administration bond for Frank E. Stultz, Mary E. Potter and Samuel S. Conover in the estate of Walter H. D. Killough for $2,467,000 yesterday.

Awards of New Bonds to Bankers Announced—Other Issues to Be Offered.

State of California.

The State of California awarded yesterday at a price of 103.781 a new issue of $1,000,000 4½ per cent bonds, maturing serially on Jan. 3, 1957, to 1960, to a group comprising R. H. Moulton & Co., the California National Company and the Security Company of Los Angeles. The proceeds will be used for constructing State and State University buildings. The State's last bond issue, $800,000 of harbor improvement 4s, brought 99.96, or a 4.42 per cent basis.

The First National Bank of New York and associates made the second highest tender, that of 103.589. Other syndicates bid as follows: Bankers Company of New York group, 103.209; National City Company, 103.056; Harris Trust and Savings Bank, 102.895; American National Company, 102.917; Chase Securities Corporation, 102.817; Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, 102.30; Guaranty Company of New York, 102.209, and Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., 101.587.

Syracuse, N. Y.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have obtained the award of an issue of $700,000 City of Syracuse (N. Y.) short-term notes, maturing on May 21, 1930, on a 4.61 per cent basis.

Camden County, N. J.

Camden County, N. J., according to an announcement made yesterday, will open sealed bids on Dec. 9 on a new issue of $1,835,000 bonds, consisting of $1,385,000 building bonds, due Jan. 1, 1931 to 1962, and $500,000 park bonds, due Jan. 1, 1931 to 1960. The last time the county was in the market was on Dec. 7, 1928, with an issue of $2,256,000 4½s, which were sold on a 4.32 per cent basis.

Bergen County, N. J.

Bergen County, N. J., has issued a call for sealed bids to be opened on Dec. 3 on a new issue of $1,270,000 public improvement bonds, maturing serially from Dec. 15, 1930 to 1951. Bidders are required to stipulate the rate of interest at not to exceed 4½ per cent. Last December the county marketed $1,127,000 bonds as 4½s at 100.74, equivalent to a 4.42 per cent interest cost.

King County, Wash.

King County, Wash., which includes the city of Seattle, will be in the market on Dec. 17 with a new issue of $500,000 bonds for bridge purposes, according to word received here yesterday.

East Hartford, Conn.

Offering was made yesterday of a new issue of $380,000 town of East Hartford (Conn.) 4¼ per cent school bonds, due serially from Nov. 1, 1931 to 1950, by B. J. Van Ingen & Co. The bonds were priced to yield 4.35 to 5 per cent. The town reported an assessed valuation for 1929 of $30,723,268 and total bonded debt of $2,298,000, including this issue.

Columbus, Ohio.

An issue of $488,900 City of Columbus (Ohio) street bonds, due on March 1, 1932 to 1941, was awarded yesterday at auction at a price of 100.002 for the bonds as 4½s. The successful syndicate was composed of Kean, Taylor & Co. and Ames, Emerich & Co., Inc. The second highest bid was 101.10 for 4½s, by the Continental Illinois Company, and the third bid, 101.09 for 4½s, by Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co.

P. R. R. WILL INSTALL SAFETY CAB SIGNALS

Devices to Be Used on Eastern Lines Flash Wayside Warnings and Blow Whistle.

$16,000,000 WILL BE SPENT

Work in Ohio Will Result in Automatic Train Stops From Pittsburgh to Indianapolis.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will extend on its main line between Newark, Ohio, and Columbus, Ohio, a distance of thirty miles, its system of automatic train stops, and install on all Eastern lines a continuous cab signal that it has developed, it was announced yesterday. The work in Ohio will result in the road's 379 miles between Pittsburgh and Indianapolis being protected.

Installation of more automatic block signals will bring the total cost of the improvement to $16,000,000. Automatic train controls will stop a train when the engineman disregards or fails to notice a danger signal.

The New York Central, with these devices, has protected its 960 miles of line between Chicago and New York and the 200 miles between Boston and Albany on the Boston & Albany.

Between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington the Pennsylvania lines will be equipped with a system that reproduces in the engine cab the wayside signal indications and sounds a warning whistle. This device was referred to by the Interstate Commerce Commission in its last report on automatic train control devices when it said "the development of cab signals of the type now in use on the Pennsylvania appears to be an important step forward in the art of signaling and worthy of special attention."

Additional automatic block signals will be installed on lines connecting New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and St. Louis. This means that in many sections block signals operated by hand will be operated automatically by the movement of the trains.

Unlike automatic train controls, the continuous cab signal does not stop the train when it is disregarded or unnoticed by the engine crew. It does, however, show in two miniature light panels, one for the engineman and one for the fireman, the condition of the track ahead. When cautionary signals are displayed, a whistle blows until the engineman stops it.

Freight Traffic Sets Record, May Be Great as in 1926

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP).—Freight traffic over the nation's railroads so far in 1929 has been greater than for the corresponding period in any previous recorded year, the American Railway Association announced today.

Members of the association here for the annual Fall meeting heard that conservative estimates indicated the number of cars loaded with revenue freight for the entire year would be approximately the same as that for 1926, when loadings were the largest of any year on record.

Loading of revenue freight from Jan. 1 to Nov. 9 totaled 46,678,086 cars, exceeding by 79,209 cars the previous high record for the same period set in 1926.

BANK STOCKS LEAD UNLISTED ADVANCE

Shares of First National Rise 300 Points and of Fifth Avenue Bank, 200.

INSURANCE ISSUES FIRM

Upturns Are Small Among Industrials—Technicolor Adds 3 Points to Gains.

Bank shares were generally strong in the over-the-counter market yesterday, with most other issues steady. Prices were firm, although trading was below normal. An advance occurred in the last hour of trading and most prices closed higher.

First National Bank gained 300 points, Fifth Avenue 200, Brooklyn 20, Guaranty 15 and Public 8. Gains were made also by America, Corn Exchange, Manufacturing, Central Hanover, Irving and United States. Empire declined 5 and Interstate and Title Guarantee lost 3.

Insurance stocks were quiet but firm. Travelers rose 50 points and National Union declined 10. Sylvania, Globe, American Equitable, Merchants and Manufacturers, Knickerbocker, Bronx Fire, New York Fire, Independence Indemnity, Brooklyn, Republic of Pittsburgh and Independence were up from 2 to 8 points.

In the industrial group, Technicolor gained 3 points, National Casket 2 and West Virginia Pulp 1. In the telephone group, New England Telephone gained 2 points and Cincinnati and Suburban gained 1.

TERMINUS READY APRIL 1.

P. R. R.'s Rail-to-Ship Project at Jersey City to Cover Nine Acres.

The first unit of the Pennsylvania Railroad's rail-to-ship terminus at Jersey City will probably be ready on April 1, it was announced yesterday. The terminus will cover more than nine acres. It will have three eight-story pierhead warehouses, an eight-story coal storage building and two eight-story dry storage warehouses and manufacturing lofts, affording 26,000,000 cubic feet of storage space. The piers range in length from 640 to 900 feet and provision is made for a third pier.

The terminal also has a station for less-than-carload freight and offices and display rooms to be rented out. The completed unit will have ten passenger and twelve freight elevators. It will be supervised by the Pennsylvania Dock and Warehouse Company, to which the railroad has leased the land. The yards will have a capacity of 410 cars. There will be covered platforms served by tracks and concrete bridges for truck delivery.

$400,000 FOR EQUIPMENT.

The International Railways of Central America will buy at a cost of $400,000 three locomotives, passenger coaches, box cars, stock cars and other rolling stock to prepare for the opening of the connecting link between the Guatemala and Salvador systems on Jan. 1. The connection will save Salvador coffee shippers ten to fifteen days in the movement of consignments to the United States and European ports.

New Orleans will be brought into closer contact with the west coast of Central America by means of the extension. Ships now go from New Orleans to Puerto Barrios in less than four days. Express trains will provide a thirteen-hour service from that point to Salvador City on the west coast, so that both cities may be reached from New Orleans in approximately the same time.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

Statements for October and Ten Months With Comparable Figures From Previous Years.

The Southern Pacific reported yesterday the first increase in October net operating income to be shown by a large railway for the month. The Nickel Plate reported a decrease.

The earnings follow:

INSURANCE RATES CUT.

Protection Against Damage From Falling Aircraft Costs Less.

A reduction in the rate of insurance against property damage from falling aircraft was announced yesterday by the Continental Insurance Company and the other companies in the America Fore group. The reduction, which was made because the records of the companies showed that travel by air is steadily becoming safer, amounts to slightly more than 62 per cent.

The policy contract has also been broadened for this type of insurance. The rate for combined protection against dwellings and their contents by aircraft or street vehicles is now $12.50 for $10,000 values for a term of three years, and $5 for the same amount for one year, with the rates on commercial properties slightly higher.

Store Chain Opens 17th Unit.

The American Department Stores Corporation has opened a store, known as the J. M. Hartley Company, in Fairmont, W. Va. This is the seventeenth unit in the chain.

NEWSPRINT RATE HEARING.

Wisconsin Group Opposes Change in Freight Charge Before I. C. C.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 21.—The Northwest had its innings when the hearing on proposed increases in freight rates for newsprint was resumed in the Hotel Traymore today before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Your decision in this matter means more to Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northern Michigan than to any other section of the United States," said J. E. Bryant, representing the Wisconsin Paper and Pulp Manufacturers Traffic Association. "We do not seek an increased rate, nor do we ask for a reduction. Leave the rates as they are. That would suit us."

Increased rates would drive Wisconsin mills out of the national market, he asserted, and permit the wider competition of Eastern mills. They would permit the transportation by water of paper under conditions that even the mills closest to Chicago could not profitably combat, he said.

GAIN FOR LIFE INSURANCE.

Sales in October 4 Per Cent Higher Than Year Ago, Bureau Reports.

Sales of life insurance during October were 4 per cent higher than in October, 1928, according to the Life Insurance Sales Bureau at Hartford, Conn. The report, which is based on figures furnished by seventy-eight life insurance companies, shows that during the first ten months of 1929 every section of the country increased its production of ordinary life insurance over the corresponding period of 1928.

Sales of life insurance in Canada in the first ten months of this year increased more than 7 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, the report declares.

SUES BROKER TO GET STOCK HELD AS LIEN

Providence Insurance Concern Demands $138,699 Securities From F. B. Keech & Co.

ALLEGES IT PAID IN FULL

Purchase Made Through Exchange Firm Which Failed and Is Said to Be in Debt to Defendant.

An insurance company that heeded advice to buy stocks for investment when the market was at the bottom, found it necessary yesterday to file suit in the Supreme Court to get possession of securities worth $138,699 which were fully paid for. The suit, which arises out of the failure of the Providence brokerage firm of Mandeville, Brooks & Chaffee, is brought by the Providence Washington Insurance Company against F. B. Keech & Co., in whose office Charles C. Chaffee Jr., member of the firm and of the New York Stock Exchange, had desk room.

Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel will hear today an application by the insurance company, claiming to be the owner of the stocks, to restrain F. B. Keech & Co. from transferring or making any disposition, pending the trial, of 300 shares of preferred stock of the Electric Auto Light, 500 shares of American Can common, 1,000 Standard Brands and 300 Remington Rand first preferred stock.

The complaint alleges that an order was given to Mandeville, Brooks & Chaffee in Providence in the belief that since the firm was a member of the New York Exchange, it would execute the order itself on the floor of the Exchange. The plaintiff said that the stock was fully paid for and that the Providence brokers directed the New York firm through whom they were bought to deliver the securities to the plaintiff, but that the Keech firm now contends that it has a lien on the stock because of the Providence firm's general indebtedness to it.

The injunction petition filed by the insurance company alleges that the New York brokers have no legal right to hold the stock and that if they do retain possession they are required to satisfy their lien against stocks purchased for Mandeville, Brooks & Chaffee first out of other securities which have not been fully paid for before resorting to the stocks owned by the plaintiff. A decision by the Court of Appeals is cited in support of this contention.

Counsel for the plaintiff said in an affidavit that when a demand for the stocks was made on George Rushton of the Keech firm he said that the only customer it recognized in the purchase of the stock is the Providence firm. The plaintiff contends that the defendants knew when the securities were ordered by the Providence brokers that the Providence firm's account "was such as to make it doubtful if it would continue to honor orders transmitted for the purchase of stocks for customers."

The complaint states that the stocks were purchased on Nov. 6, 7, 8 and 13. The suspension of the Providence firm was announced from the floor of the Stock Exchange shortly after noon on Monday.

FATIGUE IN INDUSTRY CUT BY REST PERIODS

National Founders Group Hears Causes of Poor Morale—Elections Close Session.

Organic fatigue and the morale of employes in industry, the subject of recent experiments conducted by the Personal Research Federation, were described by Elton Mayo, Professor of Industrial Research at Harvard, at the concluding session yesterday of the convention of the National Founders Association in the Hotel Astor.

Rest periods for employes, Mr. Mayo said, have decreased organic fatigue in England and wherever permitted has tended to increase efficiency. The experiments showed, however, he said, that organic fatigue is rare nowadays as there is very little heavy muscular work in industry. Poor morale, he said, was found more frequently as a result of interference, wrong supervision and other adverse conditions of work.

A definite system of training apprentices with promotion at the end of a six-months' course has solved the problem of obtaining apprentices, A. E. McClintock, commissioner of the association, declared, and public schools in several cities are providing this course. The committee on industrial education, in its annual report, submitted to the convention yesterday, urged that this training system be adopted throughout the industry.

Elections were as follows:

THOMAS S. HAMMOND of the Whiting Corporation of Harvey, Ill., president.

L. H. TAYLOR of Chicago, secretary.

THE CHICAGO TRUST COMPANY, treasurer.

S. WELLS UTLEY of Detroit, vice president succeeded D. F. O'Brien of East Orange, N. J.

A. E. McCLINTOCK of Chicago, commissioner.

ADVERTISING CHIEF TALKS.

Benson Accuses Newspapers of Favoring Local Space Users.

John Benson, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, speaking yesterday at a luncheon of the National Newspaper Group of the Advertising Club of New York held in cooperation with the Six-Point League in the Advertising Club, 23 Park Avenue, discussed problems affecting the purchase and sale of newspaper advertising space.

Mr. Benson said there was discrimination against national advertisers, in that local advertisers bought space at lower rates. The root of the evil was the destructive competition between local publishers themselves, he said, and the solution was the equalization of rates.

"Local advertising is not the power it was," said Mr. Benson. "The national advertiser is the rapidly growing power, and publishers will find that they cannot discriminate against big business; that in the future they will have to give in to the wants of our huge, growing national advertisers."

To Talk on Hoover Prosperity Plan.

Whether President Hoover can "restore confidence" in the business world is scheduled for discussion tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock over WABC's nation-wide network by Leroy D. Peavey, president of the Babson Statistical Organization. The address will be presented as one of the series of talks given weekly at the same hour over WABC.

UPSWING CONTINUES ON CURB EXCHANGE

Moderate Gains Scored All Along the Line, With the Utilities Leading.

OIL STOCKS ARE STRONGER

Third Consecutive Day of the Recovery From the Year's Low Quotations.

Leading stocks on the New York Curb Exchange mounted yesterday on the third consecutive day of recovery and the sixth market day since the low points for the year. The advances were moderate but sustained, with the utilities in the lead. Improvement in the oils and investment trusts also continued and the general list remained firm.

Among the utility leaders were Electric Bond and Share, National Public Service, Northern States Power, American Light and Traction, American and Foreign Power warrants, American Gas and Electric and American Superpower, with gains also appearing in Allied Power and Light, Niagara Hudson Power and United Light and Power A. Cities Service lost fractionally.

In the oil section Standards of Indiana, Kansas and Kentucky, Humble Oil and Gulf Oil were strong. Investment trust gains included American Cities Power and Light, Electric Power Associates, Goldman Sachs, Fourth National, General American, Haygart, Insull Utilities, Transamerica and Utility and Industrials.

CURB MEMBER SUSPENDED.

Max Winkelman Said to Be Unable to Meet His Engagements.

Suspension of Max Winkelman, a floor trader, was announced yesterday by the New York Curb Exchange. The reason given was that he was unable to meet his engagements.

Mr. Winkelman, who had been a member of the Curb since 1921, was not a partner in any firm and did no business for public account. He had an office with T. J. Bell & Co., also suspended by the Curb recently. His obligations, it was said, were not large.

Mr. Winkelman is the fourth Curb member to be suspended since the recent market reaction.

RIGHTS CONTRACTS VOIDED.

Curb Exchange Rules on Offering by Associated Gas.

The committee on securities of the New York Curb Exchange ruled yesterday that contracts made in rights of the Associated Gas and Electric Company to subscribe for $8 interest-bearing allotment certificates shall be null and void, in view of the reduction in the subscription price from $133 to $120 per allotment certificate and other changes.

The committee considered the changes were material variations in the terms of the offering.

CLEAN NEWS

The success of The Times offers no better proof than the fact that clean news is a first requisite if a newspaper is to pass threescore and ten. It is well for our younger papers to heed the example so wisely set and adhered to by The New York Times.

WARNER PICTURES EARNS $17,271,805

Profits for Year, Including Stanley and First National, Increase 744 Per Cent.

$6.28 A SHARE ON COMMON

Ludlum Steel, Curtiss Aeroplane and Other Corporations Also Report.

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., reported yesterday net profits of $17,271,805 for the year ended on Aug. 31. This includes the profits of the Stanley Company of America and First National Pictures, Inc., subsidiaries of Warner Brothers. Net profits for the year were 744.6 per cent greater than those of the year ended on Aug. 31, 1928, which were reported as $2,044,841.

The net profit for the last year is equivalent to $6.28 a share on the 2,627,405 shares of the common stock outstanding, after deduction of preferred dividends. This compares with net profit equivalent to $3.72 a share on the 550,000 combined Class A and common stock outstanding on Aug. 31, 1928. Last June the company split the common stock on a two-for-one basis, and recently increased the dividend rate to $4 annually a share. Common stock and surplus on Aug. 31 totaled $73,611,900, against $3,075,185 on Aug. 31, 1928. Total assets were $127,150,024, against $15,755,801 a year previously.

Harry Warner, president of the company, in a letter to stockholders, accompanying the report, said:

"On the basis of the first two months of the current fiscal year and contracts which have been written, it is expected that the net profits for the current year will show a substantial increase over those for the year ended Aug. 31, 1929."

REDEMPTION AND FINANCIAL NOTICES

The Times prints more financial advertising than any other publication in the world.

To the Holders of

Fifty Year First Consolidated Mortgage Gold Bonds (Series A and B) of

NEW YORK STATE RAILWAYS

Default having been made in the payment of the November 1, 1929 coupon, united action for the protection of the interests of the holders of the above described bonds is imperative.

The undersigned Committee deems it essential that a comprehensive and unbiased examination be made of the operation of the New York State Railways, its earning capacity, the value, condition and character of the properties covered by the mortgage securing the bonds, the inter-relationship of such properties and generally of the affairs and management of the system, and the Committee has therefore retained Messrs. Coverdale & Colpitts of New York to undertake such examination.

Associated Gas and Electric Company interests—which own and control the stock of the Railways—made an offer on October 25, 1929 to acquire the bonds. It was stated this offer was made "reluctantly" and "from the standpoint of public good-will" pending the solution of what the Associated Gas and Electric Company interests referred to as "a distressing problem." But, following the announcement of the formation of the undersigned Committee, a better offer was substituted.

An analysis of the publicly available facts with regard to the situation (even without the thorough investigation planned by the undersigned Committee) will show that what is now offered is in no way commensurate with the real value of the bonds.

The desire thus evidenced by Associated Gas and Electric Company interests to acquire the bonds upon their own terms makes it all the more urgent that the rights of the bondholders should be protected by a committee having no affiliations with the Associated Gas and Electric Company interests, and bondholders can well be assured that they can rely on the undersigned Committee for independent action in behalf of those who deposit their holdings with it.

Bonds with the November 1, 1929 and subsequent coupons attached, or in negotiable form if registered, should be deposited on or before December 10, 1929, with The Equitable Trust Company of New York (11 Broad Street, New York City) as Depositary under a Deposit Agreement dated as of November 4, 1929. Copies of the Deposit Agreement may be obtained from the Depositary or the Secretary of the Committee, upon request.

Certificates of Deposit in negotiable form (with notation of the series represented thereby) will be delivered in exchange for the bonds deposited and in due course application will be made to list the certificates on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Committee undertakes to represent only those bonds which are deposited with it and the unusual situation confronting the bondholders requires that the deposit of bonds with the Committee should not be delay

LONSDALE STRESSES CHANGES IN BANKING

American Association Head Says Vision Is Needed to Solve New Problems.

SPEAKS AT DINNER HERE

Villard Urges Bankers to "Get Behind" Hoover in Naval Limitation Movement.

The greatest need of the world today, according to John G. Lonsdale, president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Company of St. Louis and president of the American Bankers Association, is for men who will interpret our times. Speaking last night at the annual Bankers Forum dinner of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, given at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Mr. Lonsdale discussed the subject of "Leadership."

"Leadership," he said, "is founded upon ability to think and to interpret." What is needed today, he continued, is "modern Daniels in agriculture, finance, politics, industry, who can see through the fog and haze that enshrowd our difficult problems and advise, instruct and influence those who are either indifferent or limited in their perceptions."

Other speakers at the dinner were William K. Payne of Auburn, N. Y., president of the New York State Bankers' Association; W. J. Evans of Dallas, Texas, president of the American Institute of Banking, and Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation.

Mr. Villard spoke of the impetus to world peace from the visit of Premier MacDonald to this country and asked the bankers to "get behind the President and let him know that you stand shoulder to shoulder with him and with the country at the forthcoming naval conference in London."

Frederick W. Gehle, second vice president of the Chase National Bank presided at the dinner.

Lonsdale's Address.

Mr. Lonsdale's address marked the occasion of his first public appearance in this city since his election to the leadership of the American Bankers Association which took place at the beginning of October when the association held its annual convention in San Francisco.

During the course of his speech he paid glowing tribute to New York City as a producer of leaders among men.

"New York has developed more big men per square foot," he said, "than has any other place. It is a sort of proving ground, a finishing school, a university in post-graduate courses in business."

Pursuing his theme upon the need for interpreters of modern trends, Mr. Lonsdale said, in part:

"Through the thinker and the interpreter unknown situations are disclosed or puzzling conditions explained in logical light. The American people are so constituted that they can meet and combat any situation, once it is known and understood. It is the unknown that comes like the thief in the night and brings disaster.

"Some one has defined prosperity as something the business men create for the politicians to take credit for. But America's present-day prosperity can be defined as a product resulting from the business man's ability to study and to interpret. Huge corporations maintain research staffs and special bureaus to interpret the times for them. Disaster looms in the offing for any industry that goes blithely on its way day after day without due regard to significant trends in trade and business. So rapidly do changes come about one cannot afford to relax his vigilance, even momentarily.

"What is true of industry is true of banking. Leaders of finance have discovered they cannot remain passive in an age when all the rest of the world is in a transitional stage. The modern banker not only must know about the changing styles in other lines of business, but above all must be alert to the transformations which are taking place in his own.

More Services Now Rendered.

"He must be a man of keener, broader vision, because the order of the day is for larger units of service. Mergers and consolidations have taken place in great numbers. We now talk of billions where a few years ago we talked of millions or only thousands. Where we rendered one service a few decades back, we now render a half dozen, or more.

"And perhaps we have only begun our changes, for banking of today faces many revolutionary transformations. What disposition is to be made of the many problems, including chain systems, group operation, and branch banking, will depend in large measure upon our leaders, upon the students and the interpreters who can read accurately the signs of the times so that we may base future actions and hopes upon their wisdom.

"Let us hope that these 65,000 men and women of the American Institute of Banking will realize that the quickest way to go to the top is to go to the bottom of things, and that among them will be found many who will not only aspire to leadership but will be successful in reaching their coveted goal."

Designation of Cleveland for the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association next year by the administrative committee of the association was announced yesterday by Mr. Lonsdale. The convention will be held Sept. 29 to Oct. 2. The annual Spring meeting of the executive council of the association will be held at the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt Hotel in Old Point Comfort, Va., May 5 to 8.

Budd Wheel's Business Normal.

In a letter yesterday to the stockholders of the Budd Wheel Company, Edward G. Budd, president, said shipments during the current quarter had been at the normal rate for this period of the year, although slightly less than in the previous quarter. He said the number of advance orders received for next year insured steady expansion in the volume of business.

WESTCHESTER INQUIRY SIFTS BANK ACCOUNTS

Supervisors E. P. Barrett, Taylor and Washburn Called With Their Checking Records.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Henry A. Wise, one of the special Attorneys General who will prosecute the State's case against Republican members of the Westchester Board of Supervisors and others involved in "suspicious" county land transactions, announced today that three members of the Budget Committee of the board had been asked to appear before him with their bank accounts. He required, he said, that the bank accounts be certified by the banks involved.

One of the admitted leaders in the county's land transaction of July 1, which was the basis for the opening of the State's investigation, appeared before Mr. Wise today. He was the first who had been asked to bring bank records before the investigation. He is Edward Percy Barrett, chairman of the Committee on Budget and Appropriation, who admitted before Samuel Untermyer in the preliminary State investigation that he was responsible for the manner in which the transaction was handled.

Others requested to appear with their bank accounts were Howard R. Washburn, chairman of the board, against whom the investigators will prosecute a separate case, and Supervisor Benjamin I. Taylor of Harrison. Mr. Wise and Sydney A. Syme, his associate, are preparing to present the Washburn case and that involving the Republican members of the board to the extraordinary grand jury which will reconvene here Nov. 26.

Mr. Untermyer said in his report to the Governor that his investigation, was hampered by lack of subpoena power which would have enabled him to check the banking records of those involved in the transactions.

Mr. Wise has examined five members of the Budget Committee in addition to the three who were asked to bring their bank records, and also Harold Pasket, clerk of the committee.

COLOMBIAN BANK REPORTS.

Mortgage Institution Shows Increase in Earnings This Year.

Earnings of the Mortgage Bank of Colombia as shown in the semi-annual report received by Baker, Kellogg & Co., Inc., and Ames, Emerich & Co., Inc., show a sharp increase for the six months ended on June 30, compared with the same period in 1928. The earnings were 447,524 pesos this year against 321,659 pesos for the first six months of 1928.

As of June 30, this balance sheet of the bank shows total resources of 38,511,572 pesos as against 37,792,697 on Dec. 31, 1928. The bank has a capital of 4,000,000 pesos, a legal reserve of 1,844,000 pesos, a contingent reserve of 80,317 pesos and profit and loss of 447,524 pesos, making a total net worth of 6,371,841 pesos.

BANK STOCK PRICES CONTINUE LATE RISE

Average of Sales Now at Two and One-half Times Book Value.

BIG DROP IN TWO MONTHS

Figures for Fifteen Institutions Show Shares of Five Exceed Triple of Book Value.

Stocks of banks in this city at current levels are selling at approximately two and one-half times book value on the average, while at their recent low prices they were at about twice their book value, according to figures compiled by Gilbert Elliott & Co. Less than two months ago, however, they were selling for about four times book value, while individual issues such as National City Bank sold for more than seven times book value at its high point.

The following tabulation, covering fifteen leading issues, shows that Empire Trust, currently selling for 1.59 times book value, has the lowest ratio of prices to book value, while Central-Hanover, Bankers Trust, Corn Exchange and National City are the only issues selling for more than three times book value. In the tabulation book value is adjusted to include the bank's equity in any subsidiary security company, while in the case of City and First National, the book value is estimated:

	Book Value.	Nov. 20 Price.	Ratio.
America	90	160	1.78
Bankers Trust	45	145	3.38
Brooklyn Trust	389	800	2.06
Central Hanover	95	335	3.52
Chase	125	370	2.62

Irving	26	70	2.31
Manhattan	71	120	1.63
New York Trust	83	250	2.69
Average			2.59

At the end of 1928 these bank stocks were selling for about 2.80 times book value, while at the end of 1927 a ratio of 2.46 times book value prevailed.

West Virginia Bank Is Closed.

PHILIPPI, W. Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—The Peoples Bank of Philippi, a State banking institution, was closed today by the State Banking Department for liquidation on account of frozen assets and unusual withdrawals.

Straus Bank's First Anniversary.

The first anniversary of the founding of the Straus National Bank and Trust Company will be celebrated today. At the close of business yesterday the bank reported deposits of $17,952,297 and undivided profits of $573,778.

Drop in Member Bank Reserve Deposits Shown in Federal Board's Weekly Report

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve Banks on Nov. 20, made public by the Federal Reserve Board, shows decreases for the week of $71,800,000 in holdings of discounted bills and of $15,700,000 in bills bought in open market and increases of $14,000,000 in holdings of United States securities. Member bank reserve deposits declined $89,800,000 and Federal Reserve note circulation $12,200,000, while government deposits increased $7,800,000 and cash reserves $8,300,000. Total bills and securities were $76,000,000 below the amount reported a week ago.

Holdings of discounted bills declined $29,700,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, $22,400,000 at Philadelphia, $13,400,000 at Cleveland, $12,600,000 at Boston and $5,400,000 at Minneapolis, and increased $6,000,000 at Richmond. The System's holdings of bills bought in open market declined $15,700,000 and of United States bonds $3,700,000, while holdings of treasury notes increased $13,300,000 and of treasury certificates $4,400,000.

The principal changes in Federal Reserve notes circulation for the week include decreases of $5,100,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, $3,600,000 at Cleveland and $5,500,000 at New York, and an increase of $2,100,000 at Richmond.

STRUCTURAL STEEL GAINS

Orders in Week 41,000 Tons, an Increase of 15,000.

An increase in structural steel orders to 41,000 tons during the past week, against 26,000 tons in the preceding week has been reported. Inquiries were for nearly 60,000 tons, compared with 19,000 tons in the week before.

The week's outstanding awards included 1,000 tons for a New York apartment building to the Easton Structural Steel Company; 12,300 tons for the New York subway to the American Bridge Company; 6,500 tons for the Ford Motor assembly plant, Edgewater, N. J., to McClintic-Marshall Company.

Important inquiries included 40,000 tons for the Cincinnati Union Terminal; Company, 5,100 tons for New York subway; [illegible] tons for a New York building.

WHEAT RISE HELPED BY UPTURNS ABROAD

Heavy Abandonment of Planted Areas in Argentina Also Adds to Strength.

CORN IS A LITTLE HIGHER

Buying of Futures in Oats Offsets Cash Sales—Rye Up, With Trading Light.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 21.—A broadening in speculative interest occurred in the wheat market today, with free buying developing on the strength abroad and on an official Argentine estimate showing that 3,238,000 acres of wheat had been abandoned in that country and that the total remaining for harvest was 4,568,000 acres under that of last year. Commission houses, locals and shorts here were free buyers and prices advanced 3½ to 3¾ cents to a new high on the present movement and to the best figures since Nov. 4. A reaction of around a cent from the top resulted from profit-taking and selling against offers. Net gains for the day were 2⅞ to 2⅞ cents.

Winnipeg reported free buying by houses with foreign connections but failed to reflect fully the upturn here and gained only 2 to 2¼ cents. Buenos Aires also reacted from the top with a rise of 1 to 1⅝ cents and Rosario 2¼ cents higher at the last.

Rust reports and indications of deterioration in Argentina are commencing to have more effect on the market. Private cables told of rust developing in the southern sections, where the harvest is still several weeks away. The crop there is generally estimated at 215,000,000 bushels, suggesting 135,000,000 for export, although private estimates indicate as low as 95,000,000 bushels.

Export demand was fair with sales of 1,000,000 bushels in all positions, including a fair quantity of hard Winter. No change was reported in the basis at the Gulf, which remains firm. Liverpool May wheat closed at 9¼ cents over Chicago today, the widest difference in many weeks. Futures there were 2⅜ to 2¾d higher at the last.

While sentiment is generally bullish, and many traders are looking for the Federal Farm Board to take further action to bring about higher wheat prices, the feeling in other quarters is that the upturn will be hard to maintain unless foreign buying is heavy. The United States can export 28,000,000 bushels a month from now until June 30 and still leave a good carryover.

Primary receipts were 533,000 bushels; a week ago 504,000, and a year ago 1,719,000 bushels. Shipments were 691,000 bushels; a week ago 909,000 and a year ago 838,000.

Corn was higher early with wheat and on short coverings, which carried the December up almost 2 cents to the best figure since Nov. 7. Increased pressure later made the finish unchanged to ¼ cent lower. Country offerings were fair, there being purchases of 70,000 bushels to arrive and shipping sales of 97,000 bushels. The spot basis was steady to 1 cent lower on new. Argentine corn for may shipment was reported offered at 85 cents c.i.f. Montreal, or about 11 cents under the close of the Chicago May futures today.

Primary receipts were 586,000 bushels; a week ago 967,000 and a year ago 754,000. Shipments were 471,000 bushels; a week ago 478,000 and a year ago 642,000.

Outside interest in oats was larger than of late. Scattered buying of futures more than offset selling by cash interests and longs. The close was ¼ to ⅝ cent higher.

Prices for the principal grains were as follows:

SOUTHERN CHURCHMEN URGE TEXTILE SURVEY

Georgia Baptist Social Service Body Sees New Problems in Coming of the Mills.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Nov. 21 (AP).—Recommendation that Congress authorize President Hoover to appoint a "national industrial commission to make a thorough and scientific study of the textile industry of the country, North and South," was made in a report prepared for submission to the Georgia Baptist Convention here today by the convention's Social Service Commission.

The report said of the textile situation:

"The coming of these industries to the South brings us face to face with new problems. The cotton farmer has almost altogether used negro tenant labor, who have farmed on shares. The cash wage was negligible. Settlement was made at the end of the year. In the mountains and in the foothills lived many white people who saw very little money in the course of the year.

"To these the cotton mills proved peculiarly attractive. It meant ready money in wages. And so they went to work in the textile mills in great numbers and for low pay.

"Everybody is rejoiced to see these evidences of expanding business in the Southeast. However, to thoughtful people there is no satisfaction in the self-announced statement that these mills are coming because the South offers 'low wages and docile labor.' Indeed, this is humiliating rather than pleasing.

"A few years ago we Southerners were bitterly denouncing New England cotton mills for the way they treated their labor. Now that some of these mills are coming South, we find some of our Southern statesmen angrily defending these same practices in the South.

"Then they denounced high protective tariff of New England industries; now they are clamoring for that same protection for Southern mills.

"Surely dollars make us all do alike."

COTTON GINNINGS RUN ABOVE LAST TWO YEARS

Total Now 11,898,308 Bales—Exceeded in 2 Post-War Years.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—Cotton ginned prior to Nov. 14 totaled 11,898,308 running bales, counting 412,412 round bales as half bales and excluding linters. In announcing the ginnings the Census Bureau reported they compare with 11,820,688 running bales, including 444,440 half bales, to that date last year and 10,894,914, and 401,020 in 1927.

Ginning returns to Nov. 14 by States compare as follows with Nov. 1, 1929, and Nov. 14, 1928:

CHICAGO ARCHITECTURE IS PRAISED BY HOOD

He Says Average Building in Michigan Av. Is Superior to That in Fifth Avenue Here.

Raymond M. Hood, president of the Architectural League of New York, expressed the opinion last night at a dinner at the Architectural League, 115 East Fortieth Street, that the average building in Michigan Avenue, Chicago, "was better than the buildings in either Fifth or Madison Avenue."

In lauding the development of architecture in Chicago, Mr. Hood said:

"I have seen building after building out there that has a freshness, vigor and an architectural solidity that startled me, all the more so because there was no particular family resemblance to our work in New York.

"As for character, they are American from top to bottom, and American of the twentieth century. They seemed more like the buildings that we should live in than do our own. And the men who are designing them do not seem to be particularly worried as to whether they are in touch with the latest style in New York. These buildings give me the impression that the architects out there buckle down to their problem without keeping a weather eye or a weather ear out for what people are saying about them, and the result is that the buildings are good.

"We architects here in New York are more smug and complacent than any of us like to admit. We turn to Europe for inspiration, but rarely look toward the West, save to see to what extent our influence is spreading, and with a casual curiosity as to whether there may be something in the future in culture as strong as our own. New York has the same more or less amused and patronizing interest in Chicago that Paris and London have always had in New York."

Last night's dinner opened the first of a series of one-man exhibitions to show a cross-section of the work of living American architects, decorative painters, and sculptors. The guests of honor were John A. Holabird and John W. Root of Chicago.

WINDOW CLEANERS SPLIT OVER STRIKE

Three-Year Contract Signed by 700 Workers, but 'Left Wing' Group Will Stay Out.

After conducting a strike for five weeks, the Window Cleaners' Protective Union, Local 8, has been split with the result that the faction affiliated with the American Federation of Labor signed an agreement with the employers yesterday and the Left Wing group declared its intention to continue the walkout and extend it to all building service workers.

Both groups are retaining the name of the old union and claim its identity. William Karlin, attorney for the federation group, announced that a three-year contract has been signed by the Window Cleaners' Protective Association, Inc., which had complained that the strike leaders were Communists and that it was impossible to deal with them. The agreement gave up the strikers' demand of a five-day week, obtained an increase in wages of $3 and the closed shop, according to Mr. Karlin.

The split occurred last Monday. Officials of the International Building Service Employes' Union arrived from Chicago to look over the local situation on Saturday.

At a meeting of the strikers on Monday, one of the walking delegates urged federation leadership and called on the strikers to leave the old leadership, typified by Harry Feinstein, secretary of the union.

According to a member of Mr. Feinstein's group about half the strikers, or about 700 men, followed the call and a meeting was held on Tuesday, at which the officials were deposed and a new federation leadership installed.

AUTO LIABILITY LAW IN JERSEY CLARIFIED

Dill Explains Proof of Ability to Pay Damages Cannot Be Asked by Magistrates.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Motor Vehicles Commissioner Dill made clear today to magistrates and policemen that it is not their function to enforce the new financial responsibility law relating to automobile owners and drivers figuring in accidents.

Confusion has been created by some magistrates who have attempted to administer the act, which went into effect last Friday. To clarify the situation, Commissioner Dill explained that the enforcement is vested solely with the State Motor Vehicle Department.

The law requires that car owners or drivers involved in mishaps causing death, injury or property damages of $100 shall show proof of financial responsibility, either by insurance or bond, as a condition to continuance of their car registrations and driving licenses. Drunken or reckless driving, excessive speeding, operation of an automobile in improper condition and a variety of other offenses are likewise listed as sufficient cause for demanding such proofs.

SAYS LOST ENERGY DOOMS MACHINE AGE

CRITICAL OF OUR CULTURE

Asserts Industrial Improvidence Is Driving Civilization Backward—Gives It Century More.

One hundred years more will see the doom of the machine age if the consumption of coal and oil is continued at the present increasing ratio, General William Barclay Parsons, engineer and chairman of the board of trustees of Columbia University, predicted yesterday in an address at the McMillin Academic Theatre at Columbia.

Elimination of wasted power and more extensive development of water power, he added, could postpone only temporarily the day when "our boasted mechanical culture" would be forced into extinction. General Parsons, subway builder and commander of the Eleventh Engineers during the World War, asserted that unless the engineer discovered new sources of power, nothing could avert the crisis.

"Will our successors raise fuel by intensive growth?" he asked. "Will they draw from the central heat of the earth? Or will they secure heat that is contained in the sun's rays? The heat in the sun that falls on the waste desert spaces is sufficient to meet industrial demands, but it will have little practical value until some way is found to store the intent energy."

Curtailment of the enormous power required to operate the world's machines, General Parsons said, would drive us back toward the darkness of the Middle Ages. He belittled our "condition of culture," which, he said, was "frequently and erroneously referred to as civilization," and pointed out that it depended entirely for its existence on power.

"The adventures of men like Byrd," the General concluded, "may disclose unsuspected deposits in the inhospitable regions within the Arctic or Antarctic Circle, but such discoveries, if made, and if the deposits can be utilized, will but postpone the day of reckoning.

"As the pressure of shortage comes to be acutely felt, we of this generation will be blamed by the generations to come for squandering the most precious of nature's gifts. In the most efficient power-generating plants we are utilizing less than one-quarter of the heat units contained in the fuel, the remainder going up the chimney or being otherwise lost."

FRUIT PRIZES AWARDED AT JERSEY CONVENTION

State Horticultural Society Hears Prediction of Potato Price Cut by Government Expert.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 21.—The convention of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society was marked today by the award of prizes for fancy fruit and products in the exhibit at the Beach Casino. The silver trophy offered by E. H. Melching, head of the society, for the amateur or new exhibitor winning the largest number of first prizes was awarded to E. O. Howell Jr. of Cape May Court House.

A reduction in the price of domestic potatoes next year, provided the yield is normal, was predicted by Dr. W. J. Spillman, principal economist for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

In the commercial displays of apples former State Senator Emmor Roberts of Moorestown won first place. In the four single-layer trays of Greenings on display, Lemuel Black of Hightstown took first place. The Manual Training School for Bordentown captured first place for a plate display of Jonathans. In the amateur apple display the first-place award went to John Hankinson for five specimens of Baldwins.

Mr. Roberts won the silver sweepstakes trophy for the best twenty-five apples in the country displays for that class. In the class for vegetables in boxes first prize was won by the Cumberland County Vegetable Growers' Association.

A summary of the awards for the best county exhibits of twenty-five apples follows:

ATLANTIC COUNTY—William P. Schiermer; Egg Harbor, first with Rome Beauty.

BURLINGTON COUNTY—Emmor Roberts, Moorestown, first with Rome; Manual Training School, Bordentown, second with Grimes.

CAMDEN—Preston Roberts, Moorestown, first with Golden Delicious; Lester Collins, Moorestown, second with Delicious.

CAPE MAY—Theodore Grotter, Dennisville, first with Grimes; B. Howell Jr., Cape May Court House, second with Stayman.

GLOUCESTER—Locust Grove Farm, Westville, first with Rome; Woodvale Fruit Farm, Mullica Hill, second with Northern Spy.

MERCER—Lemuel Black, Hightstown, first with Grimes.

MIDDLESEX—Fred H. Carlson, Cranbury first, with Delicious.

MONMOUTH—J. P. Hulsart & Sons, Manasquan, first with MacIntosh; Old Cherry Tree Farm, Middletown, second with Stayman.

MORRIS—A. D. Tunis, New Vernon, first with Delicious.

SUSSEX—Insley Brothers, Newton, first with R. I. Greening.

UNION—Robert S. Holt, Summit, first with King.

DELAY SUBWAY STRIKE CALL

Union Leaders Await Action on Offer of Men to Arbitrate.

With their offer to arbitrate the demands of the strikers on two sections of subway construction in the Bronx apparently unheeded, leaders of the walk-out continued to mark time yesterday and reiterated their reluctance to call a city-wide strike unless compelled to do so by the contractors' attitude.

"They try to force us into a strike," John McPartlan secretary of the Compressed Air Workers' Union declared. "We do not wish to cause any public inconvenience, but, if necessary, we shall call a strike of all the workers."

State mediators did not get in touch with the two contractors, Lyons-Slattery, Inc., and Di Marco & Reimann, Inc., to sound them out on their attitude toward the arbitration offer, but expect to today. They were waiting to see what the reaction to the offer would be.

An official of the Lyons-Slattery concern said he was not interested, as he had at work more men than he had ever before employed on the job.

Mr. McPartlan complained that the police continued to arrest pickets, who were released later because no specific charges were made.

Lower Money Rate Will Help.

The increasing amount of money available for business purposes, as reflected in yesterday's further cut in commercial paper rates, was looked on here as an important factor in bringing trade back to normalcy. Although the volume of money to be loaned indicated that "best-name" borrowers were none too active at the moment, the position was taken that with borrowing for business purposes relatively easy, the psychological effect would be marked. Small merchants, in particular, had become so accustomed to difficulty in financing that many of them were content to limit their activities largely to what they could do on their own capital. The change in the money situation is expected to permit considerable expansion.

Sees No Tariff Before Spring.

The present tariff law will continue in effect until next Spring, Peter Fletcher of Lamb, Finley & Co., president of the National Council of American Importers and Traders, Inc., told the directors and group chairmen of that organization at their luncheon meeting yesterday. Mr. Fletcher pointed out that detailed discussion of the new rates on the floor of the Senate will delay action on the proposed new tariff bill when it comes up for consideration in the regular session of Congress. C. T. Riotte, chairman of the council's customs committee, reported that importers are being canvassed by his committee for data on their overhead, selling and general expenses, to refute claims that importers make huge profits.

Select Spring Millinery Hues.

Twenty-four colors for the Spring and Summer (1930) millinery seasons have been chosen by the millinery color conference committee in cooperation with the Textile Color Card Association it was announced yesterday. Blues are featured in three new tones, comprising Duomo, a dark shade of purple cast; linen and fleet blue, the last a bright navy. Aquatone is a new aquamarine. Two greens are stressed, one bluish and the other having a yellow tinge. For sports hats yellows are outstanding. The beige-brown range is prominent. Soft pinks are highlighted for resort wear, particularly rose mist and haze pink. Purples and reds are also well represented.

Cancellations Hit Furniture Trade.

Manufacturers of furniture are puzzled by the large number of cancellations which have reached them from retailers since the crash in the stock market. They find the action of their customers difficult to explain in view of the fact that reports on retail sales of furniture during the last four weeks show the volume to be ahead of the same period last year by from 2 to 3 per cent. Buyers of furniture for stores here admit these gains. The general impression at present is that the canceled orders will be reinstated after retailers realize that their first fears of a loss in business are unjustified.

Boys' Clothing Is Active.

Activity in boys' clothing has been well sustained during the past weeks, particularly in the case of outer garments. Leather windbreakers, jackets and wool and camel's hair overcoats have done particularly well. Delivery conditions on leather merchandise continue tight and prices are firm. The increase in the sale of camel's hair garments has been the feature of the overcoat business. The call for suits has been fair and stresses styles with both knickers and long trousers. Much of the buying lately has been for sales purposes and has emphasized price.

Garment Council to Meet.

Several prominent merchandise men will be called into conference with Executive Director John Hahn of the Garment Retailers of America within the next few days to set a date for the first meeting of the style and merchandise council that is being organized to work in conjunction with the board of directors in association matters, Mr. Hahn announced yesterday. The council, which it is planned to have meet monthly, will include a number of representative merchandisers from all parts of the country. Problems bearing on changes in style, new retailing methods, &c., will be discussed in detail and the results forwarded to the general membership for their guidance.

Retailers Ordering Ahead.

Decreasing hand-to-mouth buying on the part of retailers has not yet been seen in the local garment trades to any great extent, but there is little question that buyers are showing more willingness to anticipate their needs than they have for some time. In other words, while they are not increasing the size of their orders materially they are giving manufacturers a chance to make up goods against them. This is enabling manufacturers to turn out better merchandise. One factor in this is the fewer returns that result from advance buying and the consequent ability of the manufacturers to put into their garments the resultant savings. Under the piecemeal buying scheme the losses on returns had to be figured into production costs.

Trading Is Quiet in Silks.

The stock market developments have tended to emphasize the comparative inactivity in the silk trade in the between-seasons period. The cutters-up have adopted a more cautious attitude with respect to piece-goods commitments, this hampering the expansion of orders for resort and Spring silks. Retailers are in the market for seasonal goods for sales purposes and have been operating in a fair way on merchandise available at concessions. The mills have shown a tendency to await further developments for Spring, but leading executives in the trade yesterday voiced the opinion that any curtailment will be moderate and must be viewed in the light of recent record silk consumption.

Strange Heads Paper Board Group.

Concluding their annual meeting at the Hotel Commodore yesterday, the Paper Board Industries Association elected Hugh Strange of the John S. Strange Paper Company, Menasha, Wis., as president, to succeed J. J. Brossard of Fort Wayne, Ind. A committee to supervise the application of the industry's trade practice rules was named at the meeting. Resolutions advocating a continuance of the present programs for the development of new uses and extension of present uses of paper board and paper boxes were adopted. A dinner last night at which the retiring president presided was attended by more than 150 members of the organization.

Gray Goods Show Little Change.

Little change was shown in the local gray goods market yesterday, either in the volume of sales or in prices. Additional printcloth trading was done on the bases of 6¾ cents for 38½-inch 60-48s and 7½ cents for 36½-inch 64-60s. Sheeting sales again included 40-inch 2.85s at 11¼ cents and 37-inch 48-square, four-yard goods at 8¼ cents. Drills were dull, with asking prices based on 8¼ to 8¾ cents for 27-inch 3.95s. Eastern makes of 37½-inch 4.37-yard sateens were sold at 11 cents, but the rest of the market was without interest.

DOUBTS RUBBER SALE PLAN.

F. R. Henderson Sees Obstacles to British Group Idea.

While recommendations of the Rubber Growers Association of London for group selling of rubber might be theoretically practicable, there was an almost insurmountable obstacle to their being successfully carried out, said F. R. Henderson, president of the Rubber Exchange of New York, yesterday. Rubber prices, he added, would eventually find their true economic level without artificial aid.

"Stocks of rubber are fairly normal, considering requirements," said Mr. Henderson. "Rubber is one of the world's necessities and its rate of consumption is steadily increasing. The question of what is a fair price for crude rubber will be determined by economic laws if we will only let it alone. There has been forced selling of rubber by those who could no longer afford to carry it, but when the general financial situation rights itself, as it will soon, rubber will be looked at more sanely."

RUBBER FUTURES DECLINE.

Prices Down 30 to 40 Points Here —London and Singapore Dull.

Rubber futures on the Rubber Exchange of New York closed 30 to 40 points lower yesterday. Sales aggregated 645 lots, or 1,620 long tons.

GIRLS' CLUBS IN NEW HOME.

League Occupies Rooms at Hotel Erected Under Its Auspices.

The New York League of Girls' Clubs moved this week into its new headquarters at the Sutton apartment hotel for women, 326 East Fifty-sixth Street, erected under the auspices of the league.

For the first time in its history the organization of 2,000 business women, whose average weekly salary is $30, will have a fully rounded schedule of athletic, educational and social events, made possible by its spacious new quarters, it was announced yesterday. Swimming, dancing, gymnastics, golf, horseback riding and bowling are available.

Classes to be formed include investments, history, art, dramatics, music appreciation, sex hygiene and mental hygiene. Social activities include sight-seeing trips, Sunday teas, dances and bridge parties. Plays will be produced in the theatre, seating 200 persons. A choral group also will be formed.

LATEST MORTGAGES FILED.

$1,341,500 Additional Loan Advanced on West Side Corner.

The 55 Central Park West Corporation, Henry H. Goodwin, president, borrowed $1,341,500 additional from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company on the south corner of Central Park West and Sixty-sixth Street, 133 by 125 feet, making a total loan of $1,800,000 given by the insurance company on the premises, due March 1, 1945, at 6 per cent until the new building is completed on the property, and 5½ per cent thereafter. The loan is to be amortized at the rate of $18,000 semiannually.

Burton S. Castles gave a mortgage for $75,000, due in five years at 6 per cent, to the Jarvie Commonwealth Fund on 33 West Forty-seventh Street.

The Jarvie Commonweal Fund also loaned $129,000, due in five years, at 6 per cent, to the Wako Company, Ltd., Burton S. Castles, president, on 18 East Fifty-fourth Street, 23 by 100 feet.

WANT COFFEE DUTY LIFTED.

Guatemalan Groups Ask Their Government to Drop Export Tax.

GUATEMALA CITY, Nov. 21 (AP).—The drop in the price of coffee, which recently caused general depression in Brazil, is now affecting the situation of the Guatemalan coffee growers.

To prevent a possible crisis the growers have sent a request to President Lazaro Chacon, asking that the present duty on coffee exports be suppressed. The Confederation of Agricultural Societies of the country is supporting the request.

College Italian Clubs to Meet.

A joint meeting of the Circolo Italiano, its annex branches and the Casa Italiana will be held today at the clubrooms of the Casa Italiana at Amsterdam Avenue and 117th Street. An original play, "The Uncle From America," written in Italian by the students of Hunter College will be given, followed by music and dancing. The guests will be the Italian clubs of the College of the City of New York, Columbia University and Intercollegiate Association.

ANNALIST WEEKLY INDEX.

Commodity Prices Advance a Little After Continued Decline.

The Annalist weekly index of wholesale commodity prices stands at 141.5, an increase of 0.4 point from last week (141.1 revised) and compares with 148.0 last year at this time. With only slight interruptions, the index has been falling steadily since July and this week's rise, amounting to 0.27 per cent, seems too small to justify the conclusion that a price reversal has set in. Especially does the rise seem small when it is considered that the drop last week alone was 1.6 per cent, or almost seven times this week's rise.

The Annalist weekly index of wholesale commodity prices follows:

(1913—100)

	Nov. 19, 1929.	Nov. 12, 1929.	Nov. 20, 1928.

REVIEW OF THE DAY IN REALTY MARKET

New York Central Extends Holdings for Its West Side Improvement.

BUILDERS ADD TO FLAT SITE

Fishmans Buy Brownstone House in East Seventy-ninth Street for Apartment—Other Deals.

Real estate trading in Manhattan yesterday was featured by transactions in which owners extended their holdings with the purchase of additional sites. The New York Central was a leading buyer again, having acquired more land in connection with its west side improvement plan. Further purchases were made by present owners in such widely scattered sections as Yorkville and the lower end of Manhattan.

A large apartment house in the west Bronx was sold by the Yorktown Associates, while the Schulte interests figured in another Brooklyn deal with the sale of a Bay Ridge blockfront for a six-story apartment house. This was the second Schulte contract of the week in the borough.

Through its New York State Realty and Terminal Company, a subsidiary, the New York Central Railroad bought from Sidney Forscher 512 West Forty-ninth Street, from Margaret A. Moore, 561 West Fifty-seventh Street, and from Leo Welinsky the property at 517 West Fifty-second Street. Brown, Wheelock: Harris, Vought & Co., were the brokers.

The five-story tenement at 378 West Twelfth Street, 22 by 80 feet, was purchased by the New York Central from Giuseppe Castraghi, through the Cruikshank Company. The house adjoins corner property owned by the railroad. The seller was represented by the J. D. Robilotto Company, which sold the tenement to Mr. Castraghi some years ago.

As part of its program for the erection of a fifteen-story and penthouse apartment building, the Tishman Realty and Construction Company bought the five-story brownstone residence at 172 East Seventy-ninth Street from Carrie Oppenheimer. This was the first sale of the property in twenty-seven years.

The Tishmans now have a plot fronting 206 feet on East Seventy-ninth Street and 102 feet on Third Avenue, a land area of 21,000 square feet. Douglas L. Elliman & Co. negotiated the purchase of the Oppenheimer house.

A Harlem blockfront came into new ownership with the sale by George J. Gould of the two five-story apartment buildings at 1,759 to 1,773 Lexington Avenue, occupying the entire frontage on the east side of the avenue from 109th to 110th Street. The plot is 25 by 200 feet. The Terozen Realty Corporation, represented by Arthur Sloman, is the new owner. The downtown deal in which the buyer extended his holdings was made by Elias A. Cohen, who bought the five-story structure at 72 Front Street, 19 by 35 feet, from the American Trading Company. Cammann & Voorhees and the firm of Leonard J. Carpenter were the brokers. Earlier in the week Mr. Cohen acquired the adjoining parcel at 74, through Cammann & Voorhees. He has a plot 38 by 35 feet adjoining the southwest corner of Old Slip.

A five-story building at 57 Walker Street, between Broadway and Church Street, was sold by the Fulton-Pearl Real Estate Corporation to Daniel S. Farrell. Robert F. Bonsall was the broker.

The Washington Square Realty Corporation bought the building at 50 West Fourth Street, 24 by 74 feet, through Peppe & Brother, brokers. This is a three-story front and two-story rear building.

By a sale contract recorded yesterday the Kunst Art Foundries, Inc., Anton Kunst, president, has agreed to sell to the Hor-O-lite Sign Corporation, Isaac Horowitz, president, the premises at 503 and 505 East Seventy-sixth Street, occupying a plot of fifty feet front just east of York Avenue. The price is $85,000 and title will pass on Jan. 24, 1930. It is agreed that on the delivery of the deed the purchaser will execute to the seller a lease of the premises for two years at the annual rental of $5,100.

BUSINESS LEASES.

Leases for business purposes announced yesterday included the following:

Correo, stores in 197 Grand Street; London Shoe Company, Inc., store in 36 East 149th Street, through J. Jaki. Johnson Kind's Haberdashery, Inc., store in 838 Third Avenue; Charles F. Noyes Company, broker.

Dexter Shirt Company, fourth floor in 72 Fifth Avenue; J. J. Stark Company, in 404 Fourth Avenue; Cartisano & Linnekin, brokers.

Louis Saffer & Co., men's clothing, second floor in 105-07 Fifth Avenue; arranged for Isaac Hoffman Estates by Frederick Fox & Co.

Livingston & Co., stock brokers, second floor space in 12 East Forty-sixth Street; W. Wuppermann, agent for Lagomarsino Interiors, in 14 East Forty-sixth Street; J. Broder Fur Company, Inc., and Elodie M. Dressmaking, in same building; Douglas L. Elliman & Co., brokers.

United States Naturalization Service, renewal of lease of third and fourth floors in 36-38 Nassau Street; Bolivian Panama Hat Company, floor in 562-64 Broadway; Dvorkin & Freidman, floor in 133-35 West Nineteenth Street; Adams & Co., brokers.

Lane Chuck Fing leased from the 356 Seventh Avenue Corporation, Abraham Jacobs, president, the second floor in 356 Seventh Avenue, for use as a restaurant, for five years from Oct. 15, 1929, the rent to be $600 a year.

The building at 406 West Forty-second Street, 50 by 99 feet, was leased by Isidor Frank to Louis Hochwald, to be used as a poultry store from Dec. 1, 1929, to Sept. 30, 1935, the annual rental being $4,000. Chahman's Sons, also, obtained from August Schierich an extension of a lease of the store at 517 West 179th Street for two years from Oct. 1, 1929, the rent to be $600 a year.

A lease of the apartments in 2,370-72 Broadway, consisting of forty-eight rooms, for 12a years and 7½ months, from Nov. 1, 1929, to April 30, 1942, has been sold by William J. Romer, has been sold by him to Joseph Pagano.

As trustee of William Waldorf Astor, the Bowery Loan & Trust Company leased to 1181 Lexington Corporation, for use in its furniture business, the cellarty store, basement and first floor in 27-29 West Thirty-third Street, for a term of three years from May 1, 1927, the rental being $21,000 per annum. The lease provides that if the lessor sells the premises the lease may be terminated upon one year's notice and in such case the lessor will pay to the lessee $50 for each month of the unexpired term.

LEASEHOLDS LISTED.

Manhattan Properties Recorded Under New Control.

Madeline S. Waxman has leased from Dr. Robert H. Fowler the three-story dwelling at 147 East Sixty-second Street, 95 feet from Lexington Avenue. The Houghton Company acted as broker.

The premises at 216-220 East Fifty-sixth Street, a plot 75 by 100 feet, have been conditionally leased by the Binyon Realty Company, Inc., Jacob Glass, president, to the St. Regis Garage, Inc., of which D. G. Black is president, for a term beginning when the occupancy certificate is issued and ending on May 1, 1942. The rental will be $38,000 for the first year, $40,500 annually for the next four years, $41,000 for the next five years, and $42,000 for the remainder of the term, in addition to taxes, &c. This lease is conditional upon the changing of the zoning law whereby a permit may be granted for the erection of a garage on this property which shall be six stories high. At the expiration of the lease the lessee has the option to renew for ten years at the annual net rental of $42,000.

The twenty-one-year lease of 1,428 St. Nicholas Avenue, 20 by 100 feet, between 181st and 182d Streets, held by Julius Roodman, has been assigned by him to the J. R. Cafeteria, Inc. The property is owned by Helen A. Robertson and two other members of her family.

The property at 70 West Ninety-fifth Street was leased for five years from Oct. 1, 1929, by Charles Jonas to Napoleon and Maria Monette, the rent being $4,500 for the first year and $4,650 annually thereafter. The lessees have sold this lease to Leopold Lenz.

James F. Meehan has sold his lease of 128 East Eighty-sixth Street to the 126 East Eighty-sixth Street Corporation.

Brown, Wheelock: Harris, Vought & Co. leased the building at 200 West Houston Street for thirteen years to the Ehrmann Strauss Co., Inc.

BRONX PROPERTIES SOLD.

Yorktown Associates Dispose of West 182d Street Flat.

The five-and-one-half-story apartment house at 10 West 182d Street, in the West Bronx, was sold by the Yorktown Associates, Inc., represented by J. Tobias Goldberg. The house accommodates forty-six families and is on a plot 100 by 100 feet. It was held at $225,000, according to the sellers.

An investor bought from the estate of Clara Schmidt the four-story apartment house at 1,210 Franklin Avenue, near 168th Street. The Julius Trattner Company acted as broker in the sale of the property.

To Alter Times Square Hotel.

Plans for altering the fourteen-story Times Square Hotel at the northeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-third Street were filed with the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings yesterday by L. Scacchetti, architect, who estimates the cost at $25,000. According to an official of the Manger chain, which operates the hotel, the alterations involve no exterior building and may not be undertaken immediately.

Workers on News Building Honored.

Craftsman certificates and gold buttons were awarded yesterday to eighteen mechanics selected for outstanding work on the thirty-six-story News Buildings at 220 East Forty-second Street. The awards were made at the building by William O. Ludlow of the New York Building Congress. John Mead Howells and Raymond Hood are architects of the structure.

West Eighth Street Sale Is Negotiated by Cable

In a deal negotiated and completed wholly by cable, the five-story store and apartment building at 47 West Eighth Street has been sold by Albert Brushaber to an investor. The plot, 23 by 93.11 feet, is between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. Mr. Brushaber is now touring Europe.

The block is becoming a centre for stores and specialty shops catering to the residential trade around Washington Square, according to R. Telfair Smith, Inc., the broker.

BROOKLYN TRADING.

Schulte Company Sells Bay Ridge Site for New Flat.

The Schulte Realty Company sold to the Mirror Realty Corporation 4,304-4,344 Fifth Avenue, comprising the entire blockfront on the south side of the avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Street, in the Bay Ridge section. The property is 200 by 100 feet and is improved with a store and theatre building, which the buyer plans to demolish for a six-story apartment house.

The proposed improvement will be made at the expiration of existing leases. This was the second Brooklyn deal by the Schulte interests this week, the company having announced on Wednesday its purchase of 352 to 356 Flatbush Avenue Extension from the Mirror Realty Corporation. Tankoos, Smith & Co. were the brokers in both transactions.

The property at 861 to 863 Broadway, corner of Locust Street, was sold by Nathan Stern, broker, to a client of Wolfson & Sand, attorneys, who resold the property to Anfuso Brothers for a furniture store. Mr. Stern and Fenwick B. Small negotiated the resale.

BIG PARK AV. LOAN PLACED.

Marcus Brown Gets $1,600,000 for Twenty-Story Flat.

The Marcus Brown Construction Company has obtained through Lawrence, Blake & Jewell, Inc., mortgage brokers, a building loan of $1,600,000 on the twenty-story apartment house under construction at the northwest corner of Park Avenue and Ninetieth Street, 100 by 141 feet. Construction work was started recently on the building, which is to have duplex and some triplex suites. About one-third of the apartments have been rented from the plans. The Marcus Brown Construction Company contorls the entire blockfront, having completed a new building on the adjoining southwest corner of Park Avenue and Ninety-first Street last year.

Other loans announced yesterday were:

Manhattan.

Six-story apartment house at 4,145 Broadway, northwest corner of 178th Street, $325,000 first mortgage with interest at 6 per cent for three years for Constantin Wegner; Quinlan & Leland, brokers.

MERCHANT MARINE RECEIVES 17 CADETS

Diplomas Presented by Rear Admiral de Steiguer at Their Graduation.

HONOR PRIZES AWARDED

Maritime Association President in Address, Points to Opportunity to Build Nation's Trade.

Seventeen cadets of the New York State Merchant Marine Academy were graduated yesterday afternoon at exercises at the Maritime Exchange Building, 78 Broad Street, in the presence of relatives and friends, alumni and about fifty undergraduates of the schoolship Newport, who attended in a body. It was the first class to be graduated since the name of the school was altered from the New York State Nautical School.

Diplomas were presented by Rear Admiral Louis R. de Steiguer, commandant of the Third Naval District, and the address to the graduates was delivered by Captain F. F. Donnelly, marine superintendent of the Isthmian Steamship Lines. Fifteen of the graduates were in the deck department and two in the engineering department.

In an address of welcome John Dowd, president of the Maritime Association of New York, said:

"I would call your attention to the fact that steps are under way for the loan by the United States Government of large sums of money to various steamship companies in order to permit them to build vessels for operation in many trades. You are just in time to participate in the rewards which will, no doubt, accrue to officers in the American merchant marine as a result of the increase in American shipping which is imminent.

"Those who are willing to give their best in courage and loyalty in their service to American shipping will, I believe, find abundant opportunities, for it is quite apparent that the American flag is on the seas to stay and you will be among the chosen ones to do your part in carrying this emblem to the various ports of the world."

The Rev. Dr. George Sidney Webster, secretary of the American Seamen's Friend Society, delivered the invocation and later presented a copy of the Scriptures to each of the graduates. Ralph H. Stever, president of the Seamen's Bank for Savings, presented a bank book with a credit of $1 to each graduate, in accordance with a custom of the bank.

A sextant was awarded to Edward F. Carter, first honor graduate in the deck department, by the Maritime Association, and a gold watch to Lowney D. Young, first honor graduate in the engineering department. These awards were made by the Colonial Dames of the State of New York. Charles H. Potter and Mrs. Robert Huda Neilson made the presentations. A binocular was awarded to Gordon F. Kariger for activity aloft, this being the J. C. Hatzel, '77, memorial prize. Mrs. Sherman B. Wetmore made the presentation. The Alumni Association silver medal for proficiency in navigation was awarded to Herbert T. Claybault by A. M. Tode, president of the association. Captain Nathaniel L. Cullin, chairman of the board of visitors, presided.

The graduates in the deck department were:

Attilio A. Vichio	Edward F. Carter
Louis A. Engel	Warren H. Drury
Herman Leibbrandt	John J. Gillen
Svend J. Feuiecke	Gordon F. Kariger
John B. MacKenzie	Arthur A. Wypler
Richard J. Leighton	Frank M. Benedy
Herbert C. Claybault	George T. Thoresen
George H. Pruss

The graduates of the engineering department were Lowney D. Young and Gerard A. Caulfield.

ARMY SAVES ON BILLS PAID.

Prompt Settlement Obtains Benefit of Discounts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Through prompt payment of bills the War Department during the fiscal year 1929 obtained the benefits of 99.93 per cent of the maximum commercial discounts collectable and thereby made a saving of $359,890, Major Gen. R. L. Carmichael, chief of finance, announced in his annual report today. By this policy, he added, the business operations of the army are on practically a cash basis.

Audits were conducted on all accounts and records during the year, and General Carmichael placed the estimated value of army property at $2,369,106,765.

The auditing of War Department contracts for the period of America's participation in the World War has been completed, he reported. These numbered approximately 300,000, the total amount due the United States being placed at $70,119,747. The amount recovered is $5,084,096 and the amount canceled is $20,817,618. Accounts totaling $15,662,825 have been referred to the general accounting office and others aggregating $28,805,198 have been referred to the Department of Justice.

WOULD EXTEND BRIDGE WAY

Jersey Commissioners Offer New Plan for Approach at Fort Lee.

A conference of members of the New Jersey State Highway Commission and the Port of New York Authority was held yesterday to consider a proposal to extend the approach to the new Hudson River bridge at Fort Lee 2,000 feet beyond the point previously considered.

A more elaborate traffic plan has been devised for Bergen County since the Port Authority decided to locate the Fort Lee plaza at Lemoine Avenue a year ago. Several State highways converged at Fort Lee and by extending the approach to the bridge a junction with all the State highways could be effected, the engineers pointed out.

It was agreed that the plan now proposed be worked out in detail by the engineers and considered at a later meeting. The New York approach originally fixed at Broadway has been extended to Amsterdam Avenue, the State having agreed to pay the original cost and be reimbursed when revenues reach a fixed figure. A similar plan for the proposed New Jersey extension was suggested yesterday.

8 SHIP WORKMEN FELLED.

Quincy Firemen Rescue Smoke Victims on U. S. S. Northampton.

QUINCY, Mass., Nov. 21 (AP).—Eight workmen aboard the recently launched U. S. S. Northampton were overcome by smoke during a fire in the cruiser's magazine room today and were rescued by members of the city fire department.

The Northampton, which is tied up alongside the fitting dock of the Fore River yards of the Bethlehem Steel Company, was little damaged by the blaze.

CHIMPANZEE BATTLES OCELOT AT PET SHOW

National Exhibition Opens With Impromptu Bout—Pigeon Prizes Awarded.

Angel, the ocelot, a gentle South American wildcat from an apartment house in Jackson Heights, Queens, and Buster, a lively chimpanzee, staged a boxing match at Madison Square Garden yesterday that was one of the impromptu highlights of the opening of the First National Pet Show.

They were posing together encircled by photographers and visitors to the show when Buster started the fracas and a quick succession of blows was interchanged. But none of them was heavy and no damage was done. Miss Helen Spring of 27-20 Eighty-third Street, Jackson Heights, owner of Angel, and the Misses Janet and Katherine Lee, with whom Buster makes his home, separated their pets, explaining that it was "really all in fun."

Other assorted pets that made bows to the public were a camel, a zebra, an elephant, a brown bear, hog deer, black swans, curassows and a pair of European storks.

More than 600 pigeons are on exhibition at the fourth annual show of the Fancy Pigeon Association. Owners who received prizes yesterday were:

Black Bald-Head Tumblers—Three first prizes to E. N. Gackenback of Philadelphia; first prizes to C. Riegrif of Montclair, N. J., and E. Cornwall of East Orange, N. J.

Best White self-Tumbler—First prize to Ray Gross of Philadelphia.

Any Color Beard Tumblers—Two first prizes to E. Himmelberger of Westfield, N. J.

Best Yellow Self-Tumbler—First prize to E. L. Gackenback.

Best White self-Tumbler—First prize to Ray Gross of Philadelphia.

Kings—First prizes to the Three Oak Pigeon Farm, Passaic, N. J.

Silver Kings—First prize to E. Himmelberger.

Racing Homers—Several first prizes each to Herbert Good of Trenton, N. J.; Dr. Dornish of East Orange. Three Oak Pigeon Farm, Fred Knebler of Westfield, N. J.; Meher & Kessler of New York City. Rempert Brothers of Boyertown, Pa., and J. F. Doremus.

The judges included Thomas Ross, government pigeon expert.

The show will be open from 10 A. M. to 10:30 P. M. today and tomorrow. Today the Empire Cat Club opens its fifteenth championship show.

APPROVE 2 JERSEY BRIDGES.

Navigation Interests Favorable to Plans at Army Hearing.

Navigation interests of New York and New Jersey expressed their approval of plans for the construction of two bridges across the Hackensack River between Jersey City and Kearny and across the Passaic River between Kearny and and Newark at a hearing yesterday morning at the Army Building, 39 Whitehall Street. Lieut. Col. Ralph T. Ward, in charge of the Second Army Engineering District, presided, and Colonel William J. Barden, engineer in charge of the North Atlantic division, was present.

The hearing was a formality, plans having been revised to the satisfaction of navigation interests after a first hearing at which several details were condemned as dangerous to shipping.

Among those who spoke in favor of the new plans were;

CAPTAIN NATHANIEL L. CULLEN, secretary of the National Board of Steam Navigation.

LANGDON W. SMITH, secretary of the New York Towboat Exchange.

JAMES C. MAGUIRE Jr. of the Port of New York Authority.

EDWARD J. MURPHY of the New Jersey State Board of Commerce and Navigation.

E. W. WOLMUTH of the Newark Chamber of Commerce.

10 LOCOMOTIVES SHIPPED.

Grace Liner Also Has Last Mail That Will Reach Chile by Christmas.

Ten electric locomotives and 2,400 sacks of Christmas mail were shipped aboard the Grace liner Santa Maria when she sailed yesterday from Pier 43, Brooklyn, for Valparaiso and intermediate ports on the west coast of South America, via the Panama Canal. The ship, it was explained, will be the last large vessel from New York to reach the Chilean port before Christmas day. The locomotives were for use in mining operations and on Andean railways.

Also aboard the vessel were forty tons of New Zealand lamb sent to South America via London and New York because of the lack of refrigerating facilities on boats running directly from New Zealand to South America. An assortment of cooking and hotel equipment consigned to a hotel in Arequipa, Peru, which is reputed to specialize in North American cooking, was stowed aboard.

DENIES SON ENDED HIS LIFE AT HARVARD

Satterthwaite, Architect, Says Inquiry Shows Boy Was Not Suicide by Chloroform.

'DRUGGED IN HIS SLEEP'

Not Hunting a Slayer, He Asserts, but Sought to Clear Son's Name —Boston Police May Act.

After an extended private inquiry into the death last May of his son, Russell Peabody Satterthwaite, 19 years old, a Harvard freshman, who was found dead in his room in Gore Hall, the freshman dormitory, Pennington Satterthwaite, New York architect, declared yesterday that he had established to his own satisfaction that his son had not committed suicide.

"The investigation was not a manhunt," said Mr. Satterthwaite at his home in Short Hills, N. J., "and I have never said that my son was murdered. There is no suspicion in my mind about anybody. My whole interest was in my son's good name and reputation, and I am perfectly satisfied now that the boy is cleared of suicide."

Although Mr. Satterthwaite said he considered his inquiry closed, so far as he was concerned, it was learned that the Boston police are expected to re-open their investigation of the death of the youth as a result of the father's disclosure. Young Satterthwaite was found lying in bed, a chloroform-soaked cloth over his face and a bottle of chloroform on a table.

The Cambridge medical examiner, called into the case by Harvard authorities, agreed with the police that the death was a suicide. There was no autopsy.

"I am convinced that my son was drugged as he slept," Mr. Satterthwaite continued, "and I intend to take no further action in the matter. My lawyers have given up the case and are now settling up the boy's estate.

"There has been a lot of irresponsible talk at Cambridge this Fall about my son's death. I have heard all sorts of stories. One was that he had been drugged by bootleggers, as some boy was said to have been informing the Harvard authorities on the liquor traffic. He may have been drugged by some person with a homicidal mania, but we could find no trace of any such person.

"We didn't start out to find a murderer, but to connect the boy up with that bottle of chloroform and the suicide motive. We definitely proved that he did not buy the bottle.

"It was not a commercial brand of chloroform and is very seldom sold over the counter. The Harvard laboratory searched back in their books, covering a period of three years, but no trace of such a bottle of chloroform could be found. It was extremely unlikely that the boy bought it himself. Our search for the sale of that bottle covered a large part of Northern New Jersey, the vicinity of Short Hills, and New York City.

"This bottle of chloroform was our only clue. The label contained a serial number, but no record of this number was kept. We found out from the manufacturers that only 200 bottles of that serial number had been placed on the market. Of the 175 bottles of that serial number kept in stock by a leading New York drug firm, only twenty-five bottles had been sold in that neighborhood."

In pointing to other circumstances surrounding the death of his son as evidence to support his contention that the boy did not commit suicide, the father asked: "Why should he soak a washcloth with chloroform, arrange his clothing neatly, then bind the soaked cloth about his head with a towel so tightly that the binding would have smothered him without the chloroform? From my own experience in taking anesthetics I should say such an act was impossible. Twenty hours elapsed after his death before the body was discovered."

Mr. Satterthwaite added that all the boy's relatives and friends felt that his name should be cleared and were convinced now that it had been.

EX-OFFICIALS DEFY JERSEY INQUIRY

Mohn and Nine Others Refuse to Testify on Finances in Union City.

FACE CONTEMPT CHARGES

Commissioner Carrick Says He Will Consult Justice Kalisch on Court Proceedings.

Charles A. Mohn, former Republican Mayor of Union City, N. J., six Councilmen of his administration and three other former officials face contempt proceedings before Supreme Court Justice Kalisch as a result of their refusal yesterday to respond to subpoenas requiring them to produce personal bank books and records at the inquiry into Union City's finances covering the 1927-1928 period. What they held to be a failure to issue a proper order for the subpoenas was advanced by the ten men as the reason why they did not appear at the hearing. This reason was stated in ten identic letters sent to Supreme Court Commissioner Carrick.

Commissioner Carrick declared all ten in "flagrant contempt" and announced that he would confer with Supreme Court Justice Kalisch on proceeding to meet the situation.

Two Officials Obey Summons.

Councilmen Alfred J. Singer and Abel Bozzo, hold-overs from the Mohn Administration, were the only officials among the twelve summoned to respond. They produced their check books and offered explanation for the various deposits. Concerning the records of Councilman Bozzo, Harry Braverman, municipal accounts expert, testified that there was no way of checking up entries. The records were required by Aro Gabriel, counsel for the inquiry, in efforts to trace alleged diversions of city funds. Up to this time $1,300,000 has been thus traced as over-expended or illegally paid out by the city during the four years of the Boylan and Mohn Administrations, the bulk of it under Mohn, according to Mr. Gabriel.

Further evidence of alleged illegal transactions by the city was given by Mr. Braverman. He said that in 1923 the City Council had voted to issue a temporary bond for $40,000 for police and fire signals in the southerly end of the city. The bond was issued and in 1929 a permanent bond was voted, the witness said.

Says Work Was Not Done.

"But that improvement was never made," he added. "There was no police and fire signal system built in the southerly end of the city and there appears nothing on the records to indicate that the city plans to build one. The bond was sold to a bank but has no legal standing. The money obtained for it was applied to a deficit in the appropriation for renovation and repair of the City Hall."

Walter Mahnken, city engineer, admitted on the stand that he had certified the payment of a bill for $1,230 for a hanging partition for the assembly chamber in the City Hall which was never built but said that he believed the contractors had allowed the city a credit for the amount. Mr. Braverman later testified that the records showed no such credit.

The non-appearance of the ten former officials delayed the conclusion of the inquiry, which Commissioner Carrick had scheduled for yesterday. He said that the inquiry would be adjourned to a date to be fixed after a conference with Justice Kalisch.
